Then you're a flying fool feel like, ducking under my desk, and when they had all g ne things out the back door and home to Pekisko Creek."

BRIGHTS IT OUT

But Harry Hays couldn't do that.

"You can't have all y friends and most of all y enemies discovering that underneath you are no more than han anybody else. So you stay and do the best you can. And you find that some of the biggest jobs in the country are here in the Government, they won't make you rich by a long shot, but they sure as hell will keep you hopping and busy."

He has found that a cabinet minister gets to hear from the taxpayers in "a variety of ways. You get letters by the bushel. If the guy is sore, you get a telegram. If he is really boiling, you get a phone call, often collect.

And if he is going round the bend with rage, he will be right down to Ottawa, banging on your door.

"And that, let me tell you," beams Harry Hays, "is the soft side, the easy part of a Cabinet Minister's life."

Where the going gets tough is in the Commons, and there as a freshman, he relates, he used to go home nights "with eggs sticking out all over my skull. There were so many at one point that I even thought of naming them, like a mountain range—Mount Dief, Mount Alvin, Mount Douglas."

Now comes the Harry Hays' message.

"But I guess the only way some people learn is to have it beaten into them, and now that some of the lessons I had to learn are beginning to trickle through the bone, I'm not a bit sorry I decided to go into politics. Nor am I ashamed any longer to call myself a politician."

And this final word:

"I am aware that some pretty disreputable images have been coming out of Ottawa during recent months. But business and farming have their scandal sides, too, and that does not make all businessmen, crooks, and all farmers bums."

Letter to the Editor

Replies to Critic Of Flag Editorial

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

In regard to the letter of April 3, 1965 in your newspaper.

The lady who wrote this letter seems to be very prejudiced as she condemns both religions and races for the flag issue. As far as I know religion was never entered the picture. This sort of hate might be at home in the southern States but is rather out of place in such a free country as ours.

The Conservatives brought up the flag issue in the first place so it can hardly be called a "Liberal Pearson Flag." As for waiting five more years we have already waited nearly a hundred years. The Queen has proclaimed this our flag and therefore any loyal subject should support it regardless of his personal opinion.

Since the French have roots in Canada which go back as far as the beginning of the seventeenth century, I think they are entitled to be regarded as Canadians, not just Frenchmen.

The Catholics pay taxes for their own school system as are entitled to it. As for sending our youths to school together, very few adolescents want their complete education in a private school system and generally seem to have very little trouble adjusting from one system to the other.

Since this lady feels so strongly about a single school system fostering a united country, I think her best solution would be to enrol immediately in a night school class in conversational French.

A Canadian.

Travel Investment

Victoria Times

The Federal Government, and perhaps the provinces, could take a great stride toward national unity by investing additional sums of public money in the encouragement of large - scale travel between east and west. We do the same sort of thing in winning friends abroad. We could obtain still better returns by helping Canadians to see and know and understand their neighbors of other provinces.

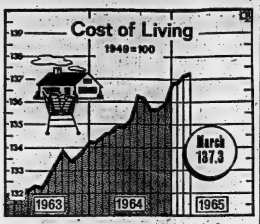
Three Children Perish in Fire At Ennismore

ENNISMORE, Ont. (CP) — Firemen early today recovered the body of one of three children missing after fire destroyed their home late Wednesday night but the body was not immediately identified.

The children are seven-year-old twins Garnet and Gerald Davis and their eight-year-old brother Gary, children of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Davis.

"I heard a bang, my wife yelled and when I ran in their room it was just a flame," Mr. Davis said.

Mr. Davis said the fire started after his wife had lit an oil heater in one of the bedrooms in the five - room log house. He said he gathered his nine children together and told them to get out of the blazing house.



After his third trip into the house, his face covered with a sheet, the "smoke was so thick I couldn't see anymore," Mr. Davis said.

He said he carried out his six-year-old son Guy because the child had a sore foot. His wife and daughters Lynda, 16, and Donna, 13, got out by themselves along with Gary's twin brother, Gordon, and Gail and Gwen, 9, also twins.

Ennismore is 11 miles northwest of Peterborough.

Pleads Guilty To 3 Charges, Week Remand

When provincial police constable Bill Ross arrived at the scene of an accident Sunday on the Shannonville gravel he found a small car on its side and its obviously intoxicated driver ready with a request.

"He asked me if I'd help him get the car back on its wheels so he could get going again," the officer told Magistrate T. Y. Wills this morning.

Earlier he said the man had rolled the same car over on nearby Highway 2 and passing motorists had apparently helped him right it.

"He drove some 2.7 miles with the right rear tire flat until he rolled it again," said the constable.

While driving the man to Belleville, he struck the officer about the face, jeopardizing control of the police cruiser.

Then, "he wanted to give me $20 to let him out on the side of the road. That didn't seem to work so he poked his fingers into my side and said 'This is a gun. If you don't let me out I'll shoot you.'"

Today James Franklin Poste, 47, R.R. 6 Belleville, pleaded guilty to drunk driving, assaulting a police officer and driving while disqualified. He was remanded a week while police ascertained if he had a record.

Uranium Industry Said On Verge of Resurgence

OTTAWA (CP) — The president of Eldorado Mining and Refining Limited said Wednesday the sagging uranium industry may be on the verge of a resurgence that could lead to a shortage of the mineral "in the not-too-distant future."

In a letter to Trade Minister Sharp, accompanying the 1964 annual report of the Crown company, W. M. Gilchrist said "it now appears that a renewal of demand is already on our doorstep and that the quantities involved and the probable urgencies of delivery are much greater than had been contemplated."

He called it "a significant change in the picture." Renewed demand for uranium had not been expected until the 1970s.

"As recently as a year ago our principal worry was how to stimulate enough demand to keep even a few of our uranium mines alive throughout what we thought of as 'the waiting period.' Today, very considerable and quite insistent demands are shaping up for the future and our thoughts are turning towards the possibility of a shortage of supply in the not-too-distant future."

No new contracts have yet been signed, he said in the letter, but negotiations are moving ahead and the amounts of uranium involved are substantial.

"If all the inquiries were to result in actual contracts, their fulfilment would for some years to come take a major part of the output of the mines that are still in production."

Meanwhile, Canadian uranium production continued to sag in 1964. At the end of the year only four mines were producing compared with 25 in 1959. Three stopped producing during the year.

There has not been a significant uranium discovery in Canada since 1956, says the letter, and there is little evidence that any major Canadian mining company has been seriously looking for it.

The report showed sales of $15,620,350 during 1964 compared with $24,230,962 in the previous year. Net income was $1,260,490 — $2,782,888.

A total of 1,837,029 pounds of uranium was produced compared with 1,635,212 in 1963.

TRUDY

"All I asked was, 'How do you spend your leisure time?'—and WHAMMO!"

Cyprus

Rifles in Cyprus has been increased to about 400, while rotation flights returning to Canada reduced the number of Canadian Guards to about 325 from the original 775.

Rotation of the main body of the Canadian force in Cyprus will be complete by mid-April, with the new arrivals expected to stay six months.

Mulherin said he sees both good and bad effects on the Canadians stationed in this eastern Mediterranean trouble spot.

On the credit side, he said, "We've learned a great deal at the junior level.

MADE RESPONSIBLE

"Our corporals and guards men found themselves in positions of responsibility which they wouldn't have enjoyed on normal, military - type operations," he said.

"We all think we learned to be diplomatic.

"The majority of the troops came to appreciate the problems of others and showed some degree of sympathy for those problems, rather than thinking entirely about their own situation."

The Cyprus duty also brought out the abilities of individuals at all levels, Mulherin said. Junior officers and men frequently had come up with decisions on the spot when confronted with trouble between Greek - Cypriot and Turkish-Cypriot elements on the island, in contrast to the situation in Canada, where senior officers handle much of the decision-making process.

But Mulherin also saw disadvantages. His observations echoed those made privately or publicly by almost every senior Canadian officer who has served in Cyprus in the past year.

HAVEN'T TRAINED

"In my opinion, it's not the type of operation that Canadian soldiers have trained for—but only soldiers could perform this operation."

Men trained in the army to fight back are required in Cyprus to use persuasion and patience, instead.

"It's no fun for a soldier," Mulherin commented, describing frustration as the greatest problem confronting a Canadian here.

"And there's no way for a man to let his hair down, except within his own group, because of language, religious and traditional differences with the local population."

That was a polite way of saying that the average soldier more likely would sum up in two words: "No dames." Both Greek - Cypriot and Turkish-Cypriot girls are closely chaperoned and there is a strong tradition here against casual dating.

The net result is that few Canadians can claim to have dined or danced with loocal girls while in Cyprus.

Under these conditions, there's little for Canadians to do with their free time, apart from sports activities and nightly movies in the Canadian encampments.

The United Nations mandate in Cyprus and the method by which it has been interpreted have also led to the frustration of the soldiers' role.

"Restrictions have been imposed on us that don't permit us to carry out our purpose in life as soldiers," Mulherin said, "but that is entirely a political matter and I am not, as a soldier, prepared to discuss it."

NEEDS CLEAR MANDATE

But, he added, "any United Nations force . . . must have a clear mandate. If it's not clear, it only gives it to embarrass the United Nations initially, and then will embarrass either one side or the other of the parties with which the UN force must work."

However, Mulherin had nothing but praise for the discipline of his troops, their morale and their relations with the Cypriots and members of other UN contingents.

"I am proud of them all," he said.

One indication of the passive role played by the UN here has been pointed out by other observers. Although UN troops frequently are confronted with situations where their training would have called for display of force in normal military operations, the Canadian Guards have not fired a single shot during the entire six months here. Persuasion has been their weapon.

Official Road Map Is Now Available

Distribution of the 1965 edition of the Official Road Map, published by the Department of Highways, Ontario, has begun.

Highways Minister Charles S. MacNaughton commented that one of the improvements in this new, completely revised map is the introduction of a special background for each county and district.

New airport symbols are included in the legend for the first time in Ontario where scheduled flights originate.

The outline of built - up suburban areas around many cities and towns is also shown. For the first time an enlarged map of the town of Port Frances is included as a prelude to the expected opening in mid - summer of Highway 11 extension between Fort Frances and Atikokan.

Other features of the map include mileage tables over the most direct routes; distinctive boundaries of provincial parks; and the designation by special symbols of Tourist Reception Centres, St. John Ambulance First Aid Posts and hospitals.

The Highways Department's own Cartographic Section designed the map, as it has done for many years. The cover is a colored aerial protograph, taken by the Department's chief photographer, which shows the first completed portion of the proposed widening to 12 lanes of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway (Toronto By-Pass) one mile easterly from the Avenue Road Interchange.

The new map may be obtained free of charge from day of the 18 district or five regional offices of the Department of Highways, Ontario, and from the Department's chief photographer, which shows the first completed portion of the proposed widening to 12 lanes of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway (Toronto By-Pass) one mile easterly from the Avenue Road Interchange.

The new map may be obtained free of charge from day of the 18 district or five regional offices of the Department of Highways, Ontario, the Head Office of the Department (Downsview P.O.) or the Department of Tourism and Information, Parliament Buildings, Toronto. The map will also be available at any of the Service Centres and Tourist Reception Centres of the Department of Tourism and Information.

Copies of the separate map of the northern and northwestern parts of Ontario are also available from the same addresses.

GENERAL DIES

WEISBADEN, West Germany (AP)—Maj.-Gen. John K. Hester, 48, commander of the U.S. 17th Air Force in West Germany, died today of a brain injury suffered during a parachute jump April 2 near Mannheim.

Navy Officer Thrown Out In Mutiny

SAIGON (AP)—Twenty junior naval officers mutinied against the South Vietnamese navy commander today and threw him out.

The commander, Admiral Chung Tan Cang, and his deputy, Lam Nguon Tanh, disappeared and were believed to be in hiding.

The action against the navy commander was supported by the armed forces high command, the civilian government, and other agencies. U.S. officers also seemed pleased.

The insurrection apparently was led by Cmdr. Khuong Hun Ba, commander of the coastal junk force. He appeared to be a probable replacement for Cang.

With Ba were 19 other naval officers. Between them, they command about 80 per cent of the navy's fighting strength.

There was no shooting. Vietnamese Air Force Skyraiders flew over the Saigon waterfront at the height of the mutiny.

an its military effort in the South and against the North as well.

"We will not be defeated," he said. "We will not grow tired. We will not withdraw either openly or under the cloak of a meaningless agreement."

On Capitol Hill, Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen, heretofore a staunch supporter of the Democratic president's Viet Nam policy, was critical. "Is this another case of where the American trumpets sound retreat?" he asked. "Do you buy freedom for a bumble people? I doubt it."

But the Senate Democratic leader, Mike Mansfield, at times in disagreement with the White House over Viet Nam, said: "The door is open to a bona fide settlement which will permit the people of Viet-Nam to live in peace and freedom. . . ."

PREVIOUSLY HINTED

The president's $1,500,000,000 aid proposal was a follow-up to those hints. The first came from the president March 25 in a general way and was expanded a little last week when Harlan Cleveland, assistant under-secretary of state, envisaged the possibility of a UN role in settling the Viet Nam war.

Prime Minister Pearson had taken the same tack, in a speech several weeks ago in New York and then last Friday at Philadelphia when he elaborated on the president's reference to boosting economic aid.

However, nowhere in the Johnson speech was any indication of American preparedness to accept another Pearson idea —this one for a pause "at the right time" in air attacks on North Viet Nam. Such a pause might give the North elbow room to pave the way to negotiations without military pressure, Pearson suggested.

There have been published reports in the U.S. that the president was nettled by this proposal, largely because of its timing. But informants also have stressed that if the president was nettled, it didn't show in the luncheon discussions held with Pearson at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., last Saturday.

It was also emphatically stressed that published reports aside, the two men had a frank and extensive discussion about Viet Nam which considerably encouraged the prime minister in his view.

The president said air attacks on North Viet Nam, begun Feb. 7, will continue: "It is our best and prayerful judgment that they are a necessary part of the surest road to peace."

But he also said:

"We have no desire to see thousands die in battle—Asians or Americans. We have no desire to devastate that which the people of North Viet Nam have built with toil and sacrifice. We will use our power with restraint and with all the wisdom that we can command."

At this point, the president turned to the deprivation that is commonplace in Southeast Asia:

"Each day these people rise at dawn and struggle through the night to wrestle existence from the soil. They are often wracked by disease, plagued by hunger and death comes at the early age of 40."

WOULD USE UN

And then he unveiled his economic program.

"The United Nations is already actively engaged in development in this area. I would dwell hope that the secretary-general of the United Nations could use the prestige of his great office —and his deep knowledge of Asia—to initiate, as soon as possible, with the countries of the area, a plan for co-operation in increased development.

"For our part I will ask the Congress to join in a $1,000,000,000 American investment in this effort as soon as it is under way. . . ."

He specified the Mekong River project as one aid target. The U.S. to date has contributed about $3,000,000 in a UN program supported in the past by Canada and 19 other countries. The concept involves hydro dams, flood control, industry and farm expansion in an area covering parts of South Viet Nam, Thailand, Cambodia and Laos and settled by about 20,000,000 people.

FEWER DROP OUT

TORONTO (CP)—Fewer students are dropping out of high school, partly because of a broader range of courses, the Ontario department of education reported Tuesday. The department's annual report showed almost 75 per cent of all children between 15 and 19 were still in school last year, compared with 62 per cent in 1960. 51 per cent in 1955 and 41 per cent in 1950.

Shipments in January dropped 3.7 per cent to $2,490,800,000 from $2,642,400,000 in December, but increased by 2.6 per cent over the January 1964 total of $2,427,000,000.

SEES ACTIVE ROLE

John H. Coleman of Montreal, chief general manager of the Royal Bank of Canada, predicts the federal government will play a more important role in Canada's growth this year than last. In an interview in Calgary, Mr. Coleman noted that a "substantial" capital expenditure program is contemplated in Canada this year, and he looked for more government participation than previously.

SUES OIL COMPANY

A Toronto financial consultant filed suit against an oil company in Pittsburgh Wednesday, demanding $17,581,429 for services he contends he performed. The suit was filed in common pleas court by Walter W. Davis against Pennzoil Oil Co. Davis contended that through his help South Penn Oil Co. acquired the assets and goodness of Zapata Petroleum Corp. and Speteo Petroleum Corp. to form Pennzoil in July, 1963.

Bundestag, the lower house of the West German parliament, held a one-day meeting in Berlin.

During the meeting swarms of Soviet jet fighters roared over the city, firing blanks and buzzing the meeting hall. They also buzzed Berlin airports and planes flying in the air corridors.

Most of the 400 Bundestag members were flying through the corridors in commercial airliners today to get back to the West German capital of Bonn. Since the harassment began, the East Germans have refused to let them use the land routes.

An allied spokesman said the ambassadors of Britain, the U.S. and France protested today to the Soviet embassy in Berlin against the restrictions imposed on western access to Berlin.

At the same time, the three allied ambassadors in West Germany protested to the Russian counterparts in East Germany against "irresponsible and reckless" flights of Communist aircraft in the air corridors leading to Berlin and over the city itself during the last three days.

West Germany claimed it has a right to meet the former German capital but the Communists charged this is illegal. They say East Berlin is a separate entity and not a part of the federal republic.

East German authorities have announced that their joint military manoeuvres with the Russians, given as the official reason for interrupting autobahn traffic, will continue until Sunday.

The Bundestag closed its Berlin session Wednesday night after dealing with a number of routine minor bills in a 4½-hour meeting.

Civil Action Heard in County Court

PICTON (Staff) — In County Court Tuesday a civil action involving Perry and Frank Easton vs. Lorraine McGlashing was heard before Judge Strange of Kingston. The action arose as a result of an accident on November 29, 1963. Mr. Glashing's auto hit Easton's vehicle on the right front fender. The McGlashing car travelled over the white line and the driver left the scene of the accident. Driver of the car was found by a license plate left at the scene.

Easton was awarded $550 for value of car damage and court costs. The defendant's counterclaim was dismissed.

In Magistrate's Court Wednesday morning Aberdeen Marcelle pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication in a public place and was sentenced to four days in common jail.

Ronald Zachariah, 17, pleaded guilty to a charge of theft. The youth took wrenches and tools from his father's employer, Mr. McFaul, and he worked for him part time. His case was enlarged for sentence to April 28th.

Eric Miller of Picton appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills charged with possessing no insurance pleaded not guilty. William Lane was counsel for the defence. Miller was found guilty and fined $50 and costs or 14 days, in default.

Paul Neilson, 17, charged with uttering, pleaded guilty and was given a two-year suspended sentence. He is to report on probation once a month to the officer in charge and pay court costs. Neilson had written a cheque for the amount of $45, drawn on the account of David Vangesen.

Paid Rakeoffs On Three Cars Says Alderman

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—Ald. Geoffrey Fosley testified in county court on Wednesday that Thomas Meredith made about $350 in rakeoffs on three cars of coals financed by a credit company Meredith is employed by.

Ald. Fosley has pleaded not guilty to inciting Mr. Meredith on or about Jan. 29 to commit arson.

Ald. Fosley told the court that Meredith suggested an arrangement whereby he would attempt to collar customers for the alderman's used-car business if Ald. Fosley would agree to pay him for it.

The alderman testified that the prices on two cars were therefore upped to $1,595 from $1,195 unknown to the buyer. Another car's price was increased to $995 from $895.

Ald. Fosley said in each instance, Meredith's firm financed the purchases at the marked-up prices. He said he would then accompany Meredith to the bank where Meredith was given the kickback and the rest went to the alderman.

In previous testimony, Meredith denied there were any such deals, admitting only that he occasionally directed a car-hunting customer to the alderman's garage" as a friend."

Under grueling cross-examination from Crown Attorney John Bradshaw, Ald. Fosley admitted he didn't have any record of the alleged car deals since he didn't keep any books.

The alderman said he couldn't afford to hire a qualified accountant.

Former Mayor Of Napanee Visits Council

NAPANEE — Former Mayor, Jas. Herrington, visited Council Chambers Monday night to lodge a complaint in regard to the recent tender issued for a grader, snow plow and accessories. Mr. Herrington asked if anything had been done about the tenders and if not he wished to withdraw his bid as his company felt they could not qualify when the original tender asked for Massey Ferguson specifications. Mr. Marshall answered the questions and replied that the tender called for equipment comparable to Massey Ferguson specifications and that Massey Ferguson engineer had helped set up the facts to go by.

Mr. Herrington asked why this engineer was chosen when he had offered his engineer some time before. Councillor Marshall stated he did not know that the name had appeared on the tender. He also stated that his work is separate from council business and does not wish to be bothered at his place of employment but would be available after hours. Later a tender was accepted from J. L. Roblin and sons for said tractor and attachments at a price of $10,195.78.

A request was received from Mrs. D. Caird for a license to operate a nursing home. Some discussion developed and it was learned that the government has recently brought down new rules and regulations and council has not yet issued any licenses this year until they find out just what the regulations will require. Quite a serious problem is at hand as one nursing home is retiring from operation at the end of the month and some patients might find themselves without a place to go as all homes in Napanee are filled. The Welfare committee to study the situation and report at the special meeting to be held next Monday evening.

PAY INSTALL LIGHTS

Councillor Holmes brought in recommendation to install 17 new mercury vapour lights to be placed from the tracks north to the town limits on Highway 41. It is felt that this would make a fine entrance from the south and would attract attention of travellers on Highway 41.

An Industrial Committee was set up and named as follows: Mr. C. Milligan, Mr. B. Wagar, Mr. J. Keith, Mr. J. Sheppard, Mr. G. Clarke, Mr. D. Reid, Mr. C. Asselstine, Mr. C. Woodcock and Mr. L. Smart. Mr. Smart stated that this committee is very important and has much work to do and receives no remuneration.

A representation from the Chamber of Commerce was heard at council Monday night. They wish to establish a tourist Information booth on Highway 41, preferably, and looked to the council for support. Mayor Smart asked the Chamber of Commerce to get the men and figures together and then the town would provide financial assistance. Mr. D. Forsyth suggested that the Department of Highways be consulted, asking if a sign could be erected on 401 to point out the location of the booth.

Mr. Cooryres from Tweed was present and stated that a 50 percent grant was to be obtained if the project was operated through the Land O Lakes Tourist Association. The tourist business here is one of the largest businesses in the district and statistics point out that the tourist operator receives 17 percent of every dollar spent and the merchants obtain the rest, therefore, everyone benefits.

Group Forms Association For Retarded

NAPANEE — A group of interested citizens met Tuesday evening to establish the new Lennox and Addington Association for the Mentally Retarded.

Mr. Peter Gomery was the guest speaker from the provincial organization, who spoke on the need for community residential facilities, in order that the retarded children could be helped while at home as 40 percent of retarded cases should not be in hospital schools. Mr. Gomery suggested the organization could begin its work by starting pre-school programs, home care service, summer camps and a survey as to how many children there are with an I.Q. of 80 or less, these all would lead to the establishment of a day school here. The location of such a school could be looked into, but grants would not be available until 1966, these grants would be 80 percent from the Provincial government and 20 percent from the municipality.

MEMBERSHIP FEES

A motion was passed that the group organize as a local association to be affiliated with the Provincial Association and to abide by the rules of the constitution. Membership fees were set at $3 for a single person or $5 per family and this would include a subscription to the Mental Retardation pamphlet.

Two meeting are to be held each month, one executive and one general and program meeting to be held the first Tuesday of each month.

COMMUNISTS WATCHED

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP)—Foreign diplomats here have been ordered to tell the foreign ministry if they want to travel more than 25 miles from the capital or entertain government ministers. Though all embassies are affected, the main target is thought to be the Communist Chinese embassy, of which the staff of 19 is exceeded in size only by the British delegation.

Mr., Mrs. William C. West Mark Golden Anniversary

STIRLING — The spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. William C. West in Stirling was a bower of beauty with many floral arrangements which were gifts of friends, relatives and neighbors for "Open House" held on Sunday April 4.

The dining table was centred with a three tier round anniversary cake, flanked with golden candles and silver tea services. Wedding bells were used as special decorations and almost 250 congratulatory cards added to the festive occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. West received the guests which numbered over 300. The guests came from Halifax, Teeswater, Toronto, Belleville, Trenton, Oshawa, Marmora, Peterborough, Madoc, Pickering and the surrounding area.

Mrs. West wore a blue lace suit with a corsage of golden and bronze chrysanthemums.

The family gave as their special gift an airplane trip for Mrs. Michael Brest (nee Sandara West) of Halifax, in order that all the grandchildren could be present.

The three daughters-in-law were in charge of the kitchen duties and six granddaughters served the guests. The sons welcomed the guests as they arrived and the daughters were in charge of the guest book.

POURING TEA

Those who poured tea were: Mrs. W. A. Morgan and Mrs. Dora Bridge of Belleville, Mrs. Arthur Pacelow of Kingston, Mrs. Alex Tanner: Mrs. Silas Boyce and Mrs. R. B. Duffin.

Mrs. West was the former Elizabeth Jane Tanner, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Murchison Tanner and Mr. West is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John R. West, all of Rawdon Township.

They were married on April 7, 1915 in St. Mark's Anglican rectory with Rev. T. H. Hall officiating. They took up residence at Springbrook where Mr. West was the cheesemaker. They have three sons and two daughters, and are Harold, Clarence and Russell and a daughter Evelyn, all of whom reside in Stirling, another daughter Marabelle, Mrs. William Clare, Belleville. There are also 17 grandchildren.

The entire family was at home for the Sunday "Open House" and all had a part in the anniversary plans. On Wednesday evening, April 7 a family dinner party for 35 guests was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clare West when Uncle Bill and 2 of the St. Paul's U.C.W. catered.

Mr. and Mrs. West have resided in Stirling for the past 40 years at the time Mr. West took over the Stirling Creamery and has been in the butter business ever since. Later he added a cold storage plant. Previous to coming to Stirling Mr. West was a cheesemaker for ten years.

COUNCIL MEMBER

Mr. West was a member of Stirling Village Council in 1929 and served as reeve for 14 years. In 1947 he was proclaimed Warden of Hastings County. Mr. and Mrs. West are valued members of St. Paul's United Church where Mr. West is an elder and Mrs. West is a life member of the United Church Women. Mrs. West has also held several offices in Stirling Women's Institute including that of president and at the present time is the acting treasurer.

The Institute gift was an artificial floral arrangement in a gold and yellow color scheme.

Mr. West has been a member of the Rock Lake Hunt Club for many years and on Sunday evening the members of this group came together. An address in verse form was read by Burton Morton and Mr. West was presented with a rocking chair. The grandchildren made the presentation of a mantel lamp. A framed scroll was received from Hon. John P. Roberts and messages from Mr. John Diefenbaker, Rod Weir and Elmer Sandercock. Telegrams were received from relatives in Calgary and other points.

Women Taking Bigger Place in Pakistan Affairs

KARACHI (Reuters) — Less than ten years ago, there was hardly one woman in an executive position in industry or commerce in Pakistan.

Today, there are 20, all graduates of the University of Karachi's Institute of Business Administration.

Though not spectacular progress, perhaps, it is still spectacular enough for Pakistan where women have a long way to go to win the freedom enjoyed by their sisters in the West.

There now are immense job opportunities for women in this developing country, and more and more girls are entering the institute for degree courses or, much more popular, to take evening courses for diplomas or certificates.

Girls graduating from the institute have won positions carrying monthly salaries ranging from 500 to 1,500 rupees ($106 to $320). While such salaries are not large by Western standards, they are much better than the average office wage here.

Not one of the 20 girls graduated from the institute since its inception in 1955 is out of a job.

This year, there are 12 girls in the diploma and certificate course — geared with four in the degree course.

The emergence of the girls in industry and commerce, though slow, is an indication of the change in the Pak women.

Pakistan was founded from a rural economy to a semi-industrialized society.

While most Pakistani girls still feel their place is in the home after marriage, that trepid few who are setting the pattern of active participation in the country's development are sought after by employers just as much as men are.

Members Want IODE Name to Stay

HAMILTON (CP) — Ontario members of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire decided Wednesday they like their group's name and told their national executive they oppose a suggestion to change it.

More than 800 delegates at the opening session of the Ontario chapter's annual meeting unanimously supported a resolution asking their national leaders to retain the old name.

Last month the IODE national president said there might be a name change "to make our image more modern."

Provincial President Mrs. W. R. Morrison said "with the loss of our name would go the loss of our ideals and our proud and respected position in Canada and abroad—in short, our identity."

The provincial chapter, which has more than half the order's Canadian membership, telegraphed its resolution to the national executive in Toronto.

SERVICES GROW

Reports submitted to the first sessions of the three-day meeting show that IODE services in Ontario are growing. The organization spent $153,447 last year on education, more than $24,000 to Commonwealth correspondence department and $302,645 on services in Canada and abroad. There were 100 scholarships and 361 bursaries awarded.

There are 436 chapters with a total membership of 14,168. A dozen new chapters were formed during the last year.

Mrs. J. W. Gibson of Toronto, chapter standard - bearer, told delegates the Union Jack—the IODE's official flag—now will be termed a flag and not a standard. The Canadian maple leaf flag will be displayed at meetings but only the Union Jack will be carried in processions.

Mrs. J. A. Stuart of Hamilton, secretary of the home and abroad committee, asked delegates to send used clothing to Indian children in the Canadian north and Christmas presents worth about $1 each for nursing stations at Pangnirtung, N.W.T.

In other business Wednesday Mrs. Morley Keegan of Oakville announced that IODE calendars will have as their theme for the first time in 41 years.

The 1966 calendars will be blue, green and red instead of the traditional red, white and blue.

What Women Are Doing

Nurses' Alumnae

Mrs. Ruth Bly, President

The Alumnae Association of the Belleville General Hospital School of Nursing was organized in the year 1910, with Mrs. Charles Graham the first president. Mrs. Grace Rutherford, a charter member, recalls that the membership at the time was ten. Today there are over 700 graduates of Belleville General Hospital.

The object of this association is the promotion of unity and fellowship among the alumnae, and the advancement of the interests of the profession of nursing.

The alumnae meets the first Tuesday evening of each month in Education Hall. The programs are varied, some are of an educational nature and others are purely social.

Each year there are two outstanding social functions; the annual alumnae dinner of the graduating class, held in May, is to honor the graduation class and at the same time make this occasion a home-coming and a time for class reunions. The Student Ball, held in November, is a highlight of the social season.

There are various money making projects during the year. In the past the alumnae provided Belleville with the first ambulance. The first paediatric ward was equipped in 1940 by this association and was dedicated to the memory of the late Dr. Emma Connor.

When the west wing was added to the hospital in 1956, the alumnae gave $2,000 to help furnish the nurses' lounge and locker room. Dishes for the kitchen in Education Hall were also provided in 1960. The alumnae maintains a bursary fund to aid in the education of student nurses.

During the past year a beautifully bound album has been compiled which contains all the graduating class pictures in the past 40 years. It is the hope of the association that a class picture will be added each year.

The Alumni Bulletin is published quarterly and keeps members both far and near informed of hospital development, alumnae functions, and activities, and personal news.

All Belleville Hospital graduates are welcome to the meetings, as the association seeks to preserve fraternal pride in this school of nursing.

SHORT OF CASH

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (CP) — A team of women golfers returning from the world championships in Paris complained here that the New Zealand Reserve Bank's limit on foreign exchange funds is quite inadequate. The $19.50 a day limit meant that some could not afford more than a snack for breakfast and lunch, after they had paid their hotel bills and caddy fees.

Many French Housewives Becoming Gadget-minded

PARIS (Reuters) — French housewives, who stuck to the old-fashioned hand coffee grinder years after everyone else had discarded it, are at last becoming gadget-minded.

One of the largest manufacturers of household appliances in France reports that five factories are working at top speed to meet the growing demand for vacuum cleaners, electric coffee grinders, food mixers, hair dryers, automatic washing machines and spin dryers and portable heaters.

Only 10 years ago, any one of these things was a luxury, found only among women in the upper-income brackets. Today, with prices down, they are fast becoming "basic necessities."

The truth is that French women today can no longer afford to spend hours preparing each meal. Yet they want to maintain their traditional high culinary standards.

WANT NO CANS

While they have learned to appreciate every time-saving device, they usually apply it to natural foods. They still flinch shy of canned foods and ready-made preparations.

The average Frenchwoman would not dream of using, for example, pre-ground coffee. But today she can grind it each time she wants it in 14 seconds with her electric grinder instead of some seven minutes with the old hand grinder.

Retail prices of electrical appliances today are within reach of almost every French budget.

Religious Drama Group Presents Fine Performance

A hushed audience in Tabernacle United Church School auditorium last Sunday evening watched the first performance of "Edge of Gehenna" by the newly formed Drama Group.

A narrative introduction to the play was given by the director, Ruth Howard. The two - act Easter play written by Alberta Hawse is the story of a pottery family who lived on the edge of a field overlooking the ugly valley of Gehenna - a place of rubbish fires and utter desolation. The spirited young daughter, Judith, hates this ugly place, but is held by her stern father's domination, her mother's adoration that "we must be content with such things as your father can provide." The mother and daughter grieve for Dan, the son who has left home to work on the water tower by Siloam and who has met with tragedy.

Judith and her brother have become believers in the Man from Galilee, to whom they have listened at every opportunity, and their belief enrages their father.

TENSE MOMENTS

The appearance of a wretched leper creates some tense moments, and the first act ends with one of the most dramatic highlights of the play.

The second act, timed as early morning of the Resurrection Day has many high moments, such as the potter's anger and exasperation with his wife, and the more tender scene between the daughter and the young leper. The appearance of a strange, mourning woman has a profound effect on the group, even to the proud unyielding potter.

Two dramatic readings for Easter Time, written by Nelson D. Sweeney were given by Ruth Howard. The narration and the readings were done in Biblical costume in keeping with the play.

MEMBERS OF CAST

The cast included John Babiak as Zephaniah the potter, Ruth Gariepy as Keren, his wife, Jane McFarlane as Judith, their pretty, spirited daughter, Charles Potts as Naaman, the leper and Joan Pearson in the demanding role of The Woman, a portrayal of all mothers whose sons have gone astray.

The main theme of the play is that there is an 'Edge of Gehenna' for everyone but whether they remain there or not is a matter of choice.

Some remarkable talent has been discovered, and the Drama Group seems to have made a favorable impression with their first play. They have been much encouraged to proceed with further productions.

Much success was due to a fine technical staff. Design and decor was created by George Brickwood, who also gave valuable assistance as technical adviser. Decor assistant was Marilyn McFarlane.

Special lighting effects were created by Norman Howard and William Slavin. Mr. Slavin was also responsible for the sound effects and music which added much to the play.

FUTURE ENGAGEMENTS

With the initial performance now in the past, the group is looking forward to its forthcoming engagements in Holloway Street United Church and in Trenton, Stirling and Madoc. Plans are being made for another production to be presented in October. A religious drama group is some what unique in this area and they are being wished much success.

Susanna's Family Fare

THE WINNER!

Dear Susanna: Several times a week I set my hair with those huge wire mesh rollers. I use about half a dozen of the three sizes each time.

I'm sure you are quite aware of the tendencies of these curlers to roll onto the floor. They are very awkward to handle and no container ever seemed large enough so that I could dump them in and out readily. If you are experiencing the same trouble with them, lend an ear:

A large shopping bag is the ideal container. It can either be hung up in the cupboard or set just inside on the floor. I have found the bathroom is the simplest place to do my hair. I lay a large bath towel completely over the wash basin and deposit the entire contents of my shopping bag into it — curlers, box of pins and hair net. I use a dish of water for dampening. When I am finished, I gather everything in the towel and reverse the process . . . back into the bag it all goes in one fell swoop! — Mrs. Carry Crane

It's about time someone got ahead of those wretched roly poly rollers! — SUSANNA

Dear Susanna: Many years ago my mother had her own method for keeping light little scatter rugs in place. She tacked used rubber sealer rings around the edge of the backing about six inches apart. Strong linen or buttonhole thread is best.

Most cabins and cottages have a supply of these small mats and when you are up there for a few days it is a simple, inexpensive matter to equip them with these skid-resistant backings. — Dottie.

(If you have any hints for running a successful household — or any problems — write to Susanna, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope when requesting pamphlets.)

Ann Landers

Middle-aged Lovers Don't Want a Double Wedding

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My problem is out of the ordinary, but nonetheless it is real.

I am a middle-aged man in love with a middle-aged woman. Helen and I lost our mates many years ago.

I have a daughter who is 18 years old. My son is 17. We are both very proud of our children.

My son and Madeline's daughter have known each other for quite some time, but six months ago their friendship burst into flame. They are now going steady. My son tells me he thinks he is in love with the girl. She has told her mother she thinks she is in love with my son.

ANN LANDERS

Madeline and I want to get married but we are both afraid of what might happen if these two teen-agers are allowed to live under the same roof. At the same time we don't want to wait until we have to be pushed down the aisle in wheel chairs.

What can you offer in the way of help? — NO DOUBLE WEDDING PLEASE.

DEAR NO DOUBLE — Your son should be graduating from high school within the year. Surely you and Madeline can postpone your marriage until the boy goes away to college. This would not entirely eliminate the problem, but it would reduce the hazards considerably.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband went out occasionally with a girl before he met and married me. He did not tell me about the girl because she was from the wrong side of the tracks and he never considered her anything but a physical friend if you know what I mean. This girl has his child. This child is now six years old.

My husband, being a perfect gentleman, did not try to back out of anything. When the court ordered him to pay support money for the boy he agreed.

We have a little girl of our own and it frets me that my husband must send money every month to this back-street tramp. How long does a man have to pay for a mistake that is only half his? If he just stopped sending support money what would happen? — THE MRS.

DEAR MRS. — Your husband will probably have to pay for "his half of the mistake" for another 15 years. If he stops the payments he could go to jail.

Your lack of compassion for the mother and her child is shameful. You sound like a woman who has just had her brain washed and can't do a thing with it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Since you are the lady with all the answers I hope you can pull one out of your hat for me.

I'm what some people call a career girl. Others might call me an old maid. I'm 32, unmarried and have no particular desire to rush into a fifth-rate marriage (as some of my friends have done) just to prove I can get a man.

But what do I say when people ask me why I'm not married? It's incredible that reasonably intelligent people ask such a clod-dish question, but they do — at least once a week. I've been gritting my teeth and saying stupid things like, "Because no one will have me." Can you come up with a squelcher that doesn't leave me looking so pebbish? Thank you. — DIXIE.

DEAR DIXIE — Try this for size: "I'm not married because I haven't met the man who deserves to be as happy as I can make him."

Do you lean on cigarettes as a social crutch? You may regret it later. Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-Age Smoking," enclosing with your request 10c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems and them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

NEW SUMMER MUSICAL

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — The Stratford Festival will perform Bertolt Brecht's musical "The Rise and Fall of the City of Mahagonny," this summer. Seldom performed these days, the operetta is a humorous picture of frontier America—as seen by a man who did not go there until 20 years later.

FINE PAYMENT EASED

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — Motorists here now can pay traffic fines in one of nine ticket boxes in downtown Lethbridge instead of going to the city police station. Tickets will in future be issued in the form of an envelope, which can be mailed in or placed in one of the bright red ticket boxes.

PRIZE WINNING APPLE PIE

My private count on the number of homemade apple pies to be judged was 107. It seemed physically impossible to judge them fairly but we made an unprejudiced try at it. The pies were numbered and nameless.

After 2 hours of observing and tasting, 12 pies were selected by the judges. Then the heat was really on. All 12 were wonderful pies but, without coming to blows, the judges were barely able to select the first prize winning pie. Number was matched with name sheet — Result: The maker was Mrs. Ruth White of Brantford who received a cheque for $100. Second prize winner was Mrs. Edna Nicholson of Burlington, Ontario — $50. Third prize winner was Mrs. Gladys Sweet of Glencoe (near London) Ontario — $25.

To be sure that Ruth White's apple pie recipe could be followed by the average cook, I made it up and served it to my expectant family.

RUTH WHITE'S FIRST PRIZE APPLE PIE:

Pastry: 1½ cups unsifted all-purpose flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon baking powder, 2/3 cup lard, ¼ cup (2 tablespoons) water.

Filling: 5 medium large or 6 medium Spy apples, 1 cup light brown sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ cup water.

To Make Pastry: Sift the dry ingredients into mixing bowl. Cut in lard with 2 knives (or pastry blender) until size of split peas. Take half of mixture and in another bowl, mash it with a fork until it looks like fine cornmeal. Return to coarse flour mixture, stir. Sprinkle water over, a little at a time, constantly blending with fork. Chill dough.

Peel, core and rinse apples. Slice. Using half the pastry, roll out on lightly floured board. Line pie plate and trim edge. Arrange half of the brown sugar over the bottom crust, then sprinkle cinnamon over the brown sugar. Dot with butter. Add apple slices and sprinkle the water over top, then add remaining brown sugar over top of apples. Roll out the other half of dough for top crust. Cut slits in top crust. Cover apples and seal and trim and flute edge. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for 10 minutes. Lower to 350 deg. Fahr. for remaining baking time, about 35 minutes, or until apples are cooked thoroughly.

COLOR BAR MAKES UNITY

MONTREAL (CP)—The irony of South African apartheid, says sociologist Helen McGill Hughes, is that it has united the natives as nothing else could. "By permitting the natives to live only in places set apart for them, the Nationalists in South Africa have brought about conditions favorable to the creation of native will and native public opinion," she told the Women's Canadian Club here.

Many Japanese Women Terminate First Pregnancy In Abortion Says Report

TOKYO (Reuters)—More than half of Japan's young women terminate their first pregnancy in abortion, says a survey carried out by Tokyo University.

The first pregnancy abortion rate, says the survey, is 32.3 per cent for women between the ages of 20 and 24 and 31.5 per cent above that for women in the 25-to-29 age group.

The survey conducted on 7,000 women showed that only one-quarter of the women in the 20-to-24 age group terminated their first pregnancy in normal childbirth, compared with 80 per cent of women aged between 40 and 44.

DEATH RATE HIGH

While the number of abortions in Japan in 1963 reached 950,000, according to health ministry reports, the mortality rate among women at the time of childbirth was one per 1,000 or three times higher than in Europe and the United States.

Dr. Hiroshi Kikuchi, of health and welfare ministry, attributes the high death rate at childbirth in Japan to three main causes: Gestational toxicosis, hemorrhage and extra-uterine pregnancy.

He says the number of pregnant women dying here from gestational toxicosis and hemorrhage is 10 times higher than in Britain.

Japan's Family Planning Association recently issued urgent warnings to young women that first pregnancy abortions may lead to physical and mental deterioration and possible sterility, and cause serious complications in subsequent childbirths.

Successful Living

Morally Strict Girl Wants To Maintain High Standards

DEAR DORIS — I'm 18. I've been brought up to understand that petting and intimacies outside of marriage are immoral. To me sex is something that should be kept for marriage and is not something to play with. Am I right?

How do I tell someone whom I like very much what I think? He has dropped me because, I believe, of my morals. We had a strong argument. He said only girls under 14 were virgins and when this didn't work said that marriages are spoiled because one of the partners has remained a virgin too long.

DORIS CLARK

This I don't believe but would like to have an idea what to put to such an argument if one ever comes up again. Whenever I stopped to think about it lately, I'd get all worked up. I don't want to be like these other girls — who are all my friends.

In a way this letter is to get it off my chest and onto someone else's. — WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED — It's been on my chest a long time. Here's what to say: That if he really believes what he says about "only girls under 14 etc." you'd like to know where he is meeting these girls? And does he conduct this sort of research himself? Because what he claims just isn't true.

As for the other statement, re spoiled marriages and virginity, he's wrong there too. Promiscuity is the great offender when it comes to ruined marriages, too early marriages, and unhappy homes.

The girl who saves herself and her intimate physical expression for the man she marries has a far better chance of making something precious of her love. This goes for boys too.

Confidential to LOVES Z — In your present state of mind, and for several years yet, I'd suggest you don't declare everlasting love to anybody. A few months from now there will probably be another set of X's, Y's and Z's for you to get mixed up with.

DEAR DORIS — My sister got an address from your column about people who would like to lose weight. Well, it seems they have a club for teen-agers too and I would like to join it. But you need several before you can start one in each place.

Please tell me what to do. — CHUBBY AND TUBBY.

DEAR CHUBBY — The club is TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly.) To get started a chapter needs four applications. A teen-age chapter must have at least one adult to meet with them.

Rules require a doctor's approval; meetings once a week to weigh in; exercises to help with trouble spots. There's fellowship and moral support to keep you turning your back on the forbidden sweets.

I'm sending you the address to write to about forming a branch where you are.

Confidential to EMBARRASSED — Write again, giving me your complete name and address on a stamped envelope, and enclose twenty cents for the two leaflets, "Blushing — Cause and Control" and "Don't Be Shy." I am sure these leaflets will be of help to you.

DEAR SICK — Anybody as desperate for a horse as you are can think of a way to earn one. Do what one gal did: make a bargain with Mom to dismiss the cleaning woman and give you the job. Or get a paper route. Or learn to be a super baby sitter — one the mothers can count on. And save up.

Being sick is no good. Your mental health will improve as you work for what you want.

Furniture of Casual Ease

Elegance, style and comfort are the rule in casual furniture this spring and summer.

The patio or terrace is more than just a spot to soak up sun these days. It is part of the home and is furnished accordingly.

The most popular styles of outdoor furniture are made of wrought iron, cast aluminum, California redwood and rattan or cane featuring thick plush foam rubber cushions with waterproof, fade-resistant covers.

One firm just introduced an outdoor recliner with a wrought iron frame and deep foam rubber cushions on back, seat and footrest.

Another firm has a glass top, wrought iron hunt table. It comes in four curved sections that fit together to make a circular table or can be placed end-to-end to make a sinuous buffet.

Patio carts or chuck wagons are fun. They usually include a barbecue grill, a spot for bottles and cooking utensils and enough work space to make outdoor cooking a lot easier.

Even the lightweight aluminum tubing casual furniture has been made more luxurious. Chaises that once had plastic webbing now offer latex foam rubber mattresses for greater comfort.

Tries to Talk Brother Out of Leaving School

By JACK BUTTON

This is the story of a man who was fancy free, restless and 16 years - old 30 years ago this month— and who still regrets a spur-of-the-moment decision he made then.

But let him tell it in his own words. He wrote me this week. And his words make powerful reading.

"Today," he wrote, "I spent two hours trying to talk my brother out of leaving school. He's got his mind set on buying a car and he knows where he can earn $35 a week. Setting up pins in a bowling alley."

"The job won't last long. Another boy is coming back to it. But my brother doesn't seem to care. What does it matter, he asks me. Spring is here, his first job beckons, and he's 16-years-old.

HIS EXAMPLE

"Perhaps you can say something in your column. And my own story is the best example you could use. You see, I quit school 10 years ago this month. I can't convince my brother, but I know exactly where this road will lead him.

"I'm 26-years-old. For the last year I've been taking night courses that will eventually give me a high school diploma. By day I'm a dishwasher in a restaurant. That is, I am now. It was out of work six months in 1964.

"My brother, you see, he thinks there's a difference between our cases. He's a smooth talker, the type of fellow who may become a good salesman. He thinks he is one now. But I'm not.

"Maybe you can see mistakes in my grammar already. I'm trying to correct myself, helped by my wife who left school a year after I did. I guess you can say we both realize our mistakes, particularly when you're trying to raise a 3-year-old boy.

FOR A CAR

"In 1958, I was just ready to graduate from Grade 10. I think I could have passed if I'd stayed till the end of the year. What made me quit?

"Well, Jack, my wife and I have talked that over many times. I believe, even if I did not realize it then, that a car was in the back of my mind. In the first week of April, a friend asked if I was interested in driving a truck.

"It was on a job where they were pushing the schedule to finish a construction job as soon as possible. I knew it wouldn't last forever, but my friend told me I could easily earn $40 or $50 a week with overtime.)

"I laughed. Then I started thinking about $40 a week. I figured it out as $2,000 a year. Remember that I was going to school. I never had the same pocket money that big wheels did. I started figuring what $40 a week would buy, and how it would impress the school teachers.

"I had a big dream of driving past the school at noon hour — slowly, very slowly—in a convertible with the top down. I nodded to the people I wanted to notice, ignoring the others, and laughed a lot.

"My father objected at first, but I could see what he was thinking. He had prospects of $15 a week board coming from me. So he gave his permission. And I started finding out how fast a dream in April can vanish by fall.

"I got the job, saved most of my $40 a week and bought a 1953 eight-cylinder convertible within two months. It was great driving around, until the brakes went, and then the wiring, and finally the transmission. I could not sell because I had a two-year buying contract.

"If you say anything else in your column, Jack, tell how you get out of the stream if you quit school. At first I was a celebrity in my own group. For the first time

AN OUTSIDER

"Then, all of a sudden, I realized they were talking about things I didn't share. Some went on to college. Some went into offices. Today I don't see anybody who was in Grade 10 when I was. As a friend, I mean. We don't talk about the same things.

"I've been married five years. When I married, I had $2,000 debt to pay off, thanks to our old car debts. Don't ask how it happened, it just did. But we've spent the last two years figuring how to get back on the track.

"We've killed the debts, thanks to the fact that my wife is Scotch. But where do we go from here? What bothers me is that I could have avoided all this 10 years ago.

"My brother, heaven forbid, may decide to face the odds. But I hope you print as much of this as possible in case others are thinking the same way."

There's the letter. And I say no more, friends. Draw your own conclusions.

Naturalists Plan Meeting

DON MILLS — Over 300 members of the Federation of Ontario Naturalists are expected to gather in Kingston for the 33rd annual meeting of the non-profit Federation, to be held on April 24th.

A wide range of topics will be discussed from arctic lichens to biological control of weeds. A special feature will be a display of paintings by a brilliant young Canadian artist, Glen Loates.

The special guest speaker at the annual dinner will be Dr. A. H. J. Lovink, Netherlands Ambassador to Canada. Dr. Lovink is a noted wilderness traveller and has explored a great deal of the Canadian north-country.

On Sunday, April 25th five trips have been arranged to see the countryside around Kingston, with expert leaders from the Kingston Naturalists Club.

All sessions on the 24th will be held in Dunning Hall, Queen's University.

A reception will be held in the new Biology Building at Queen's University on Friday evening, April 23.

The public is cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Leon Balcer in Forefront Of Conservative Politics Since Election in 1949

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—Leon Balcer, the suave quiet-spoken lawyer from Trois-Rivieres, Que., has been in the forefront of Conservative federal politics in Quebec since he was first elected to the Commons in 1949.

During much of that time he has also been in a running feud with party chief John Diefenbaker over Quebec's role in Confederation. Now only 47, he had been looked on as a man who might lead the party himself some day.

Handsome and heavy - set—five-eleven and 185 pounds—he has warm dark eyes and a quick smile, a sort-of Charles Boyer charm. He leans to neat dark suits and quiet ties to complement his smooth-grained black hair and Gallic complexion.

He is fluently bilingual, his clear and concise English carrying only a faint, pleasant accent of his mother tongue.

He was born at Trois-Rivieres on the St. Lawrence shore. His father died when he was only seven months old and his mother raised a family of two by herself. She had a deep interest in politics and Leon was pointed to that direction for as long as he could remember.

Educated at Quebec, he was admitted to the Quebec bar in 1941 but immediately went into the service. He served until the end of the war in 1945 and four years later went to Parliament on a St-vote victory, one of the two Conservatives elected in Quebec in the 1949 election.

NATIONAL FIGURE

He first came into national prominence in 1952 as president of the Young Conservative Association. In 1956 he was elected president of the Conservative Association of Canada, and presided over the leadership convention that year which selected John Diefenbaker.

Mr. Balcer opposed the Diefenbaker candidacy at the convention and backed Donald Fleming, later finance and justice minister in the Conservative government formed after the 1957 election victory.

As the first French-Canadian chosen for that first cabinet, Mr. Balcer drew the relatively unimportant post of minister-general in what was interpreted then as a snub to Quebec. But 3½ years later he was promoted to the front-line post of transport minister and won wide praise for his work in that over - loaded portfolio.

During the final year of the Diefenbaker government there were persistent reports that Mr. Balcer and Mr. Diefenbaker were at odds on a number of issues but he remained outwardly loyal when the cabinet began disintegrating in 1963.

Despite open differences with Mr. Diefenbaker, he remained in the Tory fold as a member of the party in opposition until he announced Wednesday his intention to sit as an independent.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

WEDNESDAY, April 7, 1965

The Commons continued the throne speech debate, with the minority Liberal government surviving its first test of confidence.

Social Credit, Creditiste and two independent MPs supported the government in voting down an NDP subamendment 129 to 84.

It criticized the government for failure to institute a full medical health plan immediately.

Leon Balcer, former Conservative MP for Trois-Rivieres, left the party and crossed the Commons floor to sit as an independent.

He cited disagreement both with John Diefenbaker and with some party policies.

THURSDAY, April 8

The Commons meets at 11 a.m. to continue the throne speech debate. The Senate stands adjourned until May 4.

Bible Epic Called Bore By Critics

LONDON (Reuters) — Movie critics here today described Hollywood's The Greatest Story Ever Told as a bore.

"The longest as well as the greatest story ever told" was Daily Mail critic Alan Wilson's verdict on the three-hour, 20-minute Bible epic produced and directed by George Stevens following its opening here.

"Hollywood should stick to entertainment and leave the Good Book well alone," said Mrs. Monica Dowdall Sep.

Robert Ottaway in The Daily Sketch said "The Greatest Story Ever Told comes close to being the bore of the century."

Leonard Mosley in The Daily Express said: "The result is, I am afraid, that though you don't know you are bored."

The Times: "It proves to be foreseeably, a worthy, solid, respectable almost unbearable monument to ghastly good taste.

"But at three hours and 20 minutes it is deadly slow, heavy and dull, mixing styles uncomfortably as it suggests one famous biblical painting after another and finally emitting a dreary sort of 'Ben Hur' on zero."

But many of the critics lauded Swedish actor Max Von Sydow for his portrayal of Jesus Christ.

Elderly Man Tells of Swindle In Acton Court

MILTON, Ont. (CP)—An 86 year-old Acton, Ont., man described in court Wednesday how he was swindled out of $850 by a stranger.

Charles W. Mason was the 12th witness appearing for the utility at the trial of six Hamilton men and a Burlington woman charged with conspiring to defraud elderly persons in Ontario over the last seven years. A defence lawyer, K. D. Bayne, pointed to Crown Attorney Peter McWilliams and asked Mr. Mason if the stranger looked like him.

There was a roar of laughter in the courtroom when Mr. Mason replied the stranger was not the prosecutor acting as that.

The witness then pointed to one of the accused, Raymond James Gooding, and said the stranger looked more like him but he made no positive identification.

POINTS TO ACCUSED

Mr. Mason pointed to two other accused, Anthony Wilfred Major, 29, and his brother, Stanley, 42, and said he thought he had seen them around his home when the windows were being installed.

Also charged are Geraldine Rogers, 39, John Carl Lazar, 42, Stanley Laing, 33, and David Gordon Young, 43. John Wilmer Major, 33, committed for trial last summer with the others, will be tried after he recovers from a broken leg.

The trial continues.

Labelled Forms Find Way Back To Ottawa

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—It seems that most Canadian taxpayers don't mind being identified by a seven-digit number.

The taxation division of the revenue department reported Wednesday that 70 per cent of the personal income tax returns filed to date bore the identification numbers used in the government's electronic computers.

"Personalized" income tax forms labelled with the taxpayer's name and social insurance number were mailed out to 6,616,000 Canadians in January by the taxation division and the response has pleased officials.

The personalization in the division had predicted that half the taxpayers would lose or deliberately alter the "personalized" forms and use substitutes without the all-important number.

The optimists hope that in this first year for the numbers 60 per cent of the forms filled in will find their way back to Ottawa.

SEND SHIRTS

Some taxpayers registered protests against the tax collectors, however, enclosing shirts with their returns, usually accompanied by a note saying "you took everything else, so you might as well have the shirt off my back."

Nearly 3,600,000 or about 55 per cent of individual tax returns have been filed, with three weeks left before the April 30 filing deadline. In last year's experience it is repeated, about 1,000,000 returns will arrive in a single day, May 1.

Despite the efficiency of the computers, 2,000 temporary employees have been added to the revenue department to handle the huge direct mail operation and keep information to the computers.

U.S.-backed Air Assaults Appear to Have Little Effect

By BORIS MISKEW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The United States-backed air assaults on North Vietnamese targets appear to be about as effective so far as scratching one's left ear when the right one is itching.

These assaults in the last two months obviously grew out of the repeatedly-frustrated efforts of the Americans and South Vietnamese to weed out the numerous and widely-scattered rebel strongholds which control at least a third of that South Asian trouble spot.

The task for the Americans and South Vietnamese would be relatively simple if the rebels were merely the local Vietcong terrors of the country. But as things stand, the rebels, led by the Red Cong, are difficult to pin down.

They control a sizable portion of the country about 150 miles south of the 17th parallel that divides North and South Vietnam, territory bordering Laos where the Communist Pathet Lao forces are strong, some more territory bordering neutral Cambodia and the entire southern tip of the country.

Besides this, the pro-Communist elements control the southern coastal cargo pockets around Saigon—the South Vietnamese capital—and still other parts of the country.

Furthermore, these rebel groups, expert in guerrilla warfare, easily elude government forces and fade into the jungle when it is to their advantage.

Unable to manage the Viet Cong, the Americans formed the North Viet Nam, blaming the Communist government in Hanoi for the success of the rebel operations.

The United States aim is to frighten the North Vietnamese into stopping aid to the rebel forces so that the South Vietnamese could gain an upper hand in the war.

But the bombings of North Viet Nam apparently haven't changed the situation much in the south except in boosting the morale of the government supporters.

The action against the North is causing the British government embarrassment because of the close British-American ties and it has raised queries in other parts of the world.

President Johnson had a way out of Viet Nam following his impressive victory in the last United States presidential election. American public opinion appeared to favor U.S. withdrawal because of the unstable government picture in Saigon.

And he was politely given a chance at some form of negotiations only last week when Prime Minister Pearson suggested perhaps the bombings to the north should be interrupted. But still some basis for peace talks could be worked out.

As things stand, unless these rebel strongholds can be isolated or wiped out there appears to be little hope of an American victory in Viet Nam.

Two Convicts Walk Away From Prison

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)—Police are searching for two convicts who walked away from a staff training college for prison officers Wednesday.

Wesley Arthur Johnson, 46, and Daniel Albert Huntington, 31, were reported missing at 4:30 p.m. from the farm annex outside the walls of nearby Collins Bay medium security penitentiary.

Johnson was working as a cook in the staff college kitchen and Huntington was cleaning the building. Both men were serving four-year terms for breaking, entering and theft.

Pickersgill and Chevrier Accused of 'Vilification And Libel' Against Firm

MONTREAL (CP)—The president of Autair Helicopters Limited Wednesday accused Transport Minister Pickersgill and former cabinet minister Lionel Chevrier of a campaign of "vilification and libel" against his company.

Douglas W. Conner said he is convinced this is why his National - based company was bypassed on an $84,000 federal contract in favor of a rival firm whose tender was $200 higher.

He made the allegation before Justice Rene Duranleau of Quebec Superior Court, who is hearing Autair's petition for an injunction to prevent the rival firm, Atlantic Helicopters, from implementing the contract in question.

"Ever since 1960 we have been the victims of vilification and libel in Hansard by Chevrier and his puppet, Pickersgill," Mr. Conner said. "Every time we did anything, they found something wrong with it on the floor of the House of Commons.

"I ascribe our present difficulties to Mr. Pickersgill, in particular, who has been carrying on the vendetta of his former colleague, Mr. Chevrier. That is my contention."

AWARDED CONTRACT

Earlier in the day, evidence put before the court by government officials disclosed that the treasury board — a group of cabinet ministers, including Mr. Pickersgill, who ruled on all government expenditures — awarded the contract to Atlantic on the basis of a cabinet decision that Autair should be given no government work "pending completion of a current investigation."

This information was contained in a memo between two defence production department officials. It gave no indication who was conducting the investigation or the circumstances surrounding.

Earlier, the department and its minister, C. M. Drury, had recommended to the treasury board that Autair get the contract for supply work on the ADCOM radar line in northern Quebec in view of its lower tender and its satisfactory work on the line since 1960.

Mr. Conner, questioned by Atlantic lawyer John Schleisinger, said he had no indication of the impending charge prior to a telephone call March 25. He said he then checked with both the transport department and Air Transport Board to see whether they were investigating his company's licences.

"Their reply was one of surprise that I even asked the question. They said there was no inquiry being held, that there was nothing wrong with our licences, and that everything was in order."

OPERATION GOOD

"It is evident our operation was ADCOM and it was good one," he said. "This is a manoeuvre behind the scenes by Mr. Pickersgill.

"We are suffering the displeasure of Chevrier and Pickersgill. They obviously want to get contracts for their friends, but we submit the lowest bids."

Mr. Schleisinger said Autair he had obtained subpoenas to have three cabinet ministers — Mr. Pickersgill, Mr. Drury and Privy Council President Maurice Lamontagne — appear, but had been unable, however, to serve the three ministers in ministers not to appear.

Mr. Justice Duranleau said that, in that case, the ministers have to be served in person. He criticized Mr. Schlesinger's handling of the subpoenas.

Gerald Goodman, counsel for the federal government, said he had advised the three

Wednesday's day - long hearing completed testimony by witnesses. Mr. Justice Duranleau said he would hear final arguments today and possibly render his decision on Autair's petition for a permanent injunction.

Autair already has obtained an interim restraining order preventing Atlantic from proceeding work on the ADCOM contract April 1 as scheduled. Mr. Justice Duranleau extended this order for a second time until the case is completed today.

PREDICTS CLASS

TORONTO (CP) — An Indian high school teacher predicted Wednesday Canada will have a middle class of Indians in a middle class within 20 years. Basil Johnson of Toronto, who grew up on the Cape Croker Indian Reserve near Owen Sound, said: "Right now the middle class is pretty barren of Indians, but it is from the middle class we will get the leadership to bring Indians back to the level of achievement they are capable of."

Lawyers for Liberal M.P. And Organizer Get Chance To Reply to Harsh Words

By KEN KELLY

QUEBEC (CP)— Lawyers for Liberal MP Guy Rouleau and Liberal organizer Guy Mineault get a chance today to reply to some of the harsh words said about their conduct during the Dorion inquiry's hearings on the Lucien Rivard affair.

Francois Chapados, counsel for Masson, and Andre Villeneuve, lawyer for MP Rouleau, were scheduled to present final argument as the inquiry moved today toward an anticipated conclusion this weekend.

Lawyers for the political opposition parties wound up their final argument Wednesday.

ACCUSES MINISTER

Mr. Drouin had accused Mr. Favreau of straight-jacketing the RCMP inquiry into charges of bribery and political pressure against federal ministerial aides. He also accused the minister of destruction of diary dealing with illegal criminal charges.

Mr. Even said he found it difficult to blame Mr. Favreau for deciding not to charge Raymond Denis, former executive assistant to the immigration minister and accused Montreal lawyer Pierre Lamy in court of having offered him a $20,000 fee last July 14 to get Rivard out on bail.

He urged that a special section of the Criminal Code be framed specially prohibiting MPs and other legislators from asking favors of judges or lawyers involved in court cases.

He argued that this is unlawful now but the law should be set out anew. He said Mr. Rouleau, who resigned as parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister Pearson over the Rivard affair, acted unlawfully and contrary to section 119 of the Criminal Code. This section deals with obstruction of justice.

Mr. Rouleau has maintained he made only normal representations in the case of Rivard, who escaped from Bordeaux Jail March 2 before he could be extradited to the United States on narcotics smuggling conspiracy charges.

DEALS WITH MP

Mr. Even concentrated his argument on Mr. Rouleau, who also resigned as chairman of the caucus of Liberal MPs Feb. 26.

He said Mr. Rouleau lied under oath to the inquiry about the Rivard case.

Mr. Rouleau had known or strongly suspected that Rivard was not arrested for nothing and was probably guilty of the narcotics offence. It had been difficult to believe Mr. Rouleau's testimony that he didn't know about Rivard's June 19 arrest until early in August.

The intervention of Mr. Rouleau in the administration of justice was all the more serious because Rivard was wanted by the United States under an extradition treaty with Canada and Mr. Rouleau was parliamentary secretary to the Canadian prime minister.

Mr. Joli concentrated on the RCMP's investigation of Mr. Lamontagne's allegations of attempted bribery against Denis and of political pressure against Mr. Rouleau and two aides to Mr. Favreau—Guy Lord, now at Oxford University, and Andre Ouellet, former justice minister's executive assistant.

The RCMP had tried to throw onto Mr. Favreau's shoulders the responsibility for the whole affair. It was not true, as the RCMP seemed to suggest, that Mr. Favreau had limited the investigation.

SAYS RCMP ERRED

The RCMP erred in not having bilingual or French-speaking investigators undertake the inquiry, hadn't acted speedily and placed obstacles in the way of the chief investigator, Insp. J. R. Dripps.

"This investigation was conducted in quite an amateurish fashion," he said.

Mr. Joli said Mr. Favreau wasn't entirely blameless. It was "gross negligence" not to have let Prime Minister Pearson know of Mr. Rouleau's involvement and a "lapse" not to inform then immigration minister Fremblay about Denis'.

Messrs. Even and Joli reached the right decision—not to prosecute—on the basis of evidence available Sept. 18. The minister hadn't known such important evidence as Lord's availability of $60,000 for Liberal party funds and Masson's attempt to inform Senator Louis P. Gelinas, Liberal treasurer for Quebec, about it.

ARGUE FOR DISMISSAL

Yvon Jasmin and Gilles Gosselin, counsel for Lord and Letendre, respectively, argued that charges against their clients of pressure on Mr. Lamontagne at Mr. Rouleau's suggestion should be dismissed.

Mr. Jasmin suggested that Mr. Lamontagne had made an allegation against Mr. Lord because he confused Mr. Lord in his mind with a "certain type of politician"—Mr. Rouleau.

Mr. Godin contended Mr. Lamontagne imagined a good deal of an Aug. 11 phone call with Mr. Letendre. An ordinary call had reached extraordinary proportions in Mr. Lamontagne's mind.

Racetrack Promoter Testifies

By RUSSELL PEDEN

ST. JOHNS, Que. (CP) — Racetrack promoter Roch Desjardins testified Wednesday he made false statements to the RCMP in January after Yvon Dupuis, former federal minister without portfolio, assured him the matter would never come up in court.

Mr. Desjardins, a 31 - year-old St. Johns chiropractor, reenters the witness box today for his sixth day of testimony at Mr. Dupuis' preliminary hearing on influence - peddling charges.

The chiropractor has said he gave the former cabinet minister $10,000 in 1961 to use his influence to get the Quebec government to issue a charter to operate a racetrack at nearby St. Luc.

Mr. Desjardins testified Wednesday that Mr. Dupuis cautioned him last December not to say anything about the racetrack application if questioned by the RCMP.

He became very nervous at this point, but he gave the RCMP a statement Jan. 16 Mr. Mr. Dupuis assured him the matter would "never get to court."

CONSULTS LAWYER

He then consulted his lawyer, Henri Choiniere, who advised him to go back to the police and tell them the whole story. He said he did so Jan. 18.

Under cross - examination, Mr. Desjardins admitted the second statement was "not identical, in fact it was very much changed" from the first one.

He said he had made the January statements, and two later ones dated Feb. 5 and March 3, without threats or promises, "there had been "no pressure" from the RCMP.

None of the statements was made public, but relevant portions were made available to the defence for cross - examination.

Mr. Desjardins also told the court that, while in Mr. Dupuis' Ottawa office last Dec. 16, he was promised that "French-Canadians will have their flag at Christmas, and you will get your racetrack."

INTRODUCED AS 'THINKER'

He said the promise was made by Raul Rousseau, a man he said was introduced to him a week earlier by Mr. Dupuis as a "thinker" for Prime Minister Pearson. The chiropractor also has referred to Mr. Rousseau in his testimony as an intermediary between Mr. Pearson and Quebec Premier Lesage.

He said he met Mr. Rousseau again in Montreal Dec. 28, and that Mr. Rousseau had shown the racetrack charter application would have to be postponed for a while.

It was at this time, he said, that Mr. Dupuis cautioned, on against saying anything about the racetrack to the RCMP.

Mr. Dupuis resigned in January as federal minister without portfolio but still represents St. Jean - Iberville - Napierville in the Commons.

St. Luc, three miles north of St. Johns, is in the riding.

Can We Afford to Await Proof of Positive Cancer Dangers?

ARTICLE 4

By PAT McGRADY

We live in a sea of carcinogens — cancer causers.

Some of them are natural and long familiar. Others are the man-made products of modern times.

They are in the food we eat, the water and beverages we drink, the air we breathe, the habits we develop, the jobs we hold, the drugs and medical treatment we take, the radiation from the heavens above and the earth below.

They may be inside us—in the mechanics of our emotions, in the hormones we produce or fail to produce, in our inherited or accidentally disturbed cell chemistry, perhaps even in the cumulative chemical and physical injury incurred in the process of growing up and growing old.

There have been efforts to identify these dangers and to eliminate them, but so far the efforts have been weak and, except in a few notable instances, ineffectual.

Laws have been strengthened to ban some carcinogens from commercial products and bar them from natural resources; but, as against the dizzying pace of developments current statutes and enforcement agencies have fallen farther and farther behind the need.

It must be made clear at the outset that the evidence against any single substance as cause of human cancer is strictly circumstantial.

Courts of law, however, rarely send men to the gallows on circumstantial evidence more tenuous than the case against some suspect carcinogens still peddled freely and unlabeled.

One is human—the honest inability of equally qualified experts to agree on the validity of interpretation of evidence, the pressures and propaganda of industries to protect themselves and their products, and the natural tendency of scientists to surrender to or too bitterly resist the pressures.

A few researchers have been forced to resign their positions because their findings were unfavorable to an influential industry or product, but their colleagues sometimes argue as to whether true perception or the scientists' paranoid evangelism was at the root of these incidents.

The second difficulty lies with the suspect substances themselves. It is difficult to ascertain what constitutes a real danger to humans. Some carcinogens cause cancers in 80 or 90 percent of one sex of animal, and virtually no cancers in litermates of the opposite sex.

'CANCER HOUSE' MYSTERY

And even though a carcinogen induces tumors in a wide variety of mice, rats, dogs, cats, rabbits, guinea pigs, flies, cockroaches, sunflowers, fish, and chickens, almost invariably a few organisms escape.

Except in highly inbred strains, susceptibility to cancer varies as much as or more than the carcinogenic agents themselves.

Some carcinogens act alone. Some must work together. Many must be dissolved in some natural fats, oils, or water to take effect. And some cause cancer only when altered by body chemistry.

Some have an additive effect — that is two or more of them pool their potency. Some have a multiplying effect — one may make another five or ten times as potent. One may cancel out the effects of another. Some cancer-causers even are used as anti-cancer drugs.

Some chemicals act in concert with physical or chemical injury, cold, heat, growth, aging hormones, viruses, rays, vitamins or enzymes. Some cancer causers are inactive unless there is a deficiency of a vitamin or hormone or enzyme.

They range from soothing assurances by manufacturers and vendors to ridiculous declarations by alarmists; from panic printed in public periodicals to childish secrecy — supposedly panic - prevention — by scientists and health agencies.

The most notable instance of federal action against a carcinogen was in the famous tainted cranberry episode. The U.S. government's intemperate blast in a naive press against defiant cranberry growers did not win the confidence of the public or the respect of science.

The answer to the riddle of cancer-causation may be basic —such as the possibility of some yet unknown common denominators. But important clues could be in a number of other vague areas.

Is there, for instance, such a thing as a "house of cancer" — a house in which an inordinate number of cancer deaths have occurred? There are a number of these eerie residences in which all or almost all unrelated tenant families for half century or more lost at least one member to cancer. Is this sheer coincidence? Or is there some thing in the structure, the grounds, the air, or the water which is conducive to cancer?

Is it mere coincidence that in the class of 1940 of one Maryland high school of 400 students, seven developed leukemia and died within a decade? That all victims lived on the same street and sat near one another in class? And three more classmates died of cancers related to leukemia?

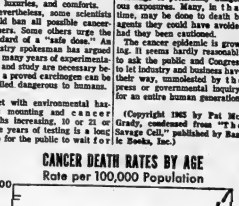
Carcinogens have been recognized for almost 200 years ever since scientists traced the cause of scrotum cancer in London chimney sweeps to soot.

Some 30 years ago, it was known that butter-yellow, a food additive, caused liver cancer in rats.

Since then, many new carcinogens have been identified. Some are among the 800 artificial chemicals in common use, and possibly among the 50 or so introduced each year to public. They are called carcinogens because they cause cancers in experimental animals. Most independent scientists consider this evidence of a potential danger to man.

The path to scientific proof has many pitfalls. For instance, an exceptionally high liver cancer rate is said to prevail around Anaconda, Mont., where copper smelting is virtually the only industry. Part of the answer could be that the State Tuberculosis Sanitarium, which attracts patients with many respiratory diseases, happens to be located in the same county.

There is obvious validity to the claims of industry that if we were to abandon absolutely the use of all carcinogens, life would become dreary.



We would not have, as we know them, paved roads, synthetic automobile tires, oil and gasoline, plastics of many descriptions, many metals and alloys, pesticides, insecticides, fertilizers, cosmetics, detergents, drugs, foods, dyes, other essentials as well as time-savers, luxuries, and comforts.

Nevertheless, some scientists would ban all possible cancer-causers. Some others urge the standard of a "safe dose." An industry spokesman has argued that many years of experimentation and study are necessary before a proved carcinogen can be labelled dangerous to humans.

Yet with environmental hazards mounting and cancer deaths increasing, 10 or 21 or more years of testing is a long time for the public to wait for warnings of potentially dangerous exposures. Many, in that time, may be done to death by agents they could have avoided had they been cautioned.

The cancer epidemic is growing. It seems hardly reasonable to ask the public and Congress to let industry and business have their way, unmolested by the press or governmental inquiry, for an entire human generation.

Bert Herridge Quits House For Home Ranch

OTTAWA (CP)—The misus has put her foot down."

New Democrat H. W. (Bert) Herridge, the baron of the Kootenays, was explaining why he has decided to retire from the hurly burly of House of Commons politics to his huge ranch in British Columbia when the next election is called.

Several factors influenced his decision: His age, his lack of desire to work the ranch again and a hankering to write the colorful story about the moving of the Herridge family from Britain to Canada.

But the main reason, he said in an interview, is that his wife wants him to retire so they can spend some time back in British Columbia.

Mrs. Herridge had urged him to quit before the 1962 election.

The Prime Minister

Crises Obscure Achievements

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Two years ago, on April 8, 1963, Lester Pearson went before an election-night celebration of Liberal party workers here to promise hopefully "I won't put you through this for another four years."

The Liberal leader had just emerged from a bitter, gruelling federal election campaign—the second in as many years and his third as party leader—with the largest number of Commons seats, 129 of 265.

Two weeks later he became Canada's 13th prime minister, head of a minority government.

At various times, as parliamentary battles raged and the second of two sessions dragged into the longest ever, the prime minister seemed to be on the verge of calling an election without waiting for the end of the four years.

There could still be a vote this year, of course, but the speculation subsided somewhat after Mr. Pearson, in a bantering exchange with Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker, broadly hinted he wouldn't call one this summer.

The two years have been marked by a succession of political crises that sometimes obscured, if the public's mind, a slowly lengthening record of legislative enactments.

GOT NEW FLAG

A new Canadian flag—a single red maple leaf on a white ground with a vertical red bar at each side—replaced the red ensign. The design was picked by a parliamentary committee which set aside the government's proposed three-leaf banner.

A seemingly interminable Commons debate on the flag was ended by the imposition of closure, a controversial parliamentary device whose use was invited by a member of the opposition, deputy Conservative leader Leon Balcer.

A contributory pension plan went on the books after nearly two years of negotiation with the provinces and redrafting by the government.

A bill allowing provinces to opt out of programs in which the cost is shared by the two levels of government was passed over Conservative opposition, clearing the way for prorogation of the marathon session.

While these and other legislative issues were under discussion in Parliament, a federal royal commission was touring the country studying the state of relations between English and French.

The government put new emphasis on federal-provincial cooperation by placing many of its legislative plans, including the pension bill, before federal-provincial conferences prior to their introduction in the Commons.

Out of one set of negotiations came a formula for making all changes to the constitution in Canada. This would turn the British North America Act—now a statute of the British Parliament—into a purely Canadian statute.

ISSUE FOR ELECTION

Agreement of the provinces to this formula, completing negotiations that started before the Pearson government took office, was unanimous. It became a high-priority item for legislative action in the next parliamentary session, and it shaped up as a possible major battleground for the next general election.

Also in its first two years, the government set up a new department of industry and an Economic Council of Canada to boost employment and productivity.

It won approval for an arrangement to redistribute parliamentary constituencies by independent commissions, a $100,000,000 Atlantic provinces development fund, a municipal development loan fund, and the reorganization of the military under a single defence staff.

Old age pensions were boosted $10 a month to $75 during the 1963 session.

A parliamentary commissioner with judicial status was given the job of passing on applications for divorce, long a contentious issue in the Commons.

Maritime trade unions were placed under government trusteeship in the wake of violence on the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence which resulted in the conviction and flight of Hal Banks, ousted boss of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada.

MINISTER ATTACKED

Justice Minister Favreau came under fire in the Commons for his handling of allegations that a ministerial executive assistant had tried to bribe a Montreal lawyer and that other aides, including Mr. Pearson's secretary, Guy Rouleau, exerted political pressure to get Lucien Rivard out of jail on bail.

While a judicial inquiry into the affair was being held, Rivard, wanted on narcotics charges in the United States, broke out of Montreal's Bordeaux Jail. The federal government posted a $15,000 reward for his recapture.

State Secretary Lamontagne and Postmaster-General Tremblay were questioned, and criticized, about so-called patronage purchases of furniture from a firm that had had dealings with the government and later went bankrupt.

Mr. Pearson took the unusual step of issuing a code of ethics to be followed by ministers and their aides, stressing that they must not be under obligation, or even appear to be under obligation, to anyone outside government.

OUTDRAWS POP SINGERS

LONDON (CP)—A Southwark youth club held an exhibition of photographs and souvenirs of the late U.S. President Kennedy, raising money for the Kennedy Memorial Library in Cambridge, Mass. "I was amazed at the response," said club organizer David Mannall. "The girls think more of John Kennedy than they do of pop singers and film stars."

Mr. Hiram Mumby, Springbrook, was chairman for the interesting program. Mr. and Mrs. Barlow were the recipients of a fine movie camera, as a token of appreciation from their friends and former customers.

Mr. and Mrs. William Rutherford held an auction sale of livestock and implements and some household goods, at their farm home on Saturday. They have sold their farm and will be moving to their new home in Campbellford, later this spring.

Mrs. Allan Farrey, Stevie and Jennifer of Oakville, visited her father, William Morton Sr. and Bob, on the weekend.

The Sunday School of Rylstone United Church opened for the summer last Sunday morning.

Mrs. Willis Irwin and her niece, Mrs. Lloyd Anderson, attended the funeral service for Harry Walsh, beloved husband of the former Catharine McKeown, in Toronto on Monday.

Fred Spencer, Toronto, was a weekend visitor with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Spencer and Sherry.

YEARS AGO

Babe Pratt stood near the players' bench,
His face was dark, like thunder,
"What's wrong with Baby?" asked the coach.
"My knees are sunder."
His pants sagged closely to his knees,
As on the ice he knelt.
His sympathetic coach spiked
"What you need, is a belt."
The Babe's eyes brightened at the thought,
Smiled he, "You said it, brother,
I had three 'belts' before the game,
You wouldn't have another?"

Of their favorite clubs from the Wings to the "Bruses".

They're tonsilling gaily "That Tumble-down Shack."

In staid old Chicago they're trilling a lay,
"Your our sunshine, dear Billy, our own little Roxy."

"You made us what we are today,"
Is the Blakian tribute down Montreal way.

In Detroit's fumed Olympian the fan throws slings
As he's at the great Gordie, so-ho go the Wings."

From the referees' chambers comes this plaintive sigh,
In mournful "What Kind of a Dam Fool am I?"

Bower Doesn't Like 'Charging Habs'

* * * * Use Sticks

By ED SIMON

TORONTO (CP) — Johnny Bower got a tongue lashing from his coach last season for going to the assistance of an injured opponent.

It created quite a stir in the Toronto Maple Leafs' camp at the time. The veteran goaltender talked back to Punch Imlach and the angry coach barred the club's dressing room to reporters when the incident was made public.

Imlach, long since reconciled with the press, explained the incident Wednesday as the Leafs worked out for tonight's fourth game of their Stanley Cup semi-final against Montreal Canadiens. He wasn't objecting to the principle of Bower's kindly act but to the man involved.

The player whose collision with the end boards precipitated the incident was John Ferguson, the Montreal right winger, who was a stick boy for Vancouver Canucks of the Western League when Bower played for them 11 years ago.

BOWER ISN'T HAPPY

The 40-year-old netminder is no longer happy about the way Ferguson handles a hockey stick. He and team-mate Dave Balon were both involved in goalmouth collisions with Bower in Tuesday night's game, in which the Leafs came up with a 3-2 overtime victory after two successive losses.

"They have a habit of coming at the goalie with their sticks," Bower complained. "They should be given charging penalties."

Ferguson got a penalty after his brush with Bower but it wasn't for charging. He was assessed a major, along with Kent Douglas, after a free-swinging exchange with the Toronto defenceman. Douglas got an additional two minutes for holding when he pulled the Canadien away from Bower.

Imlach said Ferguson had employed similar tactics in the first two games in Montreal and that Leafs goalie Terry Sawchuk had suffered a minor shoulder injury in the second-game collision.

GIVEN GRADES

"The first time it's a coincidence," said the coach. "The second time it's double coincidence. The third time it's premeditated and the fourth time's deliberate. Well, he's up to the third time — premeditated."

Meanwhile, Montreal coach Toe Blake said he plans to continue with Gump Worsley in the nets. Charlie Hodge, his other goaltender, is still in hospital with a groin injury picked up in Montreal's second game, although he was reported ready for release tonight or Friday.

In any event, Blake said he was more than satisfied with Worsley's show - stopping performance Tuesday night and absolved him of blame for the defeat.

Imlach also praised Worsley but felt he was reported ready by the Leafs' erratic shooting. Blake thought Tuesday night's game was the poorest of the three.

"My guys didn't have much drive and I didn't think the Leafs played that well," the Montreal coach said.

BOWMAN VILLE, Ont. (CP)—Spectators may have thought it a trifle odd that the speedy centre wore figure skates when the other hockey players looked more the part.

The coach of the team from Whitby, Ont., said he didn't have enough boys in his Grade 6 class to make up a team. So Dagmar Boettcher, 11 - year - old honey blonde, came to the rescue.

Dagmar assisted on a goal by James McGrath but the opposing Salem Hawks scored twice after recovering from the shock of bodychecking a member of the fair sex, to win 2-1.

'Old Scarface' Speaks Out

Says Officiating Is Ridiculous

By JERRY GLADMAN

CHICAGO (CP) — The biggest change in the National Hockey League in the last four years is the refereeing, Ted Lindsay, left winger with Detroit Red Wings, said Wednesday.

TED LINDSAY

Lindsay, 39, who returned to the NHL this season after a four-year retirement, suggested that officiating is "ridiculous" and pointed particularly to misconduct penalties.

"You'd think the officials were the ones that fans come to see instead of the players," Lindsay said in an interview.

Asked if he thought the officiating is lower in recent years, Lindsay said: "A better word would be ridiculous."

Lindsay, who went into the 1965 Stanley Cup playoffs with a record 1,068 minutes in NHL penalties, said referees don't understand the pressure on players in the game.

Lindsay said, however, that not all the blame could be placed on the referees.

"You can't work with someone always looking over your shoulder."

CRITICIZES YOSS

"This guy Voss (referee-in-chief Carl Voss) sits up in the stands and watches every move they make."

He said it seems "they are trying to work international rules into professional hockey. Hockey is a game of body contact and that's the way it should be played."

He said a lot of "petty" calls are bad for the game.

"As soon as a fight breaks out, the linesmen immediately jump in and there is a lot of grabbing, kicking, shoving and piling on. In the old days the officials used to step back and let the boys fight. With all this piling on you've got 10 guys involved instead of the original two.

He said he didn't think fights on the ice were bad for children watching.

"I certainly don't mind my 10-year-old seeing fights like that. Nor do I mind him being involved when he's playing hockey. I think it wouldn't hurt him to have his ears pinned back once in a while. It would probably help build his character."

OHA Senior 'A'

Woodstock Wins Title

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Woodstock Athletes captured their second consecutive Ontario Senior A hockey championship Wednesday night with a 3-2 victory over Collingwood Shipbuilders. The victory gave Woodstock the best-of-seven series in four straight.

Toby Black, Jack McIntyre and rookie Ron Ryan scored the Woodstock goals. Defenceman Dave Nickalishen scored for Collingwood. The Athletes took period leads of 1-0 and 2-1 before Ryan scored the clincher midway through the third period.

Collingwood pulled goalie Harry Lumley with a minute and 25 seconds in regulation time in an attempt to get back in the game. Woodstock's Bobby Robinson was in the penalty box at the time. A stout Woodstock defence limited Collingwood to one shot on net with a sixth attacker.

Collingwood outshot the Athletics 32 to 27.

Woodstock now meets Rouyn-Noranda Alcosettes in the best-of-seven Eastern Canada semi-finals. The series opens Friday night in Woodstock.

UNSKEN WAGES RISE

Supplementary labor income—employers' contributions to pension and welfare plans and unemployment insurance — increased in Canada from $1,826,000,000 in 1945 to $6,876,000,000 in 1962.

Kingston Junior Suspended

HAMILTON (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association handed out four-game suspensions Wednesday to two players who took part in a stick-swinging duel during a junior B playoff game here last Sunday.

Hamilton Bees' Paul Chiarot and Kingston Frontenacs' Wayne Clancy were given the alternative of sitting out one game or paying $30 fines.

They were given match penalties in the second period before Bees' won the game and the best-of-seven quarter final 4-1.

Clancy's suspension will carry over to next year. Frontenacs were eliminated by their loss Sunday.

GERMANS VANISH

BERLIN (AP) — The East German census reports a net decrease in population of 109,132 last year. The official figure for last Dec. 31 was 17,011,951.

Acquit Roger Maris

FORT LAUDERDALE Fla. (AP) — Baseball star Roger Maris was acquitted Wednesday of an assault charge in connection with a barroom argument a week ago.

The New York Yankee outfielder testified he became involved only when he stepped between the plaintiff, Chicago model Jerry Modelewski, and Yankee third baseman Clete Boyer, also charged with assault and battery.

"I did not swing at anyone," Maris testified. "I was shoved from behind and thrown against the plaintiff. That was all."

Maris said he stepped between the two men "when I noticed Clete was getting mad." But Maris said he heard no argument up to that point.

Boyer's case comes up May 11. He is free on $200 bond.

Maris said later he will sue Modzelewski for damages in excess of $100,000.

Modzelewski testified that trouble started in a bar March 31 when Boyer made an objectionable remark which Modzelewski understood to be directed at him. The apology was refused.

Championship Opener

Flyers Defeat Marlboros

TORONTO (CP) — Niagara Falls Flyers figured to be rusty after an 11-day layoff. Toronto Marlboros figured to be tired after three games in four nights.

But that was the way things worked out when the two clubs opened their best-of-seven final in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series championship Wednesday night. But as the evening wore on, the Flyers' rust wore off and the Marlies' fatigue grew.

The result was a comfortable victory for the classy farm club of the National League Boston Bruins. The timing was on their passing and many of their shots went astray but a way.

A sparse crowd of 2,510 watched the Flyers stumble to a 3-0 lead in the first period of Wednesday night's game. Marlboros cut the lead to 3-1 in the second intermission but never came closer the rest of the way.

Linemates Derek Sanderson and Bill Goldsworthy did most of the damage for the winners. Goldsworthy netting up two goals by Sanderson and taking a pass from him for a third. The fourth tally came from Jim Lorenta.

Stirling To Meet Port Elgin

Dates were announced late yesterday for the all-Ontario OHA Intermediate "C" championship series between Stirling and Port Elgin.

The clubs have agreed to a best-of-five series.

Port Elgin will open the series at Stirling Arena Saturday night, at 8.30, with the second game, also a "home" affair for Stirling, being played at Trenton Sunday afternoon. Game time is 3.00 p.m.

Stirling will make the 250-mile trip to Port Elgin for the third and fourth, if necessary, games on Easter weekend.

Wings Limp; Hawks High

Hornets Can Help

By STERLING TAYLOR

CHICAGO (CP)—As many as five Detroit Red Wings may not be able to limp into action tonight after the battering they took from Chicago Black Hawks in the first three games of their Stanley Cup semi-final. But the thoughtful Chicago organization has arranged for reinforcements.

Buffalo Bisons, the No. 1 Chicago farm team, eliminated Pittsburgh Hornets, Detroit's American Hockey League affiliate, from the Calder Cup playoffs Wednesday night. That makes nine of the Hornets, listed on the parent club's eligibility roster, available if coach Sid Abel needs them.

The Wings lost three players—left wingers Larry Jeffrey and Val Fonteyne and defenceman Gary Bergman—while winning the opening two games of the best-of-seven series in Detroit. Tuesday night's 5-2 defeat here may have cost them another left winger, Ron Murphy, and defenceman Doug Barkley.

Jeffrey, in hospital in Detroit with a back injury, is definitely out of tonight's game. The others are doubtful starters. Fonteyne with a pinched neck nerve, Bergman with a knee injury, Murphy with a reinjured shoulder and Barkley with a pulled groin.

The Hawks, on the other hand, seem to be getting healthier and gathering steam at every turn. Scoring ace Bobby Hull and centre Phil Esposito, their most valuable invalids, are showing every sign of recovery although Esposito missed the second Detroit game with a bad back and Hull's gimpy knees made him a doubtful starter when the series opened.

Hull seemed in top form Tuesday night, scoring his fourth and fifth goals of the series and playing a strong two-way game.

Ted Lindsay, Detroit's 38-year-old forward, said Wednesday the Wings had played below par in all three games. The battle - scarred Lindsay, who returned to the National Hockey League this season after a four-year absence, was probably referring to the younger members of the club.

To date, the older players have been forced to carry most of the load. Lindsay, along with nine - year veteran Norm Ullman, Gordie Howe, the 37-year-old super-star, and 34-year-old Alex Delvecchio have provided two-goals a piece.

The other members of the club have combined for four.

"It's been that way all year though," Barkley said. "Bruce (MacGregor) is the only one that's been doing anything in the scoring department."

MacGregor scored 21 goals during the regular 70-game schedule, but has failed to count during the first three playoff games.

Billy Harris Scores Three

Americans Defeat Aces

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The end of a 15-game scoring slump for Bruce Cline marked the end of the hockey season for Baltimore Clippers.

The 33-year-old right winger, who had one of his poorest seasons in 10 years in the American Hockey League, fired three goals for Hershey Bears Wednesday night to give them a 7-2 victory over Baltimore in the fifth and deciding game of their best-of-five Calder Cup quarter-final.

Buffalo Bisons qualified to meet the Bears by crushing Pittsburgh Hornets 7-3 to take their best-of-five set 3-1. Their best-of-five semi-final opens in Buffalo Saturday night.

In the other semi - final bracket, Rochester Americans are consolidating a 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven series with Quebec Aces as Billy Harris scored the first three goals in a 5-1 victory on Quebec Ice.

LOST HARVEY

To compound the woes of the eastern division champions, they lost veteran defencemen Doug Harvey with a broken thumb and Jim Morrison strike a groin injury. Raymond Larose of St. Louis Braves of the Central Professional League will join them for tonight's fifth game in Rochester.

Eastern Baseball Meeting

Baseball will hold the spotlight at a key meeting here in Belleville this Sunday.

The Eastern Ontario Baseball Association will hold a general meeting, at Richard Ellis Printing, Fahey Street, at 2:30 p.m.

The meeting is for managers and coaches of all divisions. This covers tyke, peewee, bantam, midget, juvenile, junior, intermediate and senior.

Harold Griffin, the E.O.B.A.'s Zone Three representative, has asked that all concerned and interested parties attend this organizational meeting.

Baseball talk, especially in the upper classifications, has been conspicuous by its absence here in Belleville this spring.

However, this city's minor baseball association stated the other day that it hoped to place entries in inter-city play, against such centres as Oshawa, Peterborough and Kingston.

And, according to the grapevine, Cannifton is said to be making plans to enter the E.O.B.A.'s senior division, as well as the South Hastings League.

FORMER HAB DIES

MONTREAL (CP) — Roger Leger, a defenceman with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League during the 1940s, died Wednesday after a heart attack at his home in L'Annonciation, north of here. Leger, 46, played for New York Rangers and Buffalo from 1943 to 1946 when he joined the Canadiens.

Sunday Softball Deadline

Boosmen of the Belleville and District Softball League have called for a show of cards at a key meeting this Sunday afternoon.

The meeting, at Belleville's Club Canara at 2:00 p.m., will be an entry deadline affair.

To date, four clubs have voiced their intentions of entering the group this season and backed their intentions by attending two previous meetings. These clubs are: Tweed Lombanks, Trenton Commercial Printers, Belleville Ellis Juniors and Bloomfield.

Rumor has it that several other clubs, including Madoc, Trudeau Motors of Belleville, and Stirling, expect to enter — providing night ball will be played. However, these possible entries have not sent representatives to the meetings.

Night ball has been assured in the other all four centres, so it is a "show or fold" situation for all concerned this Sunday.

Entry fee is $35 per club and league president Frank Insley has stressed the importance of "all intended entries attending this meeting." It was hinted at the last meeting that no extension of the deadline would be given without very good reason.

Other league plans for the fast-approaching season will also be finalized at Sunday's gathering.

Leafs, Wings Favored Tonight

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto bookmakers favor Detroit Red Wings at 13-10 odds to win the Stanley Cup this year, while giving Montreal Canadiens an 11-5 chance.

Toronto Maple Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks are held as 5-1 longshots.

The Leafs are 6⅛ to 7⅛ favorites to tie their semi-final series against Montreal tonight. This means a better taking Toronto would be required to put up $7.50 to get $5, while a Montreal supporter would risk $5 for a return of $6.50.

Detroit is a 13-5 pick over Chicago in the fourth game of their semi - final series tonight.

BMHA Holds Annual Meet On Sunday

Play may be nearing a close for this centre's minor hockey players but the Belleville Minor Hockey Association still has one of its most important functions of the year on tap.

The organization's annual general meeting will be held this Sunday, April 14, at 1.30 p.m. at the Recreation Centre.

President E. H. Adamson has urged that all persons connected with the BMHA attend the meeting.

Amendments to the constitution are in the hands of secretary Paul Wall and those eligible to vote are: officers, members of the executive committee, conveners, assistant conveners, all former officers of the association, currently active referees, managers, coaches and assistant coaches.

Hamilton Jrs. Nip Etobicoke

TORONTO (CP) — Hamilton Bees defeated Etobicoke Indians 8-6 Wednesday night to take a 3-1 lead in their Ontario Hockey Association Junior B semi-final playoff series.

TO INVITE PHILIP

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prince Philip will be invited to open the 1967 Pan-American Games in Winnipeg, Jim Daly, executive director of the games society, said Wednesday.

For 19 games this spring, the thunder that resides in Al Kaline's bat sounded like a whimper. Any talk that Detroit Tigers might have an outside shot at the American League pennant was strictly whistling in the dark.

Kaline, around whom the Tiger attack has revolved ever since he won the batting championship 10 years ago, had been struggling through training with his batting average hovering near .150. And the Tiger brass was a bit concerned.

The veteran right fielder batted .263, second-lowest figure in his career, last year with just 17 homers, a drop of 10 from his 1963 figure. In 19 games this spring he had driven in just three runs and had no homers.

But Al has come alive at last and his awakening came not a moment too soon for acting manager Bob Swift. Kaline's third homer in the last five games helped the Tigers to their 9-4 victory over New York Mets in a baseball exhibition Wednesday.

"Al's building up for something," Swift said after the game, "and I think it's a great year."

Reserve infielder Phil Gagliano ripped three hits and drove in three runs as the world champion St. Louis Cardinals blanked Philadelphia Phillies 5-0. Gagliano belted a two-run homer, a triple and a single.

FINISH TRAINING

Doug Clemens poked three hits, two of them doubles, as Chicago Cubs finished their Arizona training with an 8-5 victory over Cleveland Indians. Billy Williams homered and Ernie Banks had a triple and single for the Cubs.

Gene Alley's three-run homer keyed Pittsburgh Pirates' 4-3 victory over Kansas City. It was the Athletics' ninth straight loss.

Felipe Alou and Mack Jones rocked Roland Sheldon for homers as Milwaukee Braves whacked New York Yankees 4-1. John Blanchard's double in the sixth brought in the only Yankee score—first earned run off Milwaukee pitching in 35 innings.

Pete Rose and Tony Perez homered for Cincinnati as the Reds topped Minnesota 5-3. Tony Oliva connected for the Twins.

Washington spun off its fourth straight victory, whipping Baltimore 5-2. Don Blasingame and Ed Brinkman had three hits apiece for the Senators. Charley Lau and Norm Siebern homered for the Orioles.

Some of their recently cut players came back to haunt San Francisco Giants as Tacoma of the Pacific Coast League won a 7-6 squeaker. Gil Garrido, one of those cut last week, drove in the winning run in the ninth with a single. Willie McCovey's three-run homer was the big blow for the Giants.

Will Shade Reds; Dodgers Well Down

Picks Cards To Take National League

By JACK HAND

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—St. Louis Cardinals will shade Cincinnati Reds in the National League this season with Philadelphia Phillies, San Francisco Giants and Milwaukee Braves snapping at their heels. If Sandy Koufax can work regularly, Los Angeles Dodgers also will be up there. Only Houston Astros and New York Mets appear hopelessly out of it.

Nobody has repeated in the National League since Milwaukee in 1957-58 and only three teams have won successive pennants in the last 20 years for that doesn't mean there's a law against it. The Cards are a solid ball club at every position, a little thin in reserves and possibly in the bullpen. Like all the other teams, the Cards could be floored by an injury to a key regular.

The annual guessing contest is complicated this spring by the aches and pains of such stars as Orlando Cepeda, Roberto Clemente, Hank Aaron, Bill Mazeroski and Koufax. The healthiest team may get a jump in April and never be headed.

Here's the way it looks from here:

1. St. Louis
2. Cincinnati
3. Philadelphia
4. San Francisco
5. Milwaukee
6. Los Angeles
7. Pittsburgh
8. Chicago
9. Houston
10. New York

The Cards have the same lineup that captured home last October and then defeated New York Yankees in a seven-game World Series. They last a manager when Johnny Keane moved over to the Yanks but took on a favorite in Red Schoendienst, as his successor.

A year ago the outfield was unsettled. Now the Cards have Lou Brock and Mike Shannon to go with Curt Flood. The infield is all of major caliber. Tim McCarver, still nursing a broken hand, is the only established catcher. The pitching has been helped by the addition of Bob Purkey from Cincinnati and Tracy Stallard from New York.

Cincinnati has looked great in spring training. Frank Robinson is slamming home runs. The pitching is the best in the league, but the infield is unsettled at first and third.

Philadelphia has added Dick Stuart to hit home runs and Bo Belinsky as another left hander to the pitching side. It remains to be seen whether there will be any reaction from the collapse of last September when the club let the pennant slide out of its grasp in a 10-game September losing streak.

Cepeda's slow recovery from knee surgery adds doubt to the Giant situation where Herman Franks, a coach last year, has taken over as manager. The potential is there with Willie Mays still leading the way but the Giants have an annoying habit of failing to live up to expectations.

Milwaukee's hitters scare everybody in the league but Bobby Bragan's pitching still may be a little too green for the long run.

Koufax is the key to the Dodgers. If he is a once-a-week pitcher there will be a heavy burden on Don Drysdale, Claude Osteen and Johnny Podres.

Houston has hopes and a new domed stadium. The Mets look better but not enough better to make up the 13 games separating them from ninth place and Houston.

Retire Threat Bargaining Point

"Faloney Not Serious" Says Trimble

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Jim Trimble said Wednesday he isn't taking seriously quarterback Bernie Faloney's threat to sit out the 1965 Eastern Football Conference season if contract difficulties with Montreal Alouettes are not resolved.

Trimble also said the Alouettes would "never consider" a deal to trade Faloney to Toronto Argonauts. Bernie has indicated he would welcome, such a move.

"I don't doubt that Bernie would like to play in Toronto because it would be a lot more convenient for him," said Trimble.

"But this idea of retiring is a bargaining thing on his part, and I don't take it seriously."

Faloney said in Regina earlier this week that if he couldn't negotiate a contract with the Alouettes, and if the ALs refuse to trade him to Toronto, he is prepared to sit out the season.

Faloney is anxious to move to Toronto so he can keep an eye on his business interests in Hamilton.

Alouettes gave up four first-string players last Jan. 5 to obtain Faloney, 29, away from Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Speculative figures on his contract demands range from $40,000 a season to $200,000 for a three-year contract.

"I'm having trouble keeping my message under ten words."

Montreal Wins CNR Tournament

Belleville's entry in the annual CNRA hockey tournament, played in Stratford last weekend, lost the championship game to Montreal by a tight 2-1 score.

Montreal scored the winning goal with about four minutes left to play and with a Belleville man in the penalty box.

Earlier in the ten-team tourney, Belleville defeated Sarnia 4-2 and Capreol 5-1 in the semi-final. Montreal reached the titular game with a 4-3 win over Toronto and a 10-1 whipping of Hamilton.

Scoring for Belleville in the tourney were Bob Brooks, with two, Doug Moreau and Stu Muirhead in the club's first game. In the semi-final, Jack Hughes potted two, Muirhead, Bucky Zihler and Brooks one apiece. Hughes got the lone finals marker.

The CNR team will meet the BMHA coaches in an exhibition game, for crippled children, here this Friday night, at 9:30.

Master's Favorite

Nicklaus Shoots Practice 67

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — "I don't mind being the favorite as long as it stands that way Sunday night," said Jack Nicklaus today in preparing to tee for the first round of the 72-hole, four-day Masters golf tournament.

The strapping blonde bomber from Columbus, Ohio, a non-winner on the winter circuit, said he is fit and ready to match strokes with 90 other leading pros and amateurs of the world in the first prestige tourney of the year.

Nicklaus, the 1963 Masters king, was a 4-1 choice in the informal odds. Right behind him came Arnold Palmer, the defending champion and record four-time winner, at 9-1.

The odds drop to 8-1 for a quartet rated by Nicklaus and Palmer as their chief contenders.

HAS WON TWO

The four are Doug Sanders, of Okl., Calif., only winner of two tournaments on the winter tour; Billy Casper of Peacock Gap, Calif., the one-time fat man who has thinned down to 185 pounds; Tony Lema, the British Open champ from San Leandro, Calif., whose game has been off lately, and Gary Player, the poised, muscular little fellow from South Africa.

There are also four Canadians entered — pros Stan Leonard, Vancouver, and George Knudson, Toronto, and amateurs Gary Cowan, Kitchener, and Nick Weslock, Toronto.

Nicklaus demonstrated why he is rated as the man to beat when he toured the par 36-36—72, 6,980 - yard layout of the Augusta National Golf Club Tuesday in 67.

Today's Coaches Only Yap at Officials

Where, Oh Where Are Those Old Quotes?

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

These Stanley Cup playoffs aren't fun any more. The coaches, apart from yapping at game officials, haven't been producing those delightful quotes that set them a breed apart.

In the old days, and even up to a few years ago, sports-page readers were subjected to some deathless sayings, such as:

"We're going to play this series one game at a time . . .

"We aren't dead yet. Sure, those guys lead us 3-0 in games, but we have some surprises for them. . . .

"I'll tell you one thing, my club has lots of hustle. . . .

AND THERE'S MORE

Dink Carroll of the Montreal Gazette dug back into old files to supply a few more, such as:

"We had the defence and we skated and the goals came. I couldn't ask for much more. . . .

"We've lost the first one or two before and come back. . . .

"Things'll be different when we get back in our own rink. . . .

"That one could have gone either way. . . .

"Yeah, I'll play with the same lineup. . . .

"It's going to be a tough series and we'll have to keep on working hard if we hope to win. . . .

"We've set our sights on winning four games and we haven't changed. . . .

"My guy was screened. He never saw the puck until it was in the net. . . .

A LITTLE HUNGRIER

"We won because we were a little hungrier than they were. If we can stay clear of injuries we'll take it all. . . .

"We played our best defensive game in quite some time. It was a real team effort. . . .

"They're not so tough. We'll show up for the next game. . . ."

Then, there are some more chestnuts:

"It's tough to play against six guys and the referee, too. . . .

"This is the one we wanted to win.

"I'm sticking with the guys who got us here. . . .

"My big defenceman is so racked up he should be in hospital, but he's got guts. . . .

"Wait'll next year. . . .

"They played as if next year's contracts were on the line. . . ."

into a quick 2-0 lead but Rollins made it 2-2 by the end of the first, led 5-3 after two and scored three more in the third.

Terry Meagher fired three Rollins goals with two for Cliff Janitsch and singletons for Fred Stickle, Mario Venutti and Brian Cousins. Venutti had three assists, T. Meagher and Cousins two each, J. Mulvihill, Stickle, A. Neill and Bill Buchanan one.

BIDS ARE OPEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bids are open for the job of coaching Canada's national basketball team, says Luke Moyls of Vancouver, president of the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association. The CABA has launched a program to pick a coach, players and training site then get on with the business of preparing for a 16-game Latin American tour in June. The team has received a $12,434 federal grant for the tour.

Riteways, Rollins Win Exhibitions

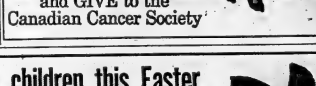
Riteways blanked the Bruins, novice city champs, 7-0, while Rollins dumped the bantam city championship Brelin squad 8-3.



This was expected to be the last exhibition action for both Rollins and Riteways.

The novice team has entered the Easter week tournament in Brampton. Riteways scored two goals in the first, two in the second and another trio in the third.

B. Reeves scored two goals with one each for Dave Flesch, Jim Richardson, Mark Coates, Murray Dales and Danny Lapeneste. Dales and Richardson each had two assists, Reeves, Warner, Coates, Mike Hayes and Flesch one apiece.

Buckaroos now will play the winner of the semi - final between Seattle Totems and Victoria Maple Leafs which Seattle leads 3-1. Fifth game of that series is at Seattle Friday night.

Portland ended the regular season far ahead of the pack at the top of the standings and lost the first game of the semi-finals to the Canucks.

Portland took a 2-1 lead in the first period before 7,974 fans Wednesday night and made it 4-2 after the second.

The Trots

TORONTO (CP)—Sir Carlith withstood the challenge of six fast - stepping pacers Wednesday night to win the featured eighth race at Greenwood Raceway.

The five-year-old from Ken Higgins of Toronto Stable was hard pressed to hold off the determined bids of 7-5 pick High Patch, and Frisco Lee J., who finished third.

Sir Carlith's win was the second of the night for driver John Hayes, who scored back-to-back wins with Lucky Beejay, from Oshawa's Beejay Stable in the seventh race, and Sir Carlith in the eighth.

John Armstrong's Dark Potomac from Ottawa won the first race and combined with Meadow Rob from Gerald Robinson's Orono Stable in the second to complete a $29.10 daily double.

BATAVIA, N.Y. (CP)—A pair of Canadian owned trotters were surprises in the featured claiming handicap trot at Batavia Downs Wednesday night —one by nearly winning and another by failing to live up to her reputation.

Miss Niagara, owned by the Galbraith Stable at Tara, Ont., and driven by Clint Galbraith, was going after her third straight victory and had been bet down to 3 to 5 by the fans. The seven-year-old couldn't do better than fifth place.

Sportsman, owned by the St. Hubert Stable of Quebec and Driven by Ron Turcotte, was a 12-to-1 shot and led most of the way, but faded to second behind Clever Guy Abbee in the dash to the wire. The latter won and paid $10.10. Sportsman paid $11 to place and $10.20 to show.

The Tracks

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP)—Four jockeys shared the riding honors Wednesday at Fort Erie before 4,984 fans.

Paul (Pee Jay) Bailey, Avelino Gomez, Nick Shuk and Wayne Harris each rode two winners on the eight-race card.

Bailey won the first two, Gomez the third and fifth, Shuk the fourth and seventh and Harris the sixth and eighth.

Bailey was on Miss Talk in the first, returning $3.70, and on Chillcoot in the second, returning $3.70 and completing a $7.60 daily-double, one of the smallest on record here.

Gagnon's two-year-old Chinookeaque to his first victory in 16 in $11.90.

Gomez and Bill Beasley's Peter Picker, nearly an odds-on favorite, returned $4.20 and combined with Koruleva for a $27.30 quinella in the fifth.

Shuk rode Jerry Bozzo's Tipsidy to her first victory and a $6.90 payoff in the fourth.

In the featured seventh, Shuk piloted Bill Beasley's Harris through the stretch to take $8.50 victory as Albion Star, Harris was second with Brother Leo.

Harris, Canada's leading apprentice riider last season, drove Take Notice to a narrow win over Smerky. Harris also won with Solid Mike.

Gordie Howe's Hockey

By GORDIE HOWE

There's nothing quite like the thrill of your first goal in Stanley Cup play, the world's championship of hockey. It took me two years for me to get mine. And under present-day rules, I'd still be looking for it.

We were playing the New York Rangers in Madison Square Garden. It was in 1948. Jack Lancien a defenceman called up from New Haven for the playoffs, was penalized for holding Sid Abel, then the Red Wings' captain and star centre, now our coach and general manager.

Red Kelly scored on a 50 footer. Exactly 34 seconds later I put the puck behind the New York goalie a second time after Kelly flipped the puck across the rink to Bill Quackenbush and Bill relayed it to me at the goalmouth.

Lancien still was in the penalty box when I scored my goal. In those days a player served the full two minutes of a minor penalty instead of coming back on the ice as soon as a goal was scored by the opposing team.

It wasn't until eight years later the rule was changed to allow the player to return. At that time, Detroit and Montreal in particular, had such outstanding power plays that invariably when they got a man advantage, they'd put the puck in the net.

On occasions, just as we did against New York that time, two goals would result. I've seen occasions where teams got as many as three goals in the two minutes while the other team was shorthanded.

I remember another time I 'called the shot' on a goal in the Stanley Cup playoffs. It was the first game of the 1955 semi-finals with Toronto at Detroit's Olympia.

I already had scored one goal and we had a big lead in the third period when Jim Thomson was penalized for cross-checking Marty Pavelich. I was wide of the net on my first shot and Toronto froze the puck, forcing a faceoff in the Toronto end.

Hank Shurmur, cameraman for a Detroit television station, was working right near the gate. I skated over and told him to get set and I'd pop one in. Toronto got the puck out but Dutch Reibel reversed play, got it to Alex Delvecchio who passed to me. I put it just between Harry Lumley's pad and the post and we won, 7-4. Lucky, eh what!

Marmora Wins League Title

MARMORA — Defeating Madoc in four consecutive games, Marmora captured the Trent Valley Hockey League championship recently.

Marmora reached the league finals by edging Stirling three games to two in a close semi-final series.

In the final win over Madoc a tight 4-3 affair played in Tweed, Marmora got goals from Rutherford, Jones, Meeks and Darrah. Al Killilan played outstanding hockey in the goal.

IS TOP DEFENCEMAN

SEATTLE (CP)—Pat Stapleton, at home playing from centre ice or the blueline for Portland Buckaroos, has been voted the Western Hockey League's outstanding defenceman for the 1964-65 season. Stapleton received 69 points in balloting by WHL players, 60 more than Seattle's Gordon Sinclair, his nearest rival.

Kingston Beaten 9-4 In Opener

KINGSTON (CP)—Sherbrooke Beavers trounced Kingston Aces 9-4 Wednesday night in the first game of their best-of-five Allan Cup Eastern semi-final.

Second game of the series will be here Friday.

The Beavers took a commanding 5-1 lead in the first period and went into the third with a 7-4 edge.

Jerry Fleury, picked up by the Aces from Morrisburg Combines of the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Senior Hockey League earlier this week, replaced Tom Mercer in the net for the third period. Serge Aubry stopped 42 shots, compared with the 30 shots blocked by Kingston goalies.

A total of 14 penalties were handed out.

Sport Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

In the 1920s and '30s, Northern Ontario was a favorite hunting ground for National Hockey League scouts. And they plucked some good ones—Larry Aurie, Taffy Abel, Pep Kelly, Bob Gracie, Don Grosso and many others.

Around Sudbury and North Bay, old-timers still talk of Jim Dewey, the man they say was the greatest who never turned pro. Memories of Dewey were rekindled this week when he died in Toronto at the age of 52, a victim of leukemia.

Older sports fans remember him as the star of a Sudbury hockey team that won the Allan Cup in 1937, in the palmy days of Canadian senior hockey when the Allan Cup was a rival to the Stanley Cup. After Maple Silverman's Wolves won the title that year just about every pro scout in the country went after Dewey.

But Jim simply laughed them away. He was busy learning the silver mining business.

Silverman had gathered together a powerhouse that year. Included on the Wolves roster were Red. H a m m i l l, Ringo Kampman, Grosso and Murph Chamberlain, chaps who later went up to the NHL. But Dewey decided his future was in the north. He became an acknowledged e x p e r t in diamond drilling and gained rich fees as a consultant in a private capacity.

Bill Durnan, who played goal for Kirkland Lake Blue Devils in 1937 and who later guarded the nets for Montreal Canadiens, recalled Dewey's great play.

"The Wolves licked us something like 9-1 in Kirkland Lake and 5-0 in Sudbury and Jimmy was the star," Durnan told Lee Taylor of the Kitchener Record after Dewey's death.

"He scored a goal on me which I still can't believe go' into the rigging. I was flat on the ice in the crease with the puck close to my body. I hadn't been able to get my hands on it but I was certain no one could score from that position."

Dewey fooled him. Somehow he lifted the puck over Durnan's pads, into the net.

A year later, when the Wolves went to Prague and won the world title, Dewey stayed home. He was too busy in the mining business. He had enjoyed a taste of world play, anyway. He was with Saskatoon Quakers who had taken the world championship in Milan in 1924 and en route to Europe, the Quakers stopped off at Sudbury and beat a Silverman-coached club 3-0.

Dewey returned to Sudbury in 1935 and blossomed as a standout centre. That's when the pro scouts started to take notice of him.

He later moved to Toronto and two years ago doctors gave him from one to three years to live.

Julie Harris Was Splendid In "Hall of Fame Show"

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—It is always a joy to watch Julie Harris in action, whether she plays Queen Victoria as in a Hall of Fame show of another season, or Florence Nightingale as she did in Wednesday night's The Holy Terror on NBC.

Miss Harris turned in her usual fine performance as other characters were almost incidental. But James Lee's television script, giving a more over-lightly treatment of the career of this stubborn and dedicated reformer in Victorian Britain, proved less than stimulating.

Even with 90 minutes, time was too short to permit more than a sketchy summary of Florence Nightingale's struggle to introduce better nursing care for the wounded and feverstricken soldiers of the Crimean War.

Hall of Fame is one of the last outposts of quality television drama. One only wishes the material with which its performers have worked this last season had been more satisfying.

Recommended tonight: Celebrity Game, CBS, 9:30-10 EST—Special premiere of a panel show with Carl Reiner as host; Perry Como show, NBC, 10-11—Guest: Mimi Hines with Al Hirt, Connie Stevens and Woody Allen as guest stars.

Audrey Hepburn Praised For Good Sportsmanship

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Academy Awards aftermath:

"Isn't it marvelous? Isn't it beautiful?" Bob Hope is credited as he gazed over the glittering throng at the Oscar Ball. "They all came out. That's what is great about it: They all came out."

Indeed, it seemed as though Hollywood's entire galaxy, from Francis X. Bushman to Sandra Dee, had turned out to show there is life in the old town yet. There was happy feeling in the air, both at the awards telecast in Santa Monica's Civic Auditorium and at the ball in the Beverly Hilton's International Ballroom.

Not since the prewar era when awards were given at dinner parties in hotel ballrooms had there been so much community spirit.

QUESTIONS RAISED

There was the usual quarterbacking about some aspects of the awards. Much of it centered on the choice of Peter Ustinov for best supporting actor. No one questioned the talent of his comic invention as the all-thumbs jewel helster in Topkapi. But was he in support?

Ustinov shared star billing with Melina Mercouri and Maximilian Schell.

If there were an Oscar for good sportsmanship, Audrey Hepburn would have won it. She could have stayed mainly in the plains of Spain. Despite academy rules she nominated her for My Fair Lady, she flew here to share her co-workers' triumphs.

A bit of drama almost was passed over in the rush of major awards at the end of the program. It was a message from Patricia Neal, last year's best actress, now convalescing from strokes: "I am sorry I am unable to be with you tonight. I send my love to all."

The movie industry will be lucky if it can provide as good a show next year. Already there is talk of transferring the event to a more suitable location: The magnificent new music centre in downtown Los Angeles.

AT THE BELLE — Tony Curtis, playing an aspiring London fashion editor, and Natalie Wood, the attractive photographer, suitor who is also the book she co-starred in with Lana Turner and the Ringo Starr, reviews movie opens today at the Belle Theatre, co-starring Henry Fonda, Lauren Bacall, Mel Ferrer, Fran Jeffries and Leslie Parrish.

WHITE'S DISTRICT

Portable TV Presented by B.C.I. Students

WHITE'S DISTRICT — A most thoughtful gesture of his fellow students in Grade 13 of the Belleville Collegiate Institute assisted by other students and teachers will long be remembered by Ole Hansen who is recovering favorably in the Belleville General Hospital following his recent car accident east of Belleville on Highway 2.

Last weekend Ole was presented with a portable television set. Although taken by surprise he was certainly most grateful. Heading the committee which looked after the donations and purchase were fellow students Stu McIntosh and Carl McLean.

Another kind deed for each day since his absence at school several students have taken notes so that Ole will not miss his studies. Ole is hoping to return to his home next weekend, also hopes to return to school following the Easter holidays.

Robert Lornie and Grant Freestone who were shaken but not injured in the accident are most thankful that they were spared.

PROPOSES DRAFT

HAMILTON (CP)—Boys and girls who drop out of school should be drafted into the armed forces, says Muriel Milligan, director of the Wentworth County Children's Aid Society. Compulsory service in the armed forces would help solve the job problem for unskilled teenagers, she said in her annual report Wednesday.

Various Items Discussed by School Board

RAWDON — Rawdon Township School area board held two meetings in March with chairman Orno Sharp in charge and all members in attendance. Mr. G. H. Watrum school inspector gave a resume on school business and two films selling school supplies had representatives at the meeting.

Harvey Couch was engaged as general repair man for Rawdon Township school area and the wages and mileage were set. Approximately 15 bills were ordered paid with the fuel charges amounting to over $300.

The special meeting set the rate of supply teachers at $15 per day and $8 per half day. The area has the list of Township area supply teachers in readiness to carry on in case of illness.

John De Vries was authorized to tune and repair the piano at S. S. 4 at Bonarlaw.

ANNUAL MEET

The area board will permit any school to take an annual educational tour if it is requested. The various teachers were requested to make a list of needed supplies and forward to the secretary treasurer Allen Reid by May 1st. The board planned to visit all the schools in the area for inspection and to interview the teachers.

The board also arranged to have a furnace serviced at S. S. No. 7 and they favored the idea of grade 7 participating in a tree planting project.

The secretary was authorized to write the Department of Health re dental services for school pupils.

Three delegates were appointed to attend the Trustees and Ratepayers convention and these are Messrs. Wilfred Spencer, James Spry and Orno Sharp. Three bills for fuel oil were authorized to be paid.

As Younger Hutterites Take Over There May Be Trend From Colony Idea

Hutterites may regard as unfair an Alberta law that has restricted their right to buy land, but many say it would still be wrong to flout it. The attitudes of the Hutterites and their future are discussed in this story by a Canadian Press reporter.

By JANE BECKER

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP)—"I am convinced there will be no Hutterite problem in 20 years," said Municipal Affairs Minister A. J. Hooke, whose department administers the act restricting Hutterite land purchases.

"As the younger people take over there will be a trend away from the colonies. The problem will have solved itself."

"Nonsense," said 43-year-old John Wurz, preacher at the Wilson Hutterite colony 25 miles southeast of Lethbridge and one of the 12 governing elders of Canada's 11,000 Hutterites. "We've been around since 1528 and we're not extinguished yet. There will be Hutterites to the end of the world."

What eventually happens may depend in large measure in the outcome of a court test of the validity of a provincial law that has curbed Hutterite expansion into new colonies in Alberta.

There may be reason to fear that if the province's 6,500 communal-farming Hutterites continue to face the restrictions, the inevitable crowding could result in defections among younger people.

But then, the movement has shown a remarkable ability to survive persecution in the 400 years since it was founded.

The first leader, Jacob Hutter, a German blacksmith, was burned at the stake in 1536 for his pacifism. His followers were persecuted, first for their belief in adult baptism, later for their refusal to serve in the armed forces of the country in which they were living and, most recently for their communal life itself.

MOST IN CANADA

Reduced to 100 families when they left Russia for the United States in 1874, the world's Hutterites now are estimated at 15,000. Most are in Canada but there are 30 U.S. colonies, a few in South America and one in England.

On Alberta's 66 colonies, which cover about 500,000 acres —approximately one per cent of the province's occupied farmland—the Hutterites live as self-sufficiently as possible.

They grow much of their own food, make most of their own clothes—even shoes—and attend daily services in their simple, spotless colony churches, buildings devoid of any religious symbol.

No one owns property or has money in his own name, but the colonies get the best medical attention, pay their school and municipal taxes, refuse family allowances and old age pensions, and bury their dead in unmarked graveyards without benefit of an undertaker.

"The Hutterites' real problem is that they are really trying to practise Christianity in a highly un-Christian world," a Lethbridge businessman once said. The reaction of many Hutterites to what they consider an unjust law is seen by some as an example of this.

Few condone the action of six members of the Rock Lake colony who last fall bought land as individuals from a number of farmers at Brant and, the government says, proceeded to work it as a colony without the permission required in the Communal Property Act.

The charges that were laid set off a series of events that led to the court test of the act's validity.

"We are 100 per cent against going against the government," says Jacob Walter, preacher at the Standoff colony 50 miles southwest of Lethbridge. "Any colony which goes against the law should be excommunicated."

Then he added: "We are praying for the government."

Red-bearded Joe Hofer, 38, who teaches German at a colony 20 miles from Lethbridge, says: "We would never do what the Brant Hutterites did." He mentioned that his own colony had split six months ago when half the families moved to Saskatchewan.

With the Hutterite population doubling every 16 years, the pressure for new land is being felt throughout Alberta. Some say they will leave the country rather than go against the law if they cannot get the land they need.

The alternative seems to be some modification of the colony law should the Hutterites in Alberta, E. F. Breach, chairman of the Communal Property Control Board.

SEE NEW THINGS

"Until about 15 years ago, life on a Hutterite colony compared favorably with farm life anywhere. But over the last short while, with colonies dispersing widely over the province, youngsters are seeing things they never saw before—ice cream, television, magazines, hockey—and they want them.

"Most Hutterite elders are between 60 and 80 years old. As they die and the young people take over the colonies I believe they will adopt our way of life increasingly."

Some young people are leaving colonies. Five members of one family from Standoff are working as nurses' aides in Lethbridge. They share a basement apartment, go bowling and swimming, and say it is the "happiest time of our lives."

At the Falgar colony, 10 miles south of Lethbridge, the 24 colonists now have no church and no preacher since half their members migrated to Montana three years ago. Most of the Falgar Hutterites now attend the Mennonite church. The men have forsaken their black clothes and dress like farmers everywhere; the teen-agers are going to public high schools, and the girls have substituted skirts that reach just below the knee for the dark, ankle - length dresses.

'HOW YOU LIVE'

"Worldly goods have nothing to do with religious belief," says Darius Walter, the colony manager. His house has a modern kitchen, a large living room, pictures on the wall and bright, modern furniture, a far cry from traditional Hutterite living quarters.

Two of his daughters have finished high school and one has had two years of junior college. He says he wants all his five children to have a good education.

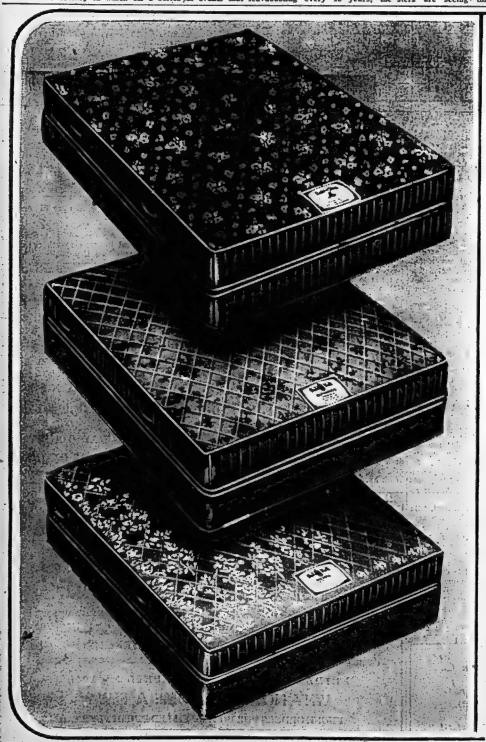
"The name of your religion doesn't matter," says Mr. Walter. "It's how you live that matters."

John Wurz represents the opposite end of the pole.

"We must destroy all luxuries of the flesh," he says. "There are no half-way measures."

He says the Hutterite religion demands full belief or nothing and calls those who have left the colonies "chaff in the wheat."

He adds that Hutterites must expect their share of deserters, as in other organizations.



Whether the temptations of the 20th century will accomplish what 400 years of persecution failed to do remains to be seen.

SEEK MODERN LIFE — This house and farm equipment on the Falgar, Alta., Hutterite colony show how they compare with those of any prosperous farm. The Falgar Hutterites have abandoned their black clothes and live much like farmers everywhere. "Worldly goods have nothing to do with religious beliefs," says colony manager Darius Walter. Conservative Hutterites have been told to have nothing to do with Falgar colonists. (CP Photo)

U.S. Navy Jets And MiGs Stage Dogfight At Sea

Losses Not Disclosed In Clash Near Hainan

By EDWIN O. WHITE

One of the Soviet-built jet fighters possibly was shot down. It was seen disappearing into clouds in flames.

The nationality of the MiGs was not determined, but they were presumed to be North Vietnamese. There was no announcement of any U.S. losses in the battle.

About 220 U.S. Air Force and Navy planes raided North Vietnamese bridges in this 20th such operation against military targets of the Hanoi regime since Feb. 7. The greatest number previously involved on a single day was about 160 March 3.

U.S. authorities announced groundfire felled one plane, a Navy A-4D Skyhawk, but said the pilot was rescued. Radio Peking declared eight of the raiders were shot down.

HAVE LOST 27

With the report on the Skyhawk, American announcements show a loss of 27 planes —U.S. and South Vietnamese— during the 31 strikes north of the border. The Communists now claim their gunners have downed 165.

The encounter between the MiGs and the American planes was the third in a week.

Last Saturday three MiGs approached a formation of U.S. planes over North Viet Nam but did not tangle with them.

Sunday, MiGs attacked a formation of U.S. planes and shot down two F-105s.

A Washington report said the U.S. Air Force is sending F-104 Starfighter jets to aid the Viet Nam area as an answer to the MiGs there. Considering the policy of making no formal announcements regarding the deployment of military aid until they have arrived at destination.

The navy planes involved in the battle today were F-4C Phantom jets, among the fastest fighters in today. The Phantoms were assigned to a special "anti-MiG patrol."

About 140 U.S. Navy planes attacked Tam Da Bridge, 120 miles northwest of Hanoi, while 80 air force jets attacked two other bridges in raids today.

One Navy A-4 jet was shot

Expect Govt. To Win Vote

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP)—Barring the unforeseen, the government is expected to breeze through two non-confidence motions scheduled to be voted on at the end of today's Commons sitting.

Just 30 minutes before the MPs leave the chamber for the weekend break they'll vote on a Social Credit motion criticizing the government for failure to bring family allowances into line with the rise in the cost of living and for not making "debt - free capital" available through the Bank of Canada.

The minority Liberal government is expected to draw the support of Conservative members against this attempt to topple them from power.

Immediately after the vote the House again will cast ballots, this time on the Conservative non - confidence motion. Moved by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker Tuesday on the first day of the throne speech debate, it censures the government with indifference and neglect in wiping out wrongdoing in the high and low places."

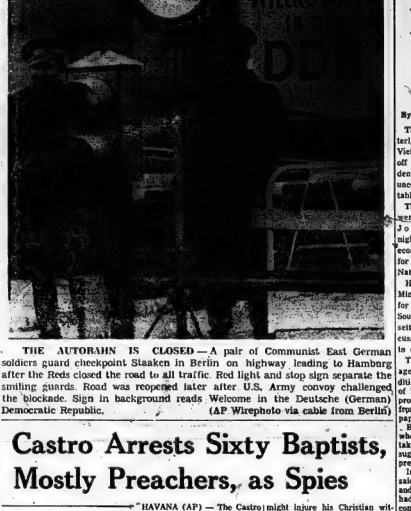
WILL BACK GOVERNMENT

Social Credit MPs have said outside the Commons they'll cast their votes with the government against the Conservative motion.

Socreds say that until the Dorion commission brings in its report, it is too early to cast such judgment on the government.

The government needs only the support of one of the four opposition parties to beat back attempts to defeat it on the confidence motions.

In the first such motion voted on Wednesday the government easily survived a New Democratic motion by a count of 129 to 84. Liberals were joined by the Creditistes, Socreds and three independent members in defeating the NDP motion whacking them for failure to introduce specific proposals for a "universal and comprehensive medicare program for all the people of Canada."



The Liberals hold 129 of the 265 seats in the Commons. There are 94 Conservatives, 18 New Democrats, 13 Creditistes, nine Socreds, and two independents.

RANGES WIDELY

The third day of the throne debate today will be ranged over a wide variety of topics—but interest centred on Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker Churchill's revival of the so - called "Bunnycote letter."

Mr. Churchill, former defence minister in the Diefenbaker government, recalled a wide scene in the Commons in May, 1963 when he read an alleged letter from the U.S. ambassador to Canada, Walton Butterworth, criticizing the then Conservative government for its

Reds' Criticism Falls Short Of Rejecting Move

North Viet Nam Leader Wants U.S. Withdrawal

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Communist powers bitterly assailed U.S. policy in Viet Nam today but they held off outright rejection of President Johnson's offer to bargain unconditionally at the peace table over Viet Nam.

The Communists apparently were in no hurry to say no to Johnson's offer Wednesday night that also included a huge economic development program for Southeast Asia under United Nations auspices.

However, President Ho Chi Minh of North Viet Nam called for a U.S. withdrawal from South Viet Nam before any settlement of the war is discussed. This the U.S. refuses to do.

The North Viet Nam news agency said that Ho's conditions for a possible settlement of hostilities in Viet Nam were prominently displayed on the front pages of all Hanoi newspapers today.

But it was not mentioned whether his views were to be taken as reply to Johnson's suggestion for talks without pre-conditions.

In Peking, The People's Daily said today "gangster's logic and big lies" were all Johnson had to offer in his call for unconditional talks.

ATTACKS MOTIVES

It was the first Chinese mention of Johnson's Baltimore speech. Though bitterly attacking Johnson's words, it did not openly state that China rejected the president's offer of discussions.

REPORTS REJECTION

The Associated Press, however, reported from Tokyo that China "rejected President Johnson's offer of peace talks following a Peking radio broadcast.

In Moscow, President Anastas Mikoyan said at a reception Thursday night for Pakistani President Ayub Khan that "the whole world is indignant at the constantly mounting aggression of the U.S. imperialists" against Viet Nam.

HAS SUGGESTION

U.S. Ambassador Foy Kohler listened to Mikoyan's talk, then went up to him, clinked glasses and advised him to "read John's offer carefully."

An American spokesman said Mikoyan replied he will read it with great interest.

Privately, Soviet sources expressed doubt about the purpose of negotiations, "as long as bombs are falling."

They suggested, however, that American withdrawal from South Viet Nam need not necessarily be a condition for talks.

They said this is "something to be talked about"

Slaughter Innocents' Reputation

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — The Lucien Rivard affair has resulted in the slaughter of the reputation of innocents, three lawyers contended before the Dorion inquiry Thursday.

Andre Villeneuve, counsel for Liberal MP Guy Rouleau, appealed to Chief Justice Frederic Dorion Jr. re-establish the reputation of his client so that his political future would not be ruined because he had merely followed Canadian parliamentary practices.

Guy Gerin, representing former federal aide Raymond Denis, said his client had been victimized by Liberal organizer Guy Masson.

Francois Chapados, counsel for Masson, said his client had been exploited by friends of Rivard, was facing bankruptcy and "can never regain his reputation now."

The Dorion commission is investigating allegations by Montreal lawyer Pierre Lamontagne, acting for the U.S. government in extradition hearings against Rivard, that he was offered $20,000 by Denis to drop opposition to bail for the suspected narcotics ring kingpin.

Mr. Lamontagne has also accused Mr. Rouleau of bringing pressure to bear on him on behalf of Rivard, who escaped from Montreal's Bordeaux Jail March 2.

Castro Arrests Sixty Baptists, Mostly Preachers, as Spies

May Be Largest In World

TORONTO (CP) — The planned nuclear power plant on Lake Ontario may become the largest in the world by 1975, says Energy Resources Minister J. R. Simonett.

Mr. Simonett told the legislature Thursday that the 1,000-megawatt generating plant east of Toronto may be expanded to 3,000 megawatts in 10 years.

He asked legislative approval of an expenditure of $1,800,000 this year to help Ontario Hydro build the plant.

The first 500-megawatt reactor should be ready to deliver power by 1970, he said, and a second reactor of the same size will begin production the next year.

This nuclear plant, and the one being built at Douglas Point on Lake Huron, would demonstrate to the world that the Canadian concept of heavy water reactors was an economic answer to its energy needs.

Mr. Simonett warned that Ontario was fast coming to an end of its hydro resources for the production of energy.

"In order to be able to keep supplying the electric power to our growing industry," he said, "we have to turn to other resources."

He predicted that the use of nuclear energy to generate electricity would lead to increased demand for uranium. "We expect to see uranium mining in Ontario working with increasing capacity by 1970, if not earlier."

In other legislature business, Attorney-General Arthur Wishart tabled an act to modify the rule against perpetuities.

The rule against perpetuities is designed to prevent a property owner from tying up his property forever after his death.

"HAVANA (AP) — The Castro government is holding 47 Baptist preachers —including two Americans—and 13 laymen as spies for the United States.

A spokesman for the Western Cuban Baptist Convention said two-thirds of the Baptist ministers in western Cuba are in jail.

Swiss Ambassador Emil Stadelhofer planned to take up the matter with the foreign ministry today. Stadelhofer, who handles U.S. interests in Cuba, has not been permitted to see the arrested men.

The Americans are Rev. Herbert Caudill, 61, head of the convention and a missionary here the last 35 years; and his son-in-law, Rev. James David Fite, 31, of Waynesboro, Ga.

Their wives and relatives of the other men were notified they would be able to visit the prisoners next Tuesday.

Mrs. Caudill refused to comment on her husband's arrest except to remark that they had "not faced any trouble before in Cuba and were dedicated to teaching and preaching."

Cuban authorities picked up seven ministers in outlying provinces some days ago. At dawn Thursday, raiding parties searched homes and churches in the Havana area, arresting 40 preachers and the 13 laymen.

Caudill was arrested at the Baptist Seminary in Havana, where he lived and taught.

Cuba's government radio charged that Caudill and the other churchmen, "working under the cloak of religion, organized a counter-revolutionary group for missions of espionage and subversion."

Caudill returned to the United States last year for surgery on a detached retina. Dr. Arthur B. Rutledge, executive secretary of the Southern Baptist home mission board, said in Atlanta, Ga., that during the months Caudill was home, he would not even discuss Cuban political matters for fear he would jeopardize his return to Cuba.

"He would do nothing that might injure his Christian witness to the Cuban people he loves," said Rutledge.

But the Cuban broadcast said:

"Caudill gathered much military information, also information of economic and political nature, which was turned over to espionage agencies of the United States.

"At the same time, he received instructions and support and issued propaganda against the revolution.

"Other activities of this gang of spies included helping and concealing counter - revolutionaries and soliciting in foreign exchange."

The Western Baptist Convention has 90 churches with an estimated 9,000 adult communicants in Havana, Matanzas, Pinar del Rio and Las Villas provinces. The Eastern Cuba Baptist Convention, affiliated with the Northern Baptists in the United States, has about 10,000 members.

The only restrictions previously imposed on the Baptists was a ban on public preaching or open proselytism. Baptist and other church schools also were taken over by the government in 1960.

Two other Baptist missionaries, Miss Lucille Kerrigan and Miss Ruby Miller, were expelled by the Cuban government in July 1963 and now work with Cuban refugees in Miami.

Says Dupuis Admitted Being Paid

By RUSSELL PEDEN

ST. JOHNS, Que. (CP)—Rock Deslauriers, only witness to appear so far in the influence-peddling case against Yvon Dupuis, testified Thursday that the former federal cabinet minister admitted before a witness last January that he accepted $10,000 in 1961.

"If I fall, a lot of other people will fall with me," he quoted Mr. Dupuis as saying. He said the statement was made in a restaurant in nearby Iberville, but did not name the witness.

Mr. Deslauriers 31, has said he gave Mr. Dupuis $10,000 to support his unsuccessful bid in 1961 for a Quebec government charter to operate a racetrack at nearby St. Luc.

Thursday was his sixth day of testimony, and he is to re-enter last statement was made in a restaurant in nearby Iberville, but did not name the witness.

Mr. Deslauriers 31, has said he gave Mr. Dupuis $10,000 to support his unsuccessful bid in 1961 for a Quebec government charter to operate a racetrack at nearby St. Luc.

Thursday was his sixth day of testimony, and he is to re-enter last Tuesday.

Mr. Deslauriers, a St. Johns chiropractor who declared himself bankrupt two months ago, said Mr. Dupuis stated that he distributed the money to Quebec government employees through a messenger.

ASKED FOR INVESTIGATION

Mr. Deslauriers said that night that he himself had asked the RCMP to make an investigation.

"He added that even if he were called to court he wouldn't need a lawyer, that he could defend himself all alone."

Mr. Deslauriers mentioned the alleged conversation when asked by defence lawyer Raymond Daoust whether he had told four men last December that "Mr. Dupuis was correct in this, but if I go he will go with me."

Not exactly, Mr. Deslauriers replied.

"I said that Mr. Dupuis very probably acted in good faith and would do this about 11 times . . . but that if I made public certain documents he would certainly lose his seat."

The subject of Mr. Deslauriers' bankruptcy petition hearings in 1961 and 1962 was brought up after Mr. Daoust told the court he wanted to find out where "this famous $10,000" might have gone, if not to Mr. Dupuis.

WAITED 2½ YEARS

Survey May Have Located Wreck Of Sir John Franklin's Ship in 1848

OTTAWA (CP) — A special survey in the Arctic has led to "cautious optimism" that the wreckage of one of Sir John Franklin's ships, lost in 1848, has been located.

Federal government sources report that Dr. K. F. Hoets of the department of mines, and technical surveys sent a telegram to Ottawa more than a week ago saying that his guarded optimism was based on results of a magnetometer survey in the area around O'Reilly Island, just off the mainland about 1,200 miles northwest of Ottawa.

Franklin and 129 men died after abandoning their ships, the Terror and the Erebus, while seeking the Northwest Passage. The vessels were never found although bits of wreckage from them were discovered at various places.

Royal Canadian Navy sources here said Thursday that two officers now stationed in Toronto—Lt.-Cmdr. B. F. Ackerman and Lt.-Cmdr. D. J. Kidd —became interested in the Franklin story during eight years of service in the Arctic on the navy icebreaker Labrador.

In their spare time, they did intensive research and concluded that at least one of the Franklin ships foundered off O'Reilly Island.

They subsequently up their work with a paper summarizing their research and their theories and asked what could be done to follow it up.

An arrangement was worked out for Dr. Roots to carry out a magnetometer survey this year while at work on the continental polar shelf project he directs at Cambridge Bay, about 160 miles west of O'Reilly Island.

Dr. Roots' telegram reported that his survey showed an anomaly—in other words, a showing of mineral or metal — 250 feet off the east shore of the island and of a small unnamed island which lies one mile north of the northern tip of O'Reilly Island.

An added reason for optimism was that the survey turned up no other anomalies in the area. Further, a spike unexplained in terms of Crown property was found on the small island along with wood chips and shavings.

The anomaly lies under seven feet of ice and Dr. Roots concluded it is probably buried in silt. He reported that conditions should be favorable for further investigation when the area is free of ice this summer.

Ignore Reds' Reprisal Threat, Sentence Terrorists to Death

SAIGON (AP)—A South Vietnamese military court in Saigon today ordered the execution of two Viet Cong terrorists, one for taking part in the U.S. Embassy bombing and the other for trying to blow up an American officers' billet.

No date was set for either execution, but it was believed they would be carried out swiftly.

The court sentenced the driver of the getaway motorbike in the embassy bombing, Nguyen Van Hai, 27, despite the Viet Cong's threat to execute an American civil prisoner in reprisal.

In an afternoon session, the court gave a death sentence to Tran Van Dang, who was arrested March 20 near the Saigon airport with 30 pounds of high explosive on his motor scooter. Police said he and an accomplice who escaped were going to plant the explosive at an officers' billet in the area.

There is no appeal from sentences of the five-man court, but Chief of State Phan Khac Suu could commute the sentence.

The Viet Cong said Wednesday that if Hai was executed it would execute Gustav C. Hertz, 46, a U.S. and mission official captured on Feb. 2. The threat was made of the Viet Cong threat during Hai's trial.

In Washington the White House was informed of Hai's sentence but made no comment. The state department said earlier that Hertz, of Leesburg, Va., "has committed no offence" and should be accorded the "basic humanitarian protection demanded by international law and rudimentary standards of decency."

Legion Starts Million Dollar Centennial Fund

The Dominion President of the Royal Canadian Legion, Mr. F. T. O'Bracht, has proclaimed April 9th, 1965, as the opening date for the Legion's "One Million Dollar Centenial Fund" campaign. What is this far-sighted and far-reaching undertaking? The basic role of the Legion is to serve veterans and dependents. This need will persist well into the next century. The Legion is looking to the future so that it may treat the last veterans as well as it did the first. Also it wishes to guarantee that the last widow will receive the same sympathetic attention that the first one received over forty years ago.

In order to carry out this program the centennial committee is undertaking to raise one million dollars. This money when invested will provide an annual income of approximately $60,000, which will help assist in the years when membership declines, to promote branch activities for the good of the communities.

At present Legion membership is rising. The 1964 membership was about 275,500. This was an increase of approximately 10,000 over 1963. In 1963 there was an increase of nearly 13,000 over the previous year. This, however, is far short of the 8 percent increase which was set for 1961.

Let us give a thought to the year 2,000. It is estimated that there will be about 300,000 veterans left on that New Year's Day. Provided that is, that the bomb has spared the tragedy of another World War and that there are survivors. These last veterans will be a curiosity. Some will be telling tales of Normandy and Passchendaele.

Others will be singing such songs as North Atlantic Squadron, The Old Blueposer and Lili Marlene. Others will be talking about aircraft with pistons that operated in time.

Seriously, though, these veterans will have problems. There will be those who are partially disabled who in this day and age are capable of performing a task. The question at that date this veteran with a disability and much older by that time will find it difficult to get employment. More consideration will have to be given to homes for the aged and care for the older veterans. There will be many demands made on individual branch poppy funds.

It will be well to remember also that the value of the dollar may very well decline. It is to be hoped however that Canadian economy will continue to be high. The war disability pensions and veterans' allowances will need to be constantly revised. Widows' pensions will require attention.

Many other needs will arise as time goes by. In spite of all the technical advances, social legislation and the hoped for great prosperity there will also be the need for the loyal Canadian Legion. The Legion member of today will want to help insure that the Legion will do as much for the last veteran as it did for the first.

OTTAWA (CP)—A "considerable" increase in this year's turkey production was forecast by the agriculture department in a market outlook report Friday. The report said larger purchases of turkey poults in the winter and an increase in eggs being placed in incubators pointed to such a trend.

Branded as a forgery by Prime Minister Pearson and Mr. Butterworth, the letter has been cited as proof of American interference in the 1963 federal election which brought the Liberals to power.

Mr. Churchill, MP for Winnipeg South Centre, wondered Thursday if the government had called off an RCMP investigation into the validity of the letter.

Noting that Mr. Pearson had revived the issue during his speech Tuesday, he asked if the prime minister now had some additional information to give to the Commons.

Or had the government taken the matter out of RCMP hands because it had decided it was a matter to be handled by a member of the cabinet or dismissed as indiscretion by Mr. Butterworth?

LETTER DISCREDITED

The letter had been discredited on several counts, noted Mr. Churchill.

The first had been a vehement denial by Mr. Pearson that he had ever received the letter.

Then there was the report that the normal U.S. stationery would not accommodate the number of lines on the alleged letter.

While MPs had been willing to believe Mr. Pearson two years ago, would they be as willing two years later, Mr. Churchill wondered.

And did Mr. Butterworth's denial go as far as it should?

As for the size of stationery, surely the embassy here used more than one size. Had the government thought of inquiring whether 8½ by 12½ inch stationery was in stock there in 1963. It was the right size for the credited letter.

Perhaps, said Mr. Churchill, the letter had never been intended for the prime minister. It still would have been powerful ammunition for Liberal fund-raisers to use in the election to show what powerful friends Liberals had.

Robert Prittie (NDP — Burnaby - Richmond) urged the establishment of a department of consumer affairs, a move advocated by his party in its 1963 election campaign.

It was essential to protect buyers "in this day of monopoly enterprise where a few giant firms can gang up on the consumer."

False and tricky packaging was also being used to fool buyers of wide range of goods.

Percy Noble (PC — Grey North) said the Georgian Bay area of Ontario should be added to the list of designated high-unemployment areas that qualify for special tax incentives to industry. Many young persons were leaving the area because of the lack of industries.

He also called for the creation of a national park in the area, which would double the revenue of the tourist industry.

CRITICIZES CAMPAIGN

Jack Roxburgh (L—Norfolk) criticized Health Minister Judy LaMarsh for her campaign against cigarette smoking, particularly a suggestion that she might ask the CBC to prohibit tobacco advertising on TV.

He said a more positive approach would be to set aside a quarter - cent per package in tobacco taxes to finance research into lung cancer. This would be $5,000,000 annually, but "just peanuts" compared to the U.S. research program.

M. T. McCutcheon (PC — Lambton-Kent) said Mr. Pearson was regarded as a "dove of peace" in Philadelphia after his recent speech there on Viet Nam. But in Texas he was "a pigeon" Because of the U.S.-Canada auto deal.

Americans could buy Canadian - built cars at a reduced price. The question was when Canadians could enjoy the same savings on American-built cars and how much would the saving be.

P. B. Rynard (PC — Simcoe East) said falling water levels on the Great Lakes and in the St. Lawrence River system are causing losses running to millions of dollars. Water pollution was a national problem.

He called for a national policy to control uses of water and sources of pollution.

Mr. Rynard said the 11 per cent sales tax should be removed immediately from drugs. Medicare would be impossible to implement as long as there were shortages of doctors and medical schools.

Michael Starr (PC—Ontario), said the government's war on poverty program is just a rehash of old policies and a "camouflage."

Most of the ideas outlined in the throne speech for the anti-poverty drive were originally conceived by the former Conservative government.

SEEK PORT — Canada may open talks with the United States for access to an ocean port on the Alaskan Panhandle, a strip of U.S. territory jutting into Northwestern British Columbia. The Panhandle cuts off the resource-rich lands of Northwestern B.C. and Southwestern Yukon from deep water ports, the most efficient outlet for getting mineral and timber products to world markets. A 1903 international commission fixed the boundary and it has rankled Canadians ever since. Northern Affairs Minister Laing says the best prospect is for declaration of an international port.

Hope to Form New Society For Retarded

The Belleville and District Association for Retarded Children held its regular monthly meeting at the school, 281 John St. on April 8th.

Preceding the meeting the teachers held pre-arranged interviews with parents of the school children, to discuss the child's progress and specific needs.

Pat Ross, presidential care chairman, announced that a trip to the Smiths Falls Hospital School is planned for May 15th.

Tom Stovell told of a meeting to be held in Picton, Monday, April 12, by parents of retarded children in the Picton, Bloomfield and Wellington area in an endeavor to form an association for retarded children. The 21st Belleville Cub Pack from the school will be in attendance and will take part in the program.

The adult program is at a standstill due to lack of leaders, although the craft class for retarded adults is carried on two afternoons a week at the school.

A film on Camp Belwood, Ont. entitled "Into the Sunlight' was shown, giving first hand knowledge of what is being done for and by retarded children at summer camps.

Mrs. Audrey Parkhurst showed a number of colored slides she has taken of local girls and boys at various functions over the years.

Haircuts Up 25 Cts. Monday Say Barbers

The price of a haircut in Belleville is going up 25 cents to $1.50 as from Monday. Children under 13 will pay 25 during the week and $1.25 on Saturdays.

Members of Local 466 of the International Union of Barbers and Hairdressers met last night to review the increases.

Alex. Ricard, international organizer for the union, said the increases stem from the increased cost of living — higher taxes and the cost of supplies, equipment, heat, lighting and rent.

He said operators were not receiving any benefits such as insurance, pension or vacation pay. The average hourly wage was $1.25 and from this they had to buy the benefits concerned.

The increase is the first since October 1962.

Firm Failed To Remit Deductions

A firm of Belleville contractors, laggard in remitting tax deductions to the federal government, today was fined $200 in city magistrate's court.

Thomas Lally, acting government counsel, said the company, McCallum and Bridge, owned the government "just over $1,000" in tax deductions from employees' wages.

The charge was formally charged with failing to pay $664 within the time stipulated under federal regulations.

One of the partners, Thomas McCallum, said the difficulties arose over money owing his company.

"In this instance it was just a case of our customers not paying us and we were only able to pay the net income of our men."

Magistrate R. C. Jackson, however, noted the importance of meeting tax regulations.

"You must pay under penalty . . . it's a quasi-criminal situation," he said.

Mr. Lally asked only for the minimum $200 fine.

Alderman Freed Of Counselling To Commit Act

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Alderman Geoffrey Fenley, 49, was acquitted Thursday by a county court jury of counselling to commit arson.

Ald. Feeley's cottage on the banks of the Otonabee River near here burned Jan. 24. He was accused of having counselled Thomas Meredith, assistant branch manager of Trans-Canada Credit Corporation here to commit arson.

Crown Attorney John Bradshaw told the court the cottage had been insured for $5,000 and the contents for $2,000.

Earlier the court was told that Ald. Feeley had bought the cottage for $1,000 plus $30 sales tax.

tario Law Reform Commission is designed to bring Ontario practice into line with that in the United Kingdom and the United States.

Mr. Wishart said the courts have for years held that a property owner could direct the disposition of his property only for the benefit of the life of an individual—a relative, perhaps 21 years after the relative's death.

Troubles in following the rule have cropped up because courts have decided that some wills may direct the disposition of property for a period that may extend more than 21 years beyond the death of the life in being.

The approach of the proposed legislation would be to wait and see what does happen instead of voiding the gift at the time of the testator's death because certain events might or might not happen in the future.

Thus, in the case described, the parents would wait and see whether the brother's eldest son did reach the age of 25 within 21 years after the brother's death. If he did, the gift would be valid.

Mr. Wishart said the government will not attempt to enact the bill into law at the current session.

First he wants lawyers, trust companies and others to have a chance to study it and make known their views.

ANSWERS QUESTION

The attorney-general said in a written reply to a question that a survey of communal fallout shelters shows that large buildings in the province can accommodate at least 1,855,400 persons in the event of nuclear war.

He said there are no figures on the number of private shelters in family homes.

Mr. Wishart also said that responsibility for provision of emergency housing has been allocated to the Ontario Housing Corporation and 55 provincial officials have been trained in emergency planning.

Rescue Final Two Bodies Of 30 Killed

TOKYO (Reuters) — Rescuers tonight reached the final two bodies of 30 miners killed in a gas explosion 1,800 feet below the surface of a coal mine off southern Japan.

The rescue workers struggled to bring the two bodies to the surface at 7 p.m., 12 hours after the explosion ripped through the mine on an island 70 miles off Sasebo Kyushu port of Nagasaki.

Forty-five men were trapped by the blast. There were 15 survivors who were admitted to mine hospital suffering from burns caused by the heat of the explosion or by injuries from crashing gear.

Altogether 175 were in the pit at the time but 130 were outside the danger area and quickly escaped as the shafts filled with smoke and dust.

Great Need For Bibles Say Gideons

Most people know of the work of the Gideons in the United States and Canada in placing Scriptures in hotels, motels, hospitals, prisons, schools and other institutions. They also present personal copies of the New Testament to school children and student nurses.

What is not so well known is that the Gideons are organized in 66 countries. As here share in the vast extension program Canada is responsible for Malaysia, Fiji Islands, Ceylon and India.

Internationally the Gideons have distributed more than 58,000,000 Bibles and Testaments. Five million copies have been distributed in Canada. The big program is carried out by volunteer workers and the gifts of interested friends. Throughout the world there are fewer than 50 paid male employees.

Canadian vice-president Leonard Crimp, a retired businessman, is at the present time on a world tour which will take him to 28 countries on behalf of the Gideon work. Recently he has visited Viet Nam, Cambodia, Laos, Thailand, Burma and Pakistan.

In the fall of 1963 when Mr. Crimp was still in business, he had passage booked on the ill-fated flight that crashed out of Montreal, killing all passengers. Within minutes of takeoff he was transferred to another flight and his life was spared.

Mr. Crimp reports that there is a great need for Bibles everywhere he goes and that doors are wide open to the Gideons in most countries.

The object of the Gideons is to expose as many as possible to the righteous teachings of the Scriptures which reveal God's plan of Salvation for mankind.

Executive officers of the Belleville Gideons are Bev G. Foster, president; William A. Watson, secretary, and Vernon Weir, treasurer.

Y's Activities

COMMUNITY WEEK

The "Y" program extends itself into the community as well as operating to full capacity in the new building.

Program is conducted at four centres away from the "Y" at various times throughout the week on a regular basis.

The new YMCA is only about half complete, although plans are being made to add more facilities in the near future. More club room space, a larger auditorium, a full size double gymnasium and outdoor facilities in the playground are all needed to provide a complete program.

Because the "Y" is lacking these facilities it has been necessary to exchange and to rent gymnasium space.

The Moira Secondary School gymnasium is used for men's basketball on Monday night and for youth boys' and girls' basketball, volleyball, badminton, and gymnastics on Saturday afternoon.

Harry J. Clarke public school is used three times each week. Monday is Trampoline day for intermediate and Youth girls. Wednesday the boys meet for their Trampoline class, and on Friday boys on Thursday after school hours.

The secondary school facilities are rented and janitorial fees are also paid by the YMCA. Public school space is used in return for swimming instruction offered at the "Y" to public school children on four days each week. These classes are given to boys and girls in grades 6, 7 and 8, who are non-swimmers. They are taught to swim in order to pass the YMCA beginners' test.

The YMCA is pleased to be able to work together with the school boards to provide these physical recreational programs for the youth of Belleville.

Annual YMCA Swim Contests to Be Held

The annual Y.M.C.A. Swim Competition will be conducted tomorrow, Saturday, April 10th. This is a competition in which the boys and girls of Belleville who are members of the Y.M.C.A. can compete for the crest awards.

The competitions will be held in the morning and afternoon during the regular recreational swim periods that follow the gym classes.

Boys' classes will be held as usual from 9:00 a.m. through to 1:15 p.m. and the girls' classes will be from 1:30 to 5:00 p.m.

The West Hill program competition will be from 1:15 to 2:15 p.m.

Any youth members (15-18) who do not regularly attend the gym class could participate in the competition by being on hand 5:00 p.m.

There will be events for all levels of swimming ability according to the Y.M.C.A. program of beginners and 5-card star system. Contestents will be scored on their style as well as for speed.

Whither Fulton?

The case of E. Davie Fulton would make an excellent subject for a psychological novel.

The novelist would have virtually a free hand in designing his plot, since there is little on the record that would serve to contradict any of several twists which he could employ to explain Mr. Fulton's motivation.

The facts themselves are simple enough.

We have a brilliant young lawyer, of distinguished family background, entering the House of Commons in the first post-war election. During the next decade, in which his party filled the role of official Opposition, not always with distinction, his deportment inside and outside the House was such that, when the Progressive Conservatives came to select a new leader, he was one of the three serious contenders. Moreover, though he placed third, he emerged from the convention voting with his reputation enhanced, rather than the reverse. While the winner, John G. Diefenbaker, presented the picture of the favorite of the average Canadian with Conservative tendencies, and Donald Fleming played the role of the choice of the influential and wealthy among the party, Fulton's image was that of the coming man, the choice of the progressive young star wanted. Moved from the justice portfolio to that of minister of public works, he appeared unhappy. Stories of dissension between him and the Prime Minister became commonplace. When he left the Cabinet in 1963 to lead the forlorn hope of the party in the Socred wilderness of British Columbia, it appeared to many that he was making use of a gallant gesture in order to extricate himself from company in which he was far from happy.

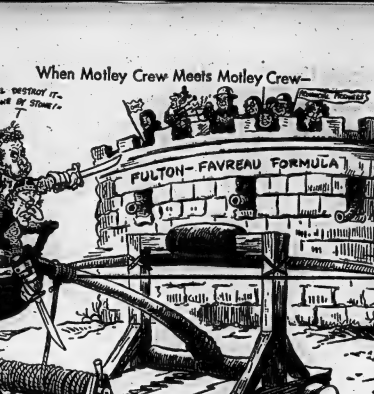
Two years of labor in the unpromising B.C. vineyard having proven barren, he has now announced his intention of returning to the federal field.

When this intention was first rumored, many jumped to the conclusion that Mr. Fulton was returning to the list in his old guise as a knight in shining armor. His obvious intention, they assumed, was to slay the dragon who held captive the Conservative party and leave her free to assume the courtly garb in keeping with her traditions and to bestow her favors as she saw fit—and what rescued maiden spurns the dragon-slayer?

Not so, apparently. Mr. Fulton has pledged himself to "work with and support" John G. Diefenbaker.

What is this Fulton which we see today? A man soured by defeat and looking for greener pastures in any company? A wily politician grown wise and cautious, leaving to greener men the heady role of rebel? And if this be caution, is it the forerunner of an internal struggle, within the bowels of the party machine, for control, or does Mr. Fulton dream of the day when the mantle of leadership will settle comfortably on his shoulders? Has he given him to lift a hand in any effort more daring than a soothing gesture towards those whose tempers may be ruffled by events?

The mirror which once presented such a sharp picture of Mr. Fulton is clouded. Can he restore its burnish in time for it to present an attractive picture of him to the party faithful at the leadership convention which must come eventually?



The Touch of Genius

Lest they may have overlooked the fact in the flood of reading which crowds the mid-week issues of The Ontario Intelligencer, we hasten to call the attention of our readers to the coining of a new word which deserves to survive and whose arrival on the scene is worthy of general recognition.

Harry G. Bradsher of the Associated Press was writing about Leonid I. Brezhnev.

"Kremlinologists in foreign embassies in Moscow were busy reading significance into signs of Brezhnev's supremacy over the Soviet Union," he reports.

Kremlinologists! What a delightful word. Worth a dozen short ones, with just that leaven of malice, in its similarity to "criminologists," which converts a business-like touch with the language into plain genius. An accomplishment at least as worthy of record as, say, scoring an overtime goal in the Stanley Cup playoffs!

To Your Good Health
Diet Pills Are Dangerous When Used to Excess

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Doctor: Are diet pills harmful? My doctor prescribed them because I have to lose about 20 pounds. — M. S.

I oppose diet pills without medical supervision, but using them with your doctor's care is another matter.

Why only under medical direction?

First, nobody who is old enough to know the truth about Santa Claus should be so gullible as to think that there's a pill which can make fat people thin. Pills, judiciously used, can help, but that's all.

To reduce, we have to do one of two things, or preferably both: Eat less; use up, in activity, more of what we eat.

In the past some attempts were made to use a medication that speeded up the body's metabolism — that is, that "burned up" more of the food we ate. The drug had dangerous complications, so its use was discontinued.

But don't expect the pills to do it all. You must still make a steady curtailment in the amount you eat. At the same time, you must get ample exercise.

Used for a reasonable length of time and in proper amounts, the pills will not be harmful. Used too long or in too great quantity, there is the danger of the patient becoming nervous and jittery. The best may have periods of palpitation or flip-flops. There is the possibility (depending on your eating habits) of not getting enough of the necessary nutrients. Some people find themselves wanting to keep busy even though they've already reached their goal. In other words, at the same time, that they ought to stop and rest.

Your doctor knows the signs to watch for, and is prepared to stop the pills before any harm can come to you. Some people, left to themselves, are so gratified at losing weight that they keep on using the medication long after the appearance of a reasonable figure. But then to stop — if only they recognized them.

That's why I refuse to recommend pills except under medical direction.

I have no doubt that your doctor also impressed upon you the need for doing your part in learning (and avoiding) foods which are excessively fattening.

If you like to doddle about with foods are which, send 15 cents in coin and an unstamped, self-addressed envelope for my two leaflets, "Lost Secret of Reducing" and "The Calorie Chart" (Send requests to Dr. Molner in care of Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.)

They will help you do your part in losing that 20 pounds — and they'll help in some big way just as important: Kowing how to stay in your correct weight after you've shucked the excess poundage.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have heard that hormones are given to chickens to make them grow bigger, but that it is dangerous to eat such fowl. Is this so? — Mrs. S. M.

Hormones were formerly used to fatten chickens, but the practice was discontinued several years ago. The hormones were not fed to the chickens; a small pellet of hormone material was inserted in the neck. The only way a person could have gotten any appreciable amount of the hormones would have been to eat the chicken's neck, and the pellet along with it.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have polyps at the opening of the uterus The doctor says they should be removed. Will they be likely to grow back? — P. H.

The polyps which are removed will not grow back again. Occasionally new ones can form in the same general area, but this is not common.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

April 8, 1965 . . .

Confederate General Robert E. Lee surrendered to U.S. General Ulysses S. Grant one hundred years ago today—in 1865—at Appomattox Court House, and the American Civil War was over. The industry and economy of the South had been virtually destroyed. The war cost the North about $11,500,000,000 (including pensions and interest on war loans) and the South about $3,500,000,000. Though they were never counted properly, about half a million men died in battle, and thousands more in prison camps.

1682—The Cavalier de La-Salle discovered the mouth of the Mississippi River and claimed Louisiana for France.

1939 — The names of the first seven U.S. astronauts in Project Mercury were announced.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1915 — the French secured the village of Les Eparges, after weeks of battle; the Austrian armies retreated before the Russian advance; and Italy moved troops to the Austrian frontier.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1940 — the German occupatio of all Denmark and the port cities of Norway was completed within 24 hours; Vidkun Quisling's group announced itself as the government of Norway; and fierce isolated battles took place throughout the North Sea.

Support Economy

Windsor Star

Most think of social security measures in terms of social betterment which, indeed, is primary. But there also is a financial advantage, in that they provide a floor under our entire economy. All this has entailed a great change in social, political and economic thinking, over the years. It now is recognized that governments have a responsibility to enact measures for the welfare of the people—provided the people want them and are willing to meet the costs.

Strictly Personal
'Cold War' And All That, Who Said It?

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A high-school student in Arizona has written to ask me if I could tell him who originated the phrase "cold war." By a charming coincidence, I received a letter on the very same day from Bernard Baruch, who first used the phrase in a speech at Columbia, S.C., in 1947.

It is rare for us to know, however, exactly who originated new words and phrases, many of which seem to rise spontaneously in the public mind. Thousands of new words (known in the trade as "neologisms") have come into use since the end of World War II; war and technological advances have been responsible for most of them.

Only a handful of these new words can be ascribed to particular persons. Winston Churchill generally gets the credit for "iron curtain," which has run second in popularity only to "cold war." The authorship is disputed by other contenders, such as Goebbels, the Nazi propaganda chief, Senator Arthur Vandenberg, and Von Ribbentrop, Hitler's minister of France.

"Gobbledygook" was coined by Rep. Maury Maverick of Texas, to describe the language of bureaucrats who don't want to be pinned down to a clear and simple explanation of what they are doing, and why.

"Goon" was the creation of E. C. Segar, the cartoonist, and is a port-manteau word made up of "gorilla" and "baboon" combined. Donald Gordon is credited with being the first man to use "wholesale" in the sense of a mystery book. Geiett Burgess invented "blurb," which was a happy inspiration; and "squib" is attributed to Don Herold, in the sense of a short paragraph or capsule comment.

In the 19th Century, a number of new words came from the pens of famous men, and permanent language. Thomas were promptly adopted into the Huxley invented "agnostic" to describe a person who neither affirms nor denies the existence of God.

Auguste Comte gave us "altruism" as the opposite of egoism, and Coleridge took "psychology," which was then a rare technical word and made up the adjective "psychological," which has become the most overused word of our time. "Scientist" was coined by Whately; before then, they were known as merely as "men of science."

But most neologisms have an anonymous background. Nobody knows who is responsible for motel, smog, juke-box, gimmick, audition, drive-in, air-conditioning, stooge, booby-trap, caravan, ghost writer, zero hour fringe benefits, and hundreds of other terms. My own candidate for verbal immortality is the unsung Millen who invented the facoulicly descriptive "faisies."

Good Record

Ottawa Journal

If all Crown companies were of the stamp of Polymer, nationalization programs would be more palatable. Crown companies and profits are unusual companions, but for 1964 Polymer had a net profit of $9,450,000 a little better than the year before.

Federal Powers Retained

Ottawa Journal

When it came to debate the "optional" bill was less frightening than it appeared on the horizon.

Mr. Colin Cameron, the NDP member for Nanaimo, reflected a sense of relief shared by other members when, early in the discussion, he said that all the programs covered by the bill introduced by Finance Minister Gordon was clearly within provincial jurisdiction; there was no relinquishing of federal responsibility and power.

That accepted, the rest was easier.

Under the interim arrangement now approved by the House, a province would maintain its present obligations in respect of programs from which it has contracted out. An accounting of expenditures will have to be given the Federal Government which will grant compensation to provinces confirming not in the form of tax abatements or cash payments.

Mostly of the bill led the Conservative, Mr. Marcel Lambert, and others to the conclusion that the provinces are not in fact being allowed to "opt out" of agreements but are simply being allowed to take over their administration.

The issue raised by Mr. Lambert in his amendment to delay the bill, which was defeated in a vote, was that it would be better to await the result of further consultations between the provincial and federal governments. These inevitably would consider long-range relationships.

Why then, the hurry?

The Government obviously is not because it is anxious that the provinces, especially restive Quebec, should feel they have unfettered use of their own money developed for better programs. If federal policies are changed, this is a reasonable approach pending a later more lasting agreement.

The criticism which remains was picturesquely expressed by Mr. G. W. Baldwin, Conservative, Peace River. He declared that Privy Council decisions have placed on provinces burdens which were not originally intended to be theirs. His complaint was that present Government "has only proved around the edges of these difficulties rather than face up to them."

Mr. Baldwin feels the essentials of these problems have urgency. It is important to the maintenance of national unity. He added:

"The spirit will must be in Canada between the three founding races can be compared to a bank account. It has never been very large or extravagant, but I am afraid that as a result of these peripheral measures—the Royal commission, the flag debate, the pension bill, the opting out legislation and the unending formula which is clearly within provincial jurisdiction; there was no relinquishing of federal responsibility and power.

"Opting out" legislation is a step in the right direction in that it eases provincial grievances in a limited field but it is no solution to basic problems which cause, and will continue to cause, irritation. The challenge to the Government is to hasten not only studies but solutions. It is a formidable task.

Math Stumps Astronaut

Watertown Times

Cmdr. Walter M. Schirra, Jr., orbited the earth six times in a nine - hour flight Oct. 2, 1962, bringing his Sigma 7 capsule down near Midway Island in the Pacific. He was a backup astronaut on the nation's first two - man Gemini space shot March 23.

And just recently Commander Schirra made some interesting comments on the emphasis given science and mathematics in today's schools.

"I can recall," he said, "as a child when I had (mathematical) problems I could go to my father, who was a working engineer, and he could understand my language. Now I'm working with a rather complicated computer, with what I call up-to-date mathematics as working tools.

"Here I am. I've just been talking about an on-board computer, yet I can't sit down and do pencil problems with my young son. That really bugs me."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

During the five years of war, Canada has produced enough steel to build a double-track railway around the world; enough lumber to build 2½ million homes; enough armored vehicles to equip the whole German army; enough bullets to fire two lifts every living person on earth.

She has gone into new businesses such as production of synthetic rubber, planes (including the first plywood plane in the world, the Mosquito), radar, precision instruments, warships and super-explosives. Her scientists have led the world in many fields, notably in dehydrated foods, the famous antiseasickness pills, homecooking without heavy salting — and hundreds of others, many of them military secrets for the duration.

In addition, Canadian farmers who have lost half a million of their younger people to industry and the services, have upped production by over 40 percent, and in the 1944 year of war, raised crops that totted an all-time high for farm cash of $1,-750,000,000.

Automation

Port Arthur News-Chronicle

Dr. A. D. Booth, Dean of Engineering at the University of Saskatchewan, scoffs at the idea that automation will deprive great numbers of people of employment. His views are not shared by organizations such as the Canadian Labour Congress. It may be significant that the people who seem to be the least worried about automation are those in jobs that will be the last to be automated.

Slaughter

Minister Pearson Nov. 24, saying he had made normal representations in the Rivard case.

Masson has described himself as the "errand boy" between Rivard's henchmen and Denis, a long-time friend.

The lawyers for Rouleau, Denis and Masson held the courtroom floor as the inquiry neared the end of its final stage, the summing up. Mr. Guerin is scheduled to continue today and be followed by spokesmen for the RCMP and federal government.

Mr. Villeneuve said Mr. Rouleau shouldn't be made a scapegoat for having followed established parliamentary practice in seeking information on the possibility of bail for Rivard.

He said Mr. Rouleau had also followed parliamentary practice in making a "gesture of nobility" by resigning as parliamentary secretary to Mr. Pearson.

Mr. Rouleau had been so overworked he didn't even have time to read the newspapers. All MPs would be glad if Chief Justice Dorion could recommend some procedure which would prevent their daily harassment by constituents and others.

Mr. Villeneuve maintained that Mr. Rouleau had done nothing objectionable and that his behaviour in the case had been irreproachable.

CITES OTHER CASES

He said the MP had acted no differently than in the cases of Bob Trembley, serving 20 years for attempted murder, and Joe (Bananas) Bonanno, a Mafia lieutenant expelled from Canada last year.

Mr. Guerin said the "whole tragedy of Raymond Denis" could be traced to a single telephone call he received June 22 from Masson.

Masson, 33, was a "very old politician" who had worked for the Liberal party for 12 years, "not just a minor politician."

He had told Denis June 22 that $60,000 awaited the Liberal party if Rivard wasn't extradited to the U.S.

But the cash had been financially or otherwise interested in the matter he would have acted earlier than July 14, date of the alleged bribe offer. And he would have met Mr. Lamontagne secretly in Montreal, not in the Commons office of his boss, then immigration minister Tremblay.

Mr. Guerin said Mr. Lamontagne had made contradictions and exaggerations in his bribe offer accusation because of his "state of mind."

"For one afraid, each rustling leaf has meaning," Mr. Guerin said, quoting Sophocles.

He contended that parts of Mr. Lamontagne's testimony had been contradicted by 14 witnesses, including Mr. Lamontagne.

One of the contradictions, he said, was a "retient" Erik Nielsen, Conservative MP for the Yukon, who had been granted a "unique" recess at the inquiry to reflect on his testimony.

Mr. Nielsen, who triggered the Rivard affair publicly Nov. 29, had testified he had garnered new facts and opinions in a Nov. 19 meeting with Mr. Lamontagne. The Montreal lawyer had testified he supplied Mr. Nielsen with no information the MP didn't already possess.

Mr. Chapados conceded that Masson had acted unwisely and imprudently but said he was no "political fixer."

He didn't intend to "whiten Masson's linen" but his client's reputation had been blackened.

Masson's approach to Denis had been motivated only by the friendship between the two men. Masson had been expelled by Robert Gignac, a henchman of Rivard's, now facing a capital murder charge in a Montreal gangland killing. He believed then Gignac was an honest man.

Students Try to Find Launch Pad for 20-pound Rocket

Two young university students at Waterloo, one of them a graduate from Belleville Collegiate Institute, are still seeking permission to fire a rocket which they said could travel up to 400 miles.

But Michael Cleary, 18, of Belleville, freshman engineering student at the University of Waterloo and Tom Stitt, 20, of Willowdale, general science student at Waterloo Lutheran University, have renewed hopes of finding a launching pad after explaining their project this week to Defence Minister Paul Hellyer.

"We are satisfied somebody is finally going to do something about our plight," the Belleville student said.

Two federal agencies have already denied permission to the students' 20 pound, four foot rocket, which was explained to Mr. Hellyer following a speech at Waterloo University.

Mr. Hellyer didn't promise any specific aid but the student's feel the rocket would be ideal for launching from such a base as Churchill, Manitoba, 600 miles north of Winnipeg.

The boys feel the rocket could go up to 400 miles if it wasn't for wind resistance, that they would be happy if it reached 30 miles.

Michael Cleary is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cleary of Wellington Crescent in Belleville.

MR. AND MRS. ALBERT H. BAKER

Baker – McCallum

Tall vases of gladioli formed the background setting in Eastminster United Church, Belleville on Saturday, April 3, 1965, when Kathryn Isobel McCallum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCallum, Belleville was united in marriage to Albert Hugh J. Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hugh Baker, of Belleville.

Rev. Alexander McDowell, minister of the church officiated at the ceremony, while Mrs. H. Bennie played traditional wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mr. Murray Irwin.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor-length bridal gown of white peau de soie with the bodice featuring a boat neckline adorned with lace applique. An elbow-length veil of misty tulle flowed from a crown of seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink and white carnations mingled with fern.

Miss Lynn Hardy of Toronto as maid of honor was dressed in a floor-length pale green gown and carried a bouquet of yellow carnations. The bridesmaid, Miss Wanda Baker of Belleville, sister of the bridegroom was identically attired, but in a floor-length yellow dress and carried a bouquet of pale green carnations.

Successful Living

Bottled Emotions Can Be Explosively Dangerous

DORIS CLARE

DEAR DORIS — Before we went together my husband went with another girl. They were not angels together. He made his mistake for which he has been sorry. But we have been happily married.

About nine months ago we went to a party and this girl was also there. We have run into each other off and on. This time something struck me like a cold hand or a darkness and all the dirty past came back. It seemed as if my children and husband were not my own; I didn't seem to know them. I was sure I would go insane. I hate her enough to kill her and also my husband at times.

It is like a heavy pressure inside of me. We have always been very close and I am losing my feeling for him. I do not want to be like this. — ALMOST INSANE.

DEAR ALMOST INSANE — It's an appalling sensation — but perhaps not too abnormal, at that.

For most of your married life you have succeeded in pushing this early affair of your husband's deep into your subconsciousness. You were glad to. You knew you had his love.

Then suddenly the woman who had him first shows her face. You've seen her before, but this time that old, deep-buried resentment rears its ugly head. The powerful subconscious mind and emotions demand to be noticed. It's overwhelming.

O.K. It's out now. You've said you hate her. You are dismayed that this resentment also includes him. Don't bury it again until you've discussed it, either with him or a trusted friend. Siphon off that damaging emotion and live happily ever afterwards!

To HELPLESS — This is not love, but a 14-year-old's folly. Your two-timer should be seeing other girls, and ditto for you and the boys.

DEAR DORIS — Would you be able to tell me how I can find out if my boy friend of the past three years is a married man? He told me once he lived two years with a woman in the north. She had three children he claims did not belong to him.

I love him a lot but since we are both 34 years I'd like to be sure of my future. After three years I wonder why he does not still mention marriage. I know he loves me. — WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING — If you know where he lived before, the city clerk might dig up a record of a marriage with his name on it. This may be the key to his silence.

There is always the chance that he likes things the way they are. No responsibilities; your companionship anyway; probably lots of free dinners. Better raise the question. And free yourself for more hopeful associations if he is just wasting your time.

Confidential to STEPMOTHER — Your eldest stepdaughter is doing what comes naturally. She resents you and wants to undermine your authority. Your part is to win her confidence; your husband's to apply any needed discipline. It's up to him to help make a unit of this assorted family, instead of leaving you to fight a losing battle.

Parents Will Be Asked To Assist

MONTREAL (CP) — Parents of teen-agers in some Montreal schools will be asked to help select their children's classroom courses next September.

Parent participation is part of a subject-promotion system to be introduced at that time in all the high schools operated by the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal.

Involved next September will be every pupil entering Grades 8 and 10. One year after that, every pupil in all four high-school grades will come under the plan.

Choice of courses is to begin with the drawing up of each student's prospective program by his principal, teachers and guidance counsellors.

Then parents will be asked to examine the program. If they think it should be different, the whole matter will be discussed at a conference.

No longer must a student take certain courses because he is placed in a certain grade with others.

He will report each day to an assigned room for attendance-taking. After that, he is on his own, with a personal timetable for the rest of the day.

Pupils will take fewer subjects in a given year but will study each of them more intensively.

They will advance through the grades by grade but by subject. And the teen-ager who must repeat does so by repeating the subject or subjects he has failed and not an entire grade.

REV. JOHN WATSON.LUCAS AND MRS. LUCAS

Lucas – Donnan

Good Tidings Pentecostal Tabernacle, Stirling, was the scene of a lovely spring wedding on Saturday, April 3 when Doris Pauline Donnan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Donnan, Stirling was united in marriage to Rev. John Watson Lucas Jr., son of Rev. and Mrs. John W. Lucas Sr. of Calgary, Alberta. Rev. Robert Donnan of Stirling officiated at the ceremony assisted by the father of the bridegroom Rev. John Lucas Sr. Traditional wedding music was rendered by Mrs. Connie Donnan who also accompanied the soloist, Miss Irene MacMillan in several vocal selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father wore a floor-length gown of white peau de soie highlighted with a lace overlay long sleeved bolero. The bell-shape skirt was enhanced with lace appliques centred with fabric roses and the shapel length train was held in place by two large rosettes. A shoulder-length butterfly tiered veil flowed from a coronet of tulle leaves interspersed with tiny seed pearls. She carried a white Bible crested with red Sweetheart roses mingled with Nyanith florets.

The maid of honor was Miss Edna Marukski of Terrace, British Columbia who wore a turquoise dress of peau de soie featuring elbow-length sleeves and a boat neckline. The bell-shape skirt was accented at waist with a matching cummerbund She wore a pillbox hat with matching veil, and other accessories to match. The bridesmaids both nieces of the bride, the Misses Helen and Linda Donnan of Napanee were attired similar to the maid of honor. The little flower girl was Miss Kimberly Donnan who wore a long white gown of peau de soie with short puffed sleeves and round neckline trimmed with lace with a turquoise sash which matched the dresses of the other bridal attendants. All carried baskets of turquoise sprayed Shasta 'mums interspersed with pink Sweetheart roses.

Rev. Larry Broughton of Coalhurst, Alberta was groomsman, while Mr. Keith Donnan, brother of the bride and Mr. Terry Law of Medicine Hat were ushers.

The reception was held in the Odd Fellows Hall at Stirling where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a pastel pink two-piece dress with pink hat and gloves, other accessories in black and feathered pink carnation corsage. The bridegroom's mother was unable to attend due to illness.

For the wedding trip to New York State and points eastward the bride chose a blue and white silk knit suit, powder blue maribou hat with crown of flowers, navy and white accessories and a white gardenia corsage.

Prior to returning home last August after spending four years at Hay River, N. W. T. the bride was tendered a miscellaneous shower; also a miscellaneous shower held by friends of the bridegroom in Calgary, Alberta and a linen shower by women of the Stirling community with Nellie Donnan, Olive Cook and Grace Wilson as hostesses. She was also honored at presentations in Pembroke when she received a set of breakfast dishes; by students of Belleville General Hospital when she received a set of corning ware and a dozen roses, and by the congregation of Good Tidings Pentecostal Tabernacle.

Guests were present from Coalhurst, Calgary and Medicine Hat, Alberta, Terrace, B. C., Ridgetown, Toronto and other local points.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucas will reside in Calgary, Alberta.

Susanna's Family Fare

NEST — NO EGGS

Hello There! — As Easter and Mother's Day are almost upon us, and gifts once again are to be thought of, I decided to send an idea which is inexpensive but also pretty and practical.

Have you ever heard of "egg carton jewelry boxes?" These can be made from the oblong containers or from the square-cut ones, but they must have the hinged one-piece lids. I used one of each size, and covered them with rose paint on the inside and black on the outside. When dry, they can be used to hold one item in every space. The wood fibre cartons are lovely.

These are especially interesting and easy for children to make for their own gift to mother — or for other relatives at any time of the year. An inexpensive trinket or two could be placed inside the "jewel box." — Mrs. John Careme

SENTIMENTAL BLUES

Dear Susanna: Over the years many of us find that for sentimental reasons, or for use at some future date, we are anxious to protect and keep a pure white garment. It might be a veil, a baptismal gown, a confirmation dress, or some other religious or special occasion outfit. It might even be a wedding gown.

Naturally, we want these items to stay white, so in order to keep them from yellowing, do give your readers the same advice that applies to storing linens. That is, place the garment in a blue bag or wrap it in plenty of blue tissue paper before putting it in storage. — Mrs. Marie Sullivan

It is most important to preserve these treasures. Herein lie the memories of yesterday and the dreams of tomorrow. — SUSANNA

READER'S FRIDAY COLUMN

QUESTION:
What I need in my travels (where I light housekeep — I don't like eating in cafes) is a few recipes to make meals for one. There must be hundreds in the same fix — old folk who are alone and like myself find themselves without a fridge — only a hot-plate, a few dishes, etc. Don't want to overeat and put on weight . . . Geo. W.M.

ANSWER:
A splendid idea, George. I will give details for three dinners to serve one person with a two-burner hot plate — no refrigerator.

FRIDAY
(Guests)

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

1) CHICKEN (one serving):

Buy one chicken leg — drumstick and thigh attached. Simmer, covered, in 1 cup water for 40 minutes. Add one quartered potato and one quartered carrot and one onion sliced and ½ teaspoon salt, and simmer, covered, for 20 minutes longer until vegetables are tender. Remove chicken and vegetables to plate warmed under hot water tap and dried. Stir together 1 tablespoon flour and 2 tablespoons cold water to a smooth paste and stir this into broth until thick. Serve broth over chicken and vegetables.

2) EGGS (Scrambled — one serving):

Heat 1 tablespoon butter in heavy frying pan until deep gold. Remove pan from heat and add 1 teaspoon each finely chopped parsley and green onion. Beat 2 eggs slightly and add 2 tablespoons hot water, ¼ teaspoon salt, slight shake of pepper, ¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Return pan to high heat, turn egg mixture in, do not stir for 1 minute, then tip pan, lift cooked portion up with spatula or rubber scraper and let still-liquid portion flow under it, continuing this tipping until egg is softly set. Serve at once on warm plate accompanied by hard crusty roll or buttered whole wheat toast and sliced tomato. Variation: Since nutritionists advise that all of us should have liver once per week and this is a problem for live-aloners, you can add chicken liver to this Scrambled Eggs supper by cutting three of them in halves to make them thinner and gently sautéing until barely set first in the pan with butter before it is browned. Lift liver from pan, cook egg as above, and when ready to serve the scrambled eggs place the cooked livers on top, fold scrambled eggs over, omelette-style and serve.

3) STEAK (one serving):

Buy a T-bone steak weighing about ¾ lb. Heat heavy frying pan, rub it with a little of the fat trimmed from steak, put steak in hot pan and cover and cook over high heat 1 or 2 mins. Remove cover, turn over, sprinkle with salt and pepper and sauté uncovered until of the degree of doneness you desire. You can test its doneness by slitting best at bone. Before you cook your steak put on to boil in 1" of water in saucepan 1 medium potato and into the same pan put shredded green beans, slightly salted and with a little butter, wrapped in foil with double fold. The beans steam and are delicious and will be cooked when potato is tender.

Funerals, Wills Should Not Be Discussed by Deathbed

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I hope you will not consider this letter too morbid or indelicate for your column.

Is it true when a person dies his hearing is the last of his senses to go? And is it true that even though a person is in a deep coma, unable to move or talk, he can still hear everything that is being said?

ANN LANDERS

Recently a relative passed away. It made me very uncomfortable to be at the bedside while the funeral arrangements were being made, along with the conversation relating to his finances and speculation about his will. It must be horrible for a dying person to hear such matters discussed by well-meaning folks who mistakenly believe he is too far gone to know anything. Will you print this please? — RESPECT WANTED FOR ALL.

DEAR ALL — It is not what a person hears, but what he comprehends that counts.

A patient may respond to light and touch and sound but these responses are automatic and do not indicate that the brain is translating anything.

If the doctor says the patient is in a coma, it is safe to assume there is no comprehension. Since patients do slip in and out of a comatose state, however, it is best not to discuss funerals, wills and other matters at the bedside.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I liked your response to the postman's wife whose husband was not appreciated by the people on his route when he performed the extra courtesies, such as paying the postage due out of his own pocket and collecting later — maybe.

We in Anchorage, Alaska, have expressed, both privately and publicly, our gratitude to our postal carriers and we'd like to share with you and your readers the story of their heroism and generosity.

In March of 1964 we had some terrifying earthquakes. Virtually all lines of communication were destroyed, but the mail went through. The first news our families received that we were alive reached them by mail. A special delivery letter arrived at our home two days after the earthquake. It was an invitation from relatives offering a place to live if we needed it.

Our road was gone and many homes on our block were destroyed, but the postman brought the mail. His home was damaged, too. He had no heat or water, but he was on the job.

We have let our postmen know how much we appreciate them, but it would be very generous of you to print a word or two under "confidential" in your column. Will you?—ALASKAN DOURDOUGH.

DEAR AL — I'd rather do more than that, so I'm printing your letter — every word of it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — After exchanging Christmas gifts for several years I am very hurt because a friend accepted my gift, thanked me profusely and made no mention that she did not intend to reciprocate as usual. (Finances were not a factor here.)

I believe she should have told me several weeks before Christmas that she no longer wished to exchange gifts. I would not then have bought her a gift and could have spent a similar amount on an orphan or someone who might not receive much at Christmas time. Do you agree? — POST-HOLIDAY GRIPE.

DEAR POST — I doubt that you would have felt more kindly toward the woman had she telephoned and said she wished to put an end to the gift giving.

It's always difficult to terminate a practice which has become traditional. However, it sounds as if this friendship was dangling by a thread — gift or no gift.

Canada Can Only Obtain Unity Through Diversity Daughters of Empire Told

HAMILTON (CP) — Rev. Richard D. Jones of Toronto, national executive director of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, said Thursday night Canada can only obtain unity through diversity.

Mr. Jones was the guest speaker at the annual dinner meeting of the Ontario chapter, Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, which is holding a three-day convention.

He rejected both enforced uniformity and the "melting-pot" technique for gaining unity in Canada.

Enforced uniformity, such as that practised by Hitler, will not work, he said, because eliminating people who do not conform to the same background, religion or politics as the majority could not be accepted here.

In addition, the super-patriotism of the melting-pot theory, such as practised in the U.S., is also unacceptable.

"Five million French - Canadians don't melt," he said.

Mr. Jones called his plan for national unity, "diversity cultural pluralism."

As an example, he cited a symphony orchestra. Canadians playing together could "give us a harmony and a music we couldn't get from any one of the separate instruments."

"If enough organizations like the IODE and the council of Christians and Jews, and others became interested we can work out this problem we face," he said.

Mrs. W. R. Morrison of Hamilton was re-elected as president of the group.

Other officers elected included: Mrs. R. H. Potts, Niagara Falls, standard bearer, and Mrs. R. J. Skippon, Sarnia, world affairs secretary.

Sunday School Lesson

Cross Is Way of Life

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

The leadership in the Kremlin, here in Moscow is dedicated to militant atheism. What were once three cathedrals in which early worshipped within the Kremlin wall are now only tourist attractions. And yet, on the top of these and other buildings in the Kremlin, Christian crosses still gleam in the sun. Just outside the Kremlin wall, and within sight of Lenin's tomb, is Russia's most photographed building, the cathedral of St. Basil, with its onion - shaped domes reaching high above the Red Square. On the top of this famous building are gleaming crosses held in place by guide wires. It is as if, with all their denial of God, the communists have not been able to uproot the significance of the crucifixion from human history.

In Philadelphia's Wanamaker store there hangs at Easter time a painting of the crucifixion by the famous Hungarian artist, Munkazsy. In the foreground of this picture there is a young man who has evidently started to carry some of this event to people in Palestine: for some thing has stopped him in his tracks. One foot still points in the direction of Jerusalem, but something—perhaps a cry from the cross— has caused him to stop and look back at the figure on the central cross.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for April 11: "The Crucifixion," Matthew 27:27-46.

Something like this happened in the experience of the disciples of Jesus. At first they were appalled by the fact and horror of Jesus' death. But soon they began to see it in a different light. This was not merely an act of men. They believed it was an act of God through which He was revealing the sheer extent of His love for a sinful world.

BOOKS NOT ADEQUATE

Thousands of books have been written to try to explain the significance of Jesus' crucifixion. None has completely plumbed the depth of the significance of this tragic event. Yet, as one looks at it, certain truths begin to become evident.

For one thing, the event on Calvary reveals the ugliness, the cruelty, and the stupidity of sin in the human heart. The cross was such a cruel way to put a person to death. Yet, rather than shudder, some seemed to glory in the event. The soldiers had no obey orders to put Jesus to death, they didn't have to jam a crown of thorns down on His brow. The bypasers may have felt Jesus' death was necessary, they didn't have to add to His physical suffering by mocking Him as He hung on the cross.

Sin is not only cruel, it is stupid. It thinks it can mock the laws of God, and none-the-less writes Students in some communities today have vented blind hatred by burning down libraries. This is not only vandalism; it is sheer stupidity—destroying books that could lead them to a greater understanding of life. Perhaps war is the ultimate human stupidity destroying human lives with all their capacity for creative service, destroying art and historic treasures that can never be replaced.

The crucifixion revealed that the people who thought they were good were sinners, too. It was good people who plotted Jesus' death. They thought they were ridding the world of a menace. They did not realize how much they were revealing their own callousness and hate. It never occurred to them that they needed prayer for their forgiveness.

DEEPER MEANING REVEALED

But the cross revealed something else. It revealed a love that would go to the uttermost for the sake of a sinful world. Men cursed Jesus, they mocked Him, they beat Him, and finally killed Him, but they could not make Him hate back. He died with a prayer for their forgiveness on His lips.

This, the Bible says, is God's kind of love. The total ministry of Jesus was designed to bear out this truth. God is the Shepherd who goes out seeking the lost sheep. He is the Father who runs down the road to greet the prodigal son with a kiss of pardon. He does not force men to be good. He gives them freedom to go into the far country of their choice. But when they realize the loneliness and barren-

NAPANEE — Napanee Jaycees held a meeting Wednesday evening to elect the first slate of officers to the newly formed Napanee Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Ab Perkins chairman of extension of the Kingston branch, was chairman for the evening. Mr. Perkins introduced Jaycee Vice-President, of Belleville, who spoke to the members on the purpose and work of the Jaycee organization. Other projects were, the taping of childrens bicycles with safety reflective tape, and the transforming of a vacant lot into a parkland.

Mr. Kvarda concluded his speech by telling the men they must work diligently to develop themselves mutually and mentally.

The officers elected were: president, Ernest Leaver; vice-president, Mr. Maurice Rankin; treasurer, Mr. William Vanknoshnott; secretary, Mr. Kenneth Young; directors, Mr. James Elliot and Mr. Lorne Verhoff.

Claims Texans Reaped Harvest In Buying Line

TORONTO (CP) — NDP Leader Donald C. MacDonald said Thursday a group of millionaire Texans reaped a bonanza by purchasing the Northern Ontario link of the Trans-Canada Pipe Line at less than cost from the federal government.

He said in the legislature that in May, 1963 Trans-Canada Pipe Lines paid $108,272,813 for a section of the line built by the Northern Ontario Pipe Line Crown corporation for $128,856,316. The value of the line then probably was $200,000,000 or more.

Trans - Canada's agreement with the Crown corporation established a minimum annual rental for use of the Northern Ontario link of 3½ per cent of the original capitalization, he said.

The actual rental would be based on gas volume and any excess over 3½ per cent would be applied to a reduction of the price at which Trans-Canada could ultimately purchase the link.

PAYS RENT

Up until the time Trans-Canada exercised its option to buy the line, it had paid out $41,110,773 in rental, of which $21,453,443 had been applied towards the capital cost of construction.

"As a result, Trans-Canada picked up the Northern Ontario link for a mere $108,272,873," Mr. MacDonald said.

"I short, the net result of this deal was that the public treasury of Canada provided money at the ridiculously low interest rate of 3½ per cent to the multimillionaire Texans who had originally joined forces to form Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Com-

He asked Energy Minister C. R. Simonett to tell the house whether the $35,000,000 was advanced to the federal government and how much was refunded to the province when Trans-Canada bought the Northern Ontario link.

Mr. Simonett said the federal government had never asked for the use of any of the money.

About 3,000 marines will be landed, at the Da Nang air base on the coast 380 miles north of Saigon and Bien Hoa, the ancient capital of South Viet Nam 50 miles northwest of Da Nang and 20 miles north of the border with North Viet Nam.

Another 4,000 marines landed at Da Nang March 8 to help guard the air base there from which many of the raids on North Viet Nam originate.

A U.S. statement said the additional marines were requested by the government of South Viet Nam.

Meanwhile, some 80 U.S. Air Force bombers and fighters struck two vital bridges in North Viet Nam today, U.S. officials said all the planes returned to their base safely.

The officials said the raiders wrecked bridges at Qui Vinh, 10 miles north of the border, and at the Kien, 35 miles northeast of the border. One is a railway bridge and the other the road bridge.

Military sources in Saigon said that the situation with regard to the mutiny in the South Vietnamese navy was "still fluid." As yet there has been no comment from the government, which clearly approves the action of the young naval officers who ousted the navy's commander, Adm. Chung Tan Cang.

Some observers thought Cang and his deputy, Cmdr. Lam Nguon Tanh, might still command loyal forces and could make trouble for the mutineers and the government.

But all Cang and Lam were believed in hiding in Saigon.

Tax Increases Announced in Quebec Budget

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean Lesage Thursday night announced new Quebec taxes on hotel and motel room rentals and on long-distance telephone calls, telegrams and other means of telecommunications.

As a result of the provincial budget, Quebecers today are paying a penny a pack more for 25 cigarettes and a penny extra for each gallon of gasoline. Diesel fuel taxes are up one cent to 22, and the tax on tobacco and cigars has been increased to 12 from 10 per cent.

Cigarettes sold in Quebec for 41 cents for a pack of 20 Thursday and 51 cents for a pack of 25. The one-twenty-fifth of a cent increase for each cigarette works out to one cent on a pack of 25 and four-fifths of a cent on a pack of 20.

The gasoline tax, last increased by two cents in 1963, now is 16 cents a gallon. Gas prices range up to 44 cents a gallon in Quebec.

SETS TAX INCREASES

The record budget, which forecasts government spending of $1,971,738,000 in the 1965-66 fiscal year, contained a series of tax increases and two new taxes aimed at gaining $25,000,000 in revenue. An over - all deficit of $259,313,000 was forecast, which is a record figure for Quebec.

Effective May 1, taxes on meals and liquor, sold in restaurants, hotels and motels will be increased to six from five per cent and will be extended to those prepared for outside delivery. Only meals costing more than $1.24, rather than the previous 99 cents, would be taxed.

A new six-per-cent tax on hotel and motel room rentals would go into effect May 1 probably the first tax of its kind in Canada, though it is common in the United States and Europe—the premier said.

Rooms rented for one month or more would be exempt, except at resorts, to allay the effect on students and laborers.

Another new tax of six per cent would apply to long - distance telephone calls, telegrams, teletype services and other forms of telecommunications effective May 1. Local calls already are subject to the tax.

Crusade Rally Will Mark S. A. Centennial

CAMPBELLFORD — As 1965 is the centenary year of the Salvation Army, the Campbellford Salvation Army Corps will celebrate the centenary by holding a "Crusade for Christ' from Wednesday, April 21st to Monday, April 26th.

Each night at 8 o'clock a crusade rally will be led by Colonel John Wells, who is an evangelist with over 40 years experience as an officer of the Salvation Army. Over 20 of these years were spent in China with ten years in Canada, six in New Zealand as principal of the Officers Training College.

Colonel Wells is also well known as a musician and song writer.

Mrs. Wells served as a missionary in China until her marriage in 1931. Since then she has assisted her husband in his various appointments. A daughter, Captain Ruth Wells was in charge of the Campbellford Corps in 1960.

Colonel Wells will be supported each night by musical groups from Trenton, Brighton and Belleville. Friday evening groups of women from local churches will assist and on Monday evening ministers of local churches will take part in the service.

All services will be held in the Salvation Army Citadel on Bridge Street and the public are invited to attend.

He reiterated that he gave Mr. Dupuis the money May 4, 1961, and said it was not until late 1962 or early 1964 that he complained to Quebec Premier Lesage, Roads Minister Bertrand Pinard and Revenue Minister Erie Kierans.

Mr. Daoust then presented in evidence a letter that Mr. Desjauriers said he wrote to Mr. Pinard June 22, 1961.

The letter did not mention any payment, but expressed confidence that the racetrack could be in operation by Aug. 17 of that year "if we can start work Monday."

MENTIONS REQUEST

The letter mentioned that Mr. Pinard personally was to "present our request for a permit to operate a racetrack to the cabinet."

Mr. Desjauriers promised in the letter to retain financial control of the racetrack and "also, in order to prevent the monopoly on harness races that some people are trying to establish, to have no dealings directly or indirectly with any director of the (Montreal) Blue Bonnets Corporation."

The chiropractor said he could not recall ever having received a reply to the letter.

He admitted having visited Mr. Pinard's office in Quebec City in January, 1964, but denied having said the Liberal party would suffer if he went bankrupt.

"I told him (Mr. Pinard) my situation," Mr. Desjaurdins said. "I never said 'you.' I never threatened Mr. Pinard himself."

Newsman Made $1,000 Trading In Windfall

TORONTO (CP) — Graham Ackerley, a reporter for The Northern Miner, testified Thursday he made about $1,000 from trading Windfall shares last July.

He was testifying before the royal commission, headed by Mr. Justice Arthur Kelly of the Ontario Court of Appeal, which is investigating the rise of Windfall shares to $5.60 from 56 cents and before dropping to 30 cents.

The commission resumed hearings after a six-day adjournment caused by an appeal against a ruling by Commissioner Kelly. Mr. Justice Kelly had ruled that cross - examination of witnesses by lawyers representing principals appearing before the commission, also be allowed.

The Ontario Court of Appeal upheld his decision.

EDITOR WAS AWAY

John Carrington, editor of The Northern Miner, testified he was on holidays from July 5-19 and didn't see any copies of the paper until he returned.

Questioned about his opinion of the July 16 edition of the paper, he said: "I thought the story on page one was a reasonable presentation of the facts, but I wasn't happy with the editorial. ..."

The April 16 issue had a front-page story outlining Windfall's progress as far as was known, but the editorial congratulated Windfall on finding a mine.

Mr. Carrington said after his return the paper attempted "to get across the story that we didn't know what was in the drill hole and the company hadn't said it was ore."

Hope Glimmers for Leukemia Vaccine

By PAT McGRADY

Of all diagnoses, the most fatal is leukemia. It is destiny, signed and sealed, the setting for an early Christmas, the essence of the six-month-to-live story.

Leukemia, meaning "white blood," is cancer of the bone marrow and lymphatic organs which manufacture blood cells.

Leukemic cells are young, useless, predatory and constantly proliferating—invade the marrow, swell the spleen, liver, lymph nodes and other organs. A number of malignant diseases involving lymphatic and marrow tissues are closely related and kill even more people; they include lymphosarcoma and Hodgkin's disease.

Leukemia is called incurable. Still, youngsters dying of the disease have been beneficiaries of that rare miracle, "spontaneous regression." A few are completely cured by nature.

ON INCREASE

Considered a disease of children, leukemia is now five times as common in older people, and the incidence is increasing at an astounding rate.

It is considered a rare disease. Yet it is the leading killer of children: in 1963, an estimated 11,500 adults and 2,300 children died of it.

One gets the impression that leukemia always is rapidly fatal. Yet some patients live 10 or 20 or more years with chronic leukemia under reasonable control and die of diseases of old age.

Dr. James T. Grace of Roswell Park Memorial Hospital in Buffalo announced in the fall of 1964 that he had succeeded in growing human leukemic cells containing what he considers to be viruses.

He is growing them in unlimited quantities. This is the first essential step toward a vaccine for the prevention of leukemia and anti-sera for its treatment.

If the viruses turn out to be the causative agent for this disease, measures for its prevention and treatment in humans could be applied immediately.

CLUES POINT TO VIRUS

Every now and then a dramatic situation yields a promise of penetrating the inscrutable exterior of leukemia. In most instances the evidence hints at a virus or other infection.

Dr. James T. Grace, of Roswell Park Memorial Hospital, Buffalo N.Y.

Scientists at the University of Minnesota discovered that with in a short period children of four veterinarians developed acute lymphatic leukemia. The veterinarians had treated cows which had lymphosarcoma and chickens with contagious virus-caused leukemoid diseases.

Were the veterinarians unwitting carriers of the disease?

Leukemias and lymphomas struck human, chickens and cattle recently in a rural area of South Central Nebraska. Was there a connection?

In Niles, a Chicago suburb of 19,863 people, eight children came down with leukemia in two years. Seven either attended or had older brothers or sisters attending a parochial school with 1,416 students. All lived within a two-mile square area. Investigators concluded the outbreak was due to an unidentified infectious agent.

Meanwhile, a dozen other clusters of childhood leukemia were reported from widely separated communities — Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Cheyenne, Wyo., and a Seattle suburban area. Some, or perhaps all, may be a statistical mirage.

Several bits of evidence indicate there is at least a one-way transmission of leukemia—from man to animals. Dr. Ludwik Gross of New York cites experiments in which scientists induced cancers, including leukemia, in rabbits, rats, chicks, and mice with human tumors, extracts of them.

The acute disease in human and animals observes a seasonal variation; like infections, its peak is during the winter and early spring.

ONSET IS INSIDIOUS

The onset of leukemia usually is insidious in both children and adults. Early leukemia is remarkably free of pain; the swollen tissues seldom are tender.

In children, it often follows a slow recovery from a cold or a contagious disease. The child is pale, apathetic, somewhat feverish, bearing bruises of unknown origin, and without appetite. Eventually bleeding tendencies—from the gums and under the skin most often—are found.

In the best medical centres, any single antileukemia treatment gives complete (and temporary) remissions in only 35 per cent of children. Expensive experimental treatment combinations will extend the average leukemic child's life to about one year.

Chronic leukemia, most often reserved for adults, may be preceded by a year or two of unexplainable fatigue, easy bruising, bleeding, itching, flatulence, dyspepsia and perhaps an enlarged spleen and lymph nodes.

A good deal of study has gone into the question as to when the doom of leukemia is sealed. There is a wide range of conclusions anywhere from several generations before the victim's birth to a short time before the disease is diagnosed.

One study of 285 leukemic children by Dr. Daniel Stowens of the University of Southern California showed that in one-quarter of the cases, at least one member of the family usually a grandparent, had diabetes. If these findings are borne out, they may indicate that diabetes in some cases constitutes a genetic hormonal predisposition to leukemia.

Radiation causes leukemia both in animals and humans. It does so in one large dose or multiple small ones.

There is considerable difference of opinion, however, as to the size of the radiation dose which is dangerous for humans, and this is a sensitive subject for physicians who feel that fear will restrain patients from having necessary X-ray examinations and treatments.

The lot of physicians themselves hardly instills confidence: as a class, radiologists, dentists, dermatologists, radiation-using general doctors have much higher than normal leukemia rates.

VACCINE A POSSIBILITY

One of the most intriguing chains of evidence as to the nature of leukemia centres around the thymus, a gland located between the neck and the chest, behind the breastbone.

It is composed largely of lymph cells, or lymphocytes and it reaches its growth peak during infancy, after which it gradually slows down until at puberty, it atrophies.

It now appears that at least in mice, the thymus plays a key role in leukemia. Indirect damage to the gland brings on the disease. In some mice, radiation and viruses cannot induce leukemia in the absence of the gland.

Scientists in London and at the University of Minnesota have found that a substantial number of cancer patients, and particularly leukemics, lacked gamma globulin, the stuff that antibodies are made of, and consequently are defenseless against infections. Lymph cells, like those in the thymus, manufacture gamma globulin.

The thymus seems to seed the system with lymphoid cells which become lifetime lymphocyte and antibody factories.

Use Stock Market for New Pool

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain's gamblers, who already wager about £840,000,000 ($2,520,000,000) a year on dogs, horses, soccer, bingo and the turn of a card, now have a new outlet—the stock market.

Two insurance brokers have launched what they call the city page finance pool, a system similar to soccer pools but substituting share prices for the names of teams.

From a list of 32 shares selected by the promoters, investors have to choose eight shares which are static in price over any one of three successive days — Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Those who select eight correct forecasts will share the prize money. This is like the soccer pools, which depend on forecasts of drawn games.

If there are only seven or six shares whose prices are unchanged over the three days, people who select them will be the winners.

If fewer than six shares are unchanged, the pool for that week will be null and void.

The amount of money available for distribution as prizes will depend on the total amount invested.

Follies Show By Students Well Received

PICTON (Staff) — Students of the Prince Edward Collegiate Institute Thursday night presented a two-act follies show to a near full house on their first night. A lively program excited the audience with "Rock and Roll" Fashion Show (half seriously presented by the boys) and dance routines. The students performed like veteran troupers and used their closed circuit television camera and receivers to good advantage. The interjection of the TV programing between acts helped the continuity of the program, and added a great deal of humor.

A group of folk singers, 12 in number, added to the "enjoyment of the crowd with many fine selections, as did a skit of a TV panel show. The panel show called "It's Debatable" was a "take-off" on a moderator of a Kingston TV series. Larry Taylor, who is MC'd the skit did an admirable job and one of the highlights of the routine was a subject the cast introduced, called "Gambling in the Town of Picton."

The show was directed and organized by two students, Larry Taylor and Susan Ayres. The crew responsible for operating the TV portion of the show are also to be commended. They were Paul Hubbs, Dennis Williams, Ralph Perkin and Clive Pierson.

Fire Losses In March Total $11,700

PICTON (Staff) — Town council was advised at its recent monthly meeting in Shire Hall, that there were eight fire calls during the month of March. Damage for the eight fires totalled $11,700, according to the report submitted by Fire Chief Bell.

Chief Bell made a special appeal for a "clean-up" to remove fire hazards. "This is the time of the year when our attention is turned to the chore of cleaning up our yards, basements and attics. I would like to appeal to those who burn leaves and dry grass, etc., to be careful of wind. Keep fires at a safe distance from combustible fences and buildings; above all do not leave a fire unattended," said the chief.

Owners of vacant lots are also reminded that they are responsible to keep such property clear of brush and high grass which becomes a fire hazard when dry.

GET CHANCE TO BUY

Town council received a letter from Crown Assets Disposal Corporation asking if the town would be interested in buying the Picton Armouries.

The building is assessed at $4,075 for land and $88,575 for building, a total of $92,650. Mayor McFarland advised that he would personally contact the Corporation representative in this matter.

Chamber Will Hold Fishing Derby in County

PICTON (Staff) — An opportunity for fishermen to win one thousand dollars in prizes, and also to get in a few days of pickerel (walleye) fishing before the season opens in other parts of Ontario, is offered by Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce.

The annual fishing derby is being held, starting at 12.01 Saturday morning, May 1 and closing at 2 p.m., Sunday, May 2, when the prizes will be awarded at Hepburn's Picton Bay Marina in Picton.

The Derby is again expected to prove that some of the finest fishing in Canada is to be found in the Bay of Quinte and in the inland Lakes of Prince Edward, such as East Lake, West Lake, Consecon Lake.

Co-operating with the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce is Quinte Tourist Association which has listed accommodation that will be provided on request by writing their Picton office. They will also mail details of the contest.

There are two 'first' prizes, designed to give non-residents of the area equal opportunity to win the top two prizes. For the largest pickerel caught by a person living outside of the Counties of Prince Edward, Hastings, Lennox and Addington, Frontenac and Northumberland, caught in local waters, there is a prize of a nine and one-half horsepower Johnston motor, valued at $410.00.

The second 'first' prize is open to those named in the above counties only and is a six horsepower motor valued at $310.

There are other fine prizes open to all taking part. The lady catching the largest pickerel receives a spinning outfit. There is a valuable cooler for the smallest pickerel entered.

Since many northern pike are caught in these waters, there is a trailer, valued at $130 for the biggest one caught by anyone.

A spinning outfit goes to the person with highest total weight catch during the two days. All who enter any fish are eligible to win a transistor radio in a draw.

Registration is at Picton Bay Marina in Picton and must be made in advance of fishing to be eligible. Registration is one dollar for each adult, 50c for children. Mail applications filled by writing Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce, Picton, Ontario. All details of contest and maps of fishing area will also be mailed if desired.

During the weekend, there will be a fish fry and dance at Prince Edward Yacht Club, Saturday night, May 1. A sportsman show will be held Friday and Saturday nights, April 30 and May 1, by the Kinsmen Club at the Fair Grounds.

Don't let backward weather prevent making plans to enter the great Fishing Derby in waters which are famed for good fishing.

PAWN SHOP SIEGE — Patrolman Allen Brown takes a quick peek at man who was gunned down in a San Diego, Calif., pawn shop during a robbery attempt Thursday. The fallen man was identified as a pawn shop clerk, Louis Richards. He was killed by gunman who holed up in shop and fought off police in furious gun battle. (AP Wirephoto)

Adolphustown Councillors All Resign

A nomination meeting to fill the vacancies has been called for April 14.

Councillors James Chalmers, Donald Reynolds, Lyle Smith and Jack Roblin accepted each other's resignation and passed a vote of non-confidence in Reeve Mack in the space of a minute Monday night. They were annoyed because Reeve Mack had voted against their instructions at a meeting of Lennox and Addington County Council last month.

Reeve Mack said he and the four councillors voted in February to seek a 60-degree curve at the intersection of Hamburg Road and the 2nd Concession of the Township. However when he learned at county council that the inclusion of such a curve would cost an extra $12,000, he changed his mind and voted against it. Reeve Mack said. County Council defeated the idea 9 to 8.

WEDGEPORT, N.S. (CP) — The International Tuna Tournament, recessed in 1958 because the big fish wouldn't co-operate, will resume here this year, Sept. 10-12.

Four teams representing Canada, Mexico, the United States and the Caribbean are scheduled to angle for the bluefins, each seeking the most and the biggest.

In 1959, after several years of dwindling catches, teams from seven countries went without a nibble.

Nobody was able to give a satisfactory explanation for the disappearance of the tuna, although the salty Acadians from this port on Nova Scotia's southwestern tip endured mackerel and herring, chief food of the tuna, had stopped running in the area.

But there was no doubt the bluefin had gone from Soldier's Rip, a six-knot tidal stream off here where in September, 1949, five international teams ranged for 72 tuna weighing almost 14 tons.

In that bumper year, from late in September, the total for Nova Scotia was 1,760 tuna weighing close to 600 tons.

Last year only 46 were taken.

CONCEPTION BAY GAINS

Although the tournament is returning to Wedgeport, where it was inaugurated in 1937, the best tuna waters seem to have shifted to Newfoundland's Conception Bay.

The catch there has been increasing every year and in 1964 314 were taken, the biggest being a 790-pounder reeled in by Samuel Chapman of New York. Some 10 boats available for charter reported another 401 tuna struck but not boated.

This year will be the first time Canada has entered a team. In the previous 13 matches, Canadian anglers were taken as members of a British Empire team.

Britain won the first tournament in 1937 with four fish weighing a total of 986 pounds. Cuba won in 1938 with 12 weighing 660 pounds.

Belgium, Britain, Cuba, France and the U.S. were entered in 1939, but the match was cancelled because of the outbreak of the Second World War.

Resumed in 1947, Cuba again became the winner, with six tuna weighing 3,997 pounds. The U.S. won in 1948 and 1949, Chile 1950, Britain 1951, Cuba 1952, Mexico 1953 and 1954, Argentina 1955, Britain 1956, Mexico in 1957.

Only three tuna were landed in the 1957 match.

LERNER'S IDEA

Biggest contingent to compete for the international tuna cup was in 1953 when 10 countries, Mexico, Argentina, Cuba, The Netherlands, Brazil, Britain, Chile, France, U.S., and Venezuela were entered.

by fighting the big fish from a frosted by international sportsman Michael Lerner who landed 21 bluefins in eight days off here in 1935.

He astounded local fishermen, the sport. When the tuna disappeared on a lobster boat. It was the method that surprised the fishermen: they knew tuna were there because Timothy Porthier and Louis LeBlanc harpooned and landed a 1,130-pound one in 1934.

In succeeding years many lobster boats were converted for the sport. When the tuna disappeared in 1958 some of the boats were loaned to Newfoundland owners.

Largest tuna ever taken off here with rod and reel was a 1,-

Parliamentary Notebook

By MICHAEL GILLAN

OTTAWA (CP)—The record-long parliamentary session which lasted 240 days fatigued not only members of Parliament but the shorthand reporters who record every word.

Between Feb. 18, 1964, and 2:10 a.m. last Saturday, the 11 Hansard reporters took down more than 11,000,000 words in the Commons.

The previous record is believed to be during the 1959-61 session of the 24th Parliament in which about 9,000,000 words were spoken between Nov. 15, 1960, and Sept. 28, 1961.

Hansard officials also note that the use of the French language is increasing.

At present about 15 per cent of all the words spoken by MPs are in the French language and are taken down by four French-language shorthand reporters.

The amount of French has almost tripled during the last eight years, particularly since the simultaneous interpretation system was installed in the Commons.

The English section of Hansard has seven reporters and two editors, the same numbers as 40 years ago, says W. W. Buskard, chief of the section.

Mr. Buskard, who hopes the staff will be increased soon, said the longer sessions have put such a strain on the staff that serious difficulties are caused if one reporter is ill for a day.

The government has taken responsibility for introducing proposals to improve efficiency in the Commons and save time, a measure announced as a planned government action in the throne speech.

Eric Winkler, the Progressive Conservative Whip, thinks elaborate changes would be unnecessary if the minor opposition parties were stopped from commenting on policy announcements by cabinet ministers.

He has proposed a change to the rules that would direct the Commons Speaker to recognize only the prime minister and the leader of the official opposition, or their spokesmen, to make statements on motions.

His proposal, in the form of a private member's notice of motion, will probably be debated later in this session but likely will be "talked out" and prevented from reaching a vote.

The increase in opposition parties in recent years has prompted changes in rules in practice to take account of this fact. When the prime minister or one of his cabinet announces a policy decision, each party can put up one spokesman.

Stanley Knowles (MP—Winnipeg North Centre) thinks the proposal "nonsense" and an attempt to turn the clock back and ignore facts of life.

Government Whip James Walker would like to see time saved but says that three other opposition parties can be ignored.

Path Towards Peaceful Settlement Said Firmer

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

President Johnson appears to have thrown the Communists off balance with his concession to negotiate the South Viet Nam crisis without preconditions.

The response has been slow, but there is a feeling, at least in British quarters, that the path towards a peaceful settlement is firmer and that the United States no longer is isolated from the great body of world opinion which questioned American position and prospects in the Vietnamese jungles.

Patrick Gordon Walker, former British foreign secretary who steps out on a fact-finding mission next week, now may find it easier to argue in Hanoi and Peking, as he seeks an answer by which the antagonists may be brought to the conference table.

NO ALTERNATIVE

It may be argued in Communist and other quarters that Johnson had no alternative but that he had to step down from his relatively rigid position because the U.S. could not hope to win a military victory in Viet Nam without initiating the threat of a third world war.

As a nation, South Viet Nam is virtually bankrupt. It is difficult to tell fiction from fact in Saigon where the succession of governments has shown no ability to stand up to internal pressures rarity among the masses.

Johnson still insists that in any settlement the independence of South Viet Nam be guaranteed. It may be that when he comes down to negotiations his demands for guarantees will be so stiff they could not be swallowed by the other side.

Yet the president has shown great flexibility in adopting a position which formerly appeared untenable to high Administration officials. They have made clear there would be no negotiations until the North Vietnamese withdrew their support of the Viet Cong. They had indicated French President de Gaulle's proposed neutralization of Indochina would be no more than a facade, screening the Communist take-over of the entire peninsula.

Johnson's suggested maintenance of South Vietnamese independence contains within itself the seeds of its own destruction, which the U.S. previously had rejected.

NOW TO CORROSION

With the country politically split, a Saigon administration dominated by the military cannot be no more than a coalition of the right and left. It would be subject to the corrosion of communism, shadowed by the Communists to the north, to prevent coexistence under Red political pressure.

The prospect therefore must be examined in the light of Peking. Though the Chinese initially demand that Johnson negotiate with the Viet Cong as a rebel force within South Viet Nam—the pressure of the war and the non-aligned countries, together with the indication that South Viet Nam would likely fall to the communists anyway under terms of neutralization, could be operating to the diplomatic door which previously had been shut.

Died by Own Negligence Says Jury

GANANOQUE, Ont. (CP)—Arthur Scholaes, 44, of Toronto died by his own negligence March 29 by driving "too fast for road conditions" on a two-lane section of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway, east of here, and colliding on a curve with a transport truck, a coroner's jury said Thursday.

Scholaes, a Canadian Broadcasting Corporation producer, and Victor Togni, 30, also of Toronto, were killed when their car crashed into a westbound truck driven by Gerald White, 34, of Oakville. White was not injured.

Both Scholaes and Togni, organist at St. Michael's Roman Catholic Cathedral in Toronto, were going to Montreal on assignment for the CBC to record an organ recital.

Canine Said To Be Chronic Alcoholic

LONDON (AP) — Patsy, a seven-year-old part Irish wolfhound, has been declared a chronic alcoholic.

Said his owner Mrs. Mary Shannon: "Our vet says that in all his experience he's never seen an alcoholic dog before."

Today Patsy is a four-pint-a-day dog suffering painful hangovers. The hangovers are so awful he has to be given two aspirins for each hangover.

He even has his regular pub —the Hope and Anchor—in London's east end.

"He used to drink stout," explained Mrs. Shannon, 24, but that seemed a bit heavy for him so he switched to light ale.

"It's becoming quite a problem because he drinks about four pints—and feels awful the next day."

Asked what she was doing about Patsy's addiction, she said:

"I took him to the vet three weeks ago, and the vet advised me to cut down. I'm now trying to get him to taper off."

The dog's addiction began when Mrs. Shannon came home just when she day he was taken to his neighborhood pub by Mrs. Shannon and her husband.

Someone poured him a saucer of stout and Patsy liked it. Filling Mrs. Shannon got to be a regular thing. Soon, the dog started going to the pub on his own.

Canada Welcomes Proposal By LBJ of Program to Develop Southeast Asia

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada has welcomed President Johnson's proposal for a massive development program in Southeast Asia, External Affairs Minister Martin saying Thursday "We . . . are prepared to play our full part in contributing to the success of the plan."

The U.S. president's proposal is viewed as a declaration of willingness to negotiate for a peaceful settlement in Viet Nam, was made in Baltimore Wednesday night, five days after Prime Minister Pearson made an almost identical suggestion in Philadelphia.

The president and Mr. Pearson talked at length about the economic and social development scheme for Asia when they met at the latter's David presidential retreat in Maryland Saturday.

Mr. Martin had previously made public suggestions about such a plan, but Wednesday night was the first time U.S. president made specific proposals—that his government contribute $1,000,000,000 to the United Nations, Paul Tremblay, has counterpart.

"With that kind of great international development as envisaged with a cease-fire followed by political negotiations, with the countries that are given an international guarantee of neutrality and an assurance of continued aid for peaceful development, then the danger, destruction and distress of the present hour might be reduced by peace, hope and progress."

The following day he met Mr. Johnson, spending two hours discussing the proposals, along with other North American matters.

REPORTED ANGERED

Since then there have been reports that the president reacted with anger and even angered by the prime minister's speech. The reports involved Mr. Pearson's decision to make a measured pause in the air attacks.

"To put it mildly," said two political columnists in the New York Herald - Tribune, "the president and the prime minister was stretching diplomatic courtesy when he made the trip to Philadelphia only a few hours before his Saturday luncheon with the president."

But sources close to the meeting say the two leaders say the president had no indication of such feelings. A key part of Mr. Pearson's suggestion was that the bombing might be temporarily suspended "at the right time."

The prime minister has not said he feels this is the right time, and the president obviously does not think it is. The timing of any such pause was believed to be a major point in this discussion.

The two men also talked at length about the development scheme which, as it turns out, was high in the president's mind at the time. But persons at the camp said there were no signs of any resentment.

When reporters arrived in the camp for a post - meeting briefing, the two leaders were smiling and joking in a light - hearted discussion.

REMAINED TESTY

But when a group of photographers moved behind the president —a move he apparently disliked—he became angered, and appeared to remain testy for the rest of the 10-minute session. He was also obviously annoyed at several questions which came after he indicated he did not want to entertain questions.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker referred in the Commons Thursday to "the apparent annoyance of the president over the conduct of the prime minister."

Mr. Pearson has not said what occurred when only he and the president were together. But there was no suggestion of a strained relationship when they parted at Camp David. Mr. Pearson appeared pleased with the visit.

Air Hero Dies in Obscurity, Will Be Buried With Honors

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — An American - born veteran of Canadian aviation in two world wars, who died in obscurity last week in Detroit, will be buried here today with military honors.

R. E. Dodds, 72, died April 2 in a Detroit rooming house. By the coincidence of a similarity in names and flying service, he was first thought to be Robert Dodds, a Canadian ace of the First World War who retired in 1958 as Canada's director of civil aviation.

Published stories of the death of Mr. Dodds in Detroit, identifying him as the First World War ace, led to some confusion when this former civil aviation director was found Thursday to be living in retirement in Hamilton.

Both men served as combat flyers in the First World War. The Detroit man, whose first name was later discovered to have been Roy, served as a captain in the Royal Flying Corps and was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross after a distinguished career as a bomber pilot. Robert Dodds, who has no middle initial, also was a First World War DFC winner and was credited with shooting down 11 German planes.

WAS AUTO DEALER

Roy Dodds was born in Buffalo, N.Y., but moved to Ontario and was brought up in St. Thomas, where he enlisted in 1917. After the end of the war Mr. Dodds, a Detroit organization of former service airmen.

He rejoined the Canada in 1940 and served until 1943 with the RCAF as a station master. In the post-war years he was often in ill health and lived in relative obscurity.

Robert Dodds was appointed civil aviation director in 1950 and served in that post eight years. Since his retirement he has lived comfortably in Hamilton, his birthplace, and has travelled around the world five times. He is 72.

The death of Roy Dodds was unnoticed until officials of the Detroit branch of the Royal Canadian Air Force viewed the body from the city morgue and made funeral arrangements. A Detroit newspaper man wrote a story linking his First World War career with that of Robert Dodds, and then the report was published in several cities.

On Thursday Robert Dodds of Hamilton told his "someone must have got twisted up in the similarity of names."

Many Homeless After Floods Hit States

CHICAGO (AP) — Flood waters churned through streets, homes and fields in Iowa and Minnesota today, leaving thousands homeless.

Towns in Indiana, Nebraska and Ohio were recovering from the lash of tornadoes or strong winds.

A 12-year-old boy standing near a flood was struck and killed by lightning in Ohio.

As rivers rose, floods drove more than 1,000 persons from their homes in Minnesota. More than 2,000 persons have been evacuated in Iowa.

A portion of a dam on the Cottonwood River in southwest Minnesota, burst Thursday night, permitting a heavier flow of water downstream toward Mankato.

The Red Cross estimated that about 2,000 more persons would be evacuated within the next two days in the Mankato area. At least 10 Minnesota highways were closed.

There's tendency among the hockey buffs of the village to swallow the guff that Bobby Hull has discarded his "nice guy" style of play and donned the habiliments of a "you-hit-me-and-I'll-sting you" player.

This, of course, arises from the fact that Bobby was involved in two incidents in Detroit in the second game that sent two Red Wings to hospital.

If the story of Hull changing his spots to those of an aggressive, snarling, fighting leopard is up for sale—I don't buy it.

He was engaged in what officials claimed was a high-sticking duel with the Wings' Doug Barkley who suffered a cut lip. Larry Jeffrey, who is still horde-combat with an injured back, made the mistake of re-checking the Hull highway when Bobby was under a full head of steam.

As Jim Coleman said in his television commentary, "Trying to stop Hull when he is going full speed is like trying to halt a ten-ton truck. It just can't be done."

Since he was a youngster playing minor hockey in the "Sunkland of Ontario," Hull has never resorted to retaliatory measures to discourage foemen from taking liberties on his person.

In this respect he stands alone in that select society some NHL sportswriters have dubbed the "super-star set."

Hull's disdain of eye-for-an-eye and tooth-for-a-tooth tactics is not something he acquired. He was born with it. And in his adherence to it through his minor, junior and professional career, he has established an image that stacks alone in the ranks of the super stars.

Years ago when Bobby was playing minor hockey, Gordie Howe was his idol. I recall seeing Bobby, only a kid, looking up to Gordie with sheer admiration in his eyes, while the great Red Wings star signed an autograph. The two, today, are great friends.

But it ended there. A great many of today's youngsters try to emulate their favorite National Hockey League players. This is one of the reasons there were so many complaints over the television airing of games that sometimes only bloody brawls in close-ups to the living room arenas where wide-eyed youngsters occupy rinkside seats.

Hull has never tried to emulate Howe's style of play, nor that of Rocket Richard. He developed his own style. He employed strength without malice, would turn the cheek rather than turn viciously on an attacking opponent.

Howe and Richard neither sought or achieved the imagery of a Hull. The Red Wings star has always been rough-and tough—when necessary. He always retaliated when he felt there was need. And Howe is one of the few National Leaguers that can really "fight" if he wants to.

He has created an image of his own. You do not see Howe pick a fight—and very rarely do you see an opposing player deliberately pick a fight with him. Fontinato learned that it was not wise, just plain dissmb.

The Rocket was a rough, tough player who would retaliate at a second's notice. He was a battler almost to the point of being vindictive. It was his instinctive way.

Hull has relied on his instinctive yen to play hockey—and seek solace in retaliation. This instinct could put him high on a lone NHL podestal. In eight years he has not been assessed more than 68 minutes. One season he incurred only 17. This season he took 32 and won the halfway poll for the Lady Byng Trophy.

Hull's friends are legion, but there are many who "hate his guts" through nothing but sheer jealousy because he has attained heights and will continue to attain heights their favorite stars will never reach.

After all, a guy who goes out there with braces on his knees and scores two goals in each of two games—with little or disregard for further injury, —against a fired-up Stanley Cup opposition, must be a little better than the common-or-garden variety of pro hockey players.

Jack Adams once told me "there are three kinds of pugilists in the NHL. Those who can fight—won't. Those who can't fight, will try. And there are those who try to fight but make sure it will be stopped before they sustain any damage."

So, as one sportswriter puts it: "Let the mean players be mean, the rough ones rough." And let Hull be what he is—the cleanest super-star the game has been privileged to show."

Hull Blast Gives Hawks 2-1 Win

By JERRY GLADMAN

CHICAGO (CP) — Elmer (Moose) Vasko took page from Bill Gadsby's book Thursday night and helped Chicago Black Hawks even their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series with Detroit Red Wings at two games apiece.

Vasko, a nine-year veteran, played what he termed "my best game of the series" as the Hawks shaded Detroit 2-1 before a crowd of over 19,000.

One might have thought Vasko had been taking instruction from Detroit's Gadsby, who during his 19 years in the National Hockey League has often been called a second goaltender.

Although Glenn Hall was spectacular in goal for the Hawks, the 29-year-old Vasko gave him as much coverage as any netminder could ask for.

The Hawks' defence stand was all over the ice, handing out bone-crushing checks, carrying the puck out of danger and time and again gotting down in front of the Chicago goal to smother hard drives from the point.

"I was blocking shots, breaking up plays," he said, "and all the time I was having a hard time staying on my feet on the worst ice yet."

He said the ice was "terrible, full of ruts and holes and the puck was bouncing all over the place."

HULL SHOWS WAY

But while Pete Mosss was the hero on defence, muscular Bobby Hull was again the guiding light up front.

The 26-year-old left winger registered the winning goal midway through the third period, his sixth of the series and his 30th in 49 playoff games.

He played a great two-way game and might have had more goals except for Detroit netminder Roger Crozier.

He stopped 25 shots, several spectacularly.

Veteran Gordie Howe was the lone Red Wing to beat Hall, who kicked out 27 shots, including 11 in the third period.

It was a close match for the first 30 minutes, but in the final two periods the Wings lacked the sharpness and speed shown in winning the first two matches.

BOBBY HULL

The Hawks' persistent checking enabled them to control the game, keeping the opposition off-balance and forcing them to commit defensive errors.

Detroit coach Sid Abel was disappointed although he thought his club played "the best game of the series."

HAVE ADVANTAGE

Abel pointed out that Wings still have a big advantage with two of the final three games on Detroit ice.

The teams meet again in Detroit Sunday, return to Chicago for a game Tuesday and, if a seventh game is necessary, it will be played in Detroit Thursday.

Abel said the turning point in the game was when the Hawks successfully killed off a five-minute high-sticking penalty to Phil Esposito after Marcel Pronovost was cut for four stitches on the forehead.

"Our failure to score during the penalty took more out of us than it did the Hawks," the former Red Wing great said. "We tried to juggle our players so Howe wouldn't have to carry the load."

When Billy Reay was asked to comment on Detroit's defensive advantage, the final three games, the dapper Chicago coach just shrugged his shoulders resignedly.

"We're going to give it all we got."

The clubs battled to a 1-1 deadlock in the first period. Maki and Howe both scored power-play goals. They went scoreless through the second as the pace slowed.

STEPPED UP PACE

But the Hawks picked up momentum in the final frame and their play was highlighted by Hull's goal.

He zigzagged his way over the centre line, was checked heavily by a Detroit defender, but managed to keep his balance to get the shot away. The drive caught the lower left corner of the net and was so hard Crozier was moving the wrong way.

Despite a frequent display of high sticks and elbowing, referee Vern Buffey called only 12 minor penalties—eight to Detroit. Esposito's high - sticking penalty was the lone major.

The Wings were slated to arrive in Detroit today, while the Hawks returned to their Rockton hideaway, 90 miles from here and will leave for Detroit Saturday.

Yankees At Houston

Indoor Baseball Debuts Tonight

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Houston Astros and New York Yankees play the first indoor professional baseball game in history tonight and it is expected to be minus the controversy swirling around artificial turf in the celebrated domed stadium.

The Astros played a couple of intra - squad games Thursday. The first, in the afternoon, brought dismay to builders of the $31,000,000 domed stadium when the outfielders couldn't see fly balls that got as high as 100 feet in the air. The sun's glare was too much for them.

The night game, however, was just perfect. There wasn't a bobble that could be attributed to glare.

Thus, the mighty structure, built to make baseball possible in comfort a ble surroundings whether it's raining or blowing or hot, will have no terrors for the two teams that have the privilege of bringing a new era to baseball.

Roy Hofheinz, the builder of the domed stadium, didn't have a solution to the daytime problem but he was optimistic that it would be solved. They are already working on it, considering use of special glasses or painting the dome so that the sunlight's glare can't come in. Or maybe just not playing any day games.

There will be 49,500 fans in the great stadium at 7:30 p.m. EST, to watch tonight's exhibition game.

The place seats 46,000 but standing room will be sold to bring it close to the 50,000 mark.

Everyone agrees that the stadium is magnificent, beautiful and all other adjectives alloted to great engineering masterpieces. There is no question in anybody's mind but that the problems will be worked out.

Warrens Giles, president of the National League, will be present along with commissioner Ford Frick. Giles said he would have no comment on the fly ball situation until he has seen five games. But he did say "we will play in the domed stadium."

May Move NHL To New York

TORONTO (CP) — National Hockey League head quarters may be moved from Montreal to New York if a proposal by Stafford Smythe, president of Toronto Maple Leafs, is approved by the NHL board of governors.

Smythe said in an interview that "since 22 of 27 professional teams in hockey come from the United States, I think the headquarters of the world's largest hockey organization should be in the world's largest city — New York City."

He also concluded that when the NHL considers expanding, most of the new entries would be from the United States and "would only support New York as the logical place for NHL headquarters."

NHL president Clarence Campbell said he would not comment on the proposal.

He said it was a matter for the league's board of governors to decide and until it had been settled at that level he was not prepared to comment.

Rochester Trumps Aces

ROCHESTER (AP) — Three Aces' end Gerry Ehman goals in the first seven minutes proved to be enough as Rochester Americans whipped Quebec Aces 5-2 Thursday night to win their American Hockey League Calder Cup semi-final playoff series 4-1.

The victor, which had taken a 3-1 bulge in the best-of-seven series with a victory in Quebec Wednesday night, will meet either Buffalo or Hershey for the Calder Cup. Buffalo and Hershey open their best-of-five semi-final series Saturday in Buffalo.

Five players scored for Rochester. Jimmy Pappin started it when he was left unguarded in front and took a pass from Dick Gamble. Stan Smrke made it 2-0 on a two-on-one rush with Jerry Horvath after the latter had hooked the puck away from a Quebecer in the first period.

The Americans eased up after that, but made it 4-0 with the only goal during the second period — scored by Horvath on a passout from the corner by Smrke.

MARIS FILES SUIT

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—Roger Maris, New York Yankee slugger, asked Thursday for $310,000 damages from a male model who brought assault and battery charges against him after a tavern fracas April 1. Maris filed the suit against Jerome Modrelewski, who brought charges against Maris and teammate Clete Boyer following the fracas.

Etobicoke Clobbers Hamilton 9-2

HAMILTON (CP)—Etobicoke Indians exploded for seven goals in less than eight minutes of the second period Thursday night and went on to trounce Hamilton Bees 9-2 in the second game of their Ontario Hockey Association Junoir B semi-final.

The victory deadlocked the best-of-seven series at a win apiece. Third game is at Etobicoke tonight with the fourth in Hamilton Sunday afternoon.

Campbell Has Ulcers, 'Natch'

TORONTO (CP) — Clarence Campbell of Montreal, 60-year-old president of the National Hockey League, was resting comfortably in hospital today after suffering an attack from peptic ulcers Thursday. He will remain there about a week.

Dr. Hugh Smythe, club physician of Toronto Maple Leafs, said Campbell had not been well all day Thursday so he sent him to Sunnybrook Hospital for examination and tests.

A hospital official said the type of attack the NHL president suffered does not usually result in complications.

Dr. Edgar Ritcey of the hospital staff said Campbell was not allowed to watch the Toronto - Montreal Stanley Cup game on television Thursday night.

Superb Netminding * * * * * * * * * * * Habs Blow Lead

Bower, Kelly Spark Leafs' Win Rally

By IAN MacLAINE

TORONTO (CP)—An ageless Bernhoeft and a frustrated hockey team were the story of Thursday nights Stanley Cup semi-final game as Toronto Maple Leafs overcame a two-goal deficit to stop Montreal Canadiens 4-3 and even their best-of-seven series at two games each.

Johnny Bower, who admits to 40 but whose craggy features place him some years beyond that figure, was the entire story of the Toronto comeback before 14,572 fans.

He robbed the Canadiens with the sensational netminding that has marked him as one of the greatest money players ever in the National Hockey League.

The Hebe, who had control of the game for the better part of 40 minutes, collapsed after two minutes by Toronto early in the third period and never could regain their composure.

Red Kelly, a veteran of 18 NHL campaigns, led Leafs offensively with two goals—his first two of the current series —giving him 32 in 146 playoff games with Toronto and Detroit Red Wings.

ELLIS SCORES

Rookie Ron Ellis and captain George Armstrong were the other. Toronto scorers. Montreal's first-period goals, both power play markers, were scored by Bobby Rousseau and Henri Richard.

The goals by Montreal brought their total in the four games to seven, of which it came with a man advantage. The Leafs meanwhile have scored three times with the edge in manpower, including Kelly's second period marker Thursday with Canadiens' ball-necked John Ferguson in the penalty box.

But it was Bower's superb netminding that prevented the Canadiens from turning the game into a rout and the goals by Ellis and Armstrong, 40 seconds apart early in the third period, seemed to ignite the spark that spurred the defending Stanley Cup champions.

Toronto coach Punch Imlach said later in the jubilant Toronto dressing room there isn't "a word in the dictionary" to describe Bower.

"When he's playing like that he gives some guys a lift. . . ." added Armstrong, whose game-winning goal at 3:58 of the third period was in itself a tonic to the Leafs.

TAKE OFFENSIVE

Toronto took the offensive from there and had the bewildered Canadiens reeling through much of the remainder of the game.

"Let's say the Lord was with me," was Bower's modest reply to newspaper men asking him to comment on his acrobatic display. "I was pretty lucky on a couple of shots, but that's the game."

Bower, who Imlach claims has been the target for Canadiens' rough-house tactics in earlier games, said they "didn't charge me tonight."

"They were pretty close a couple of times. . . . They want to score goals. They are looking for rebounds. . . ."

Imlach had made particular reference to Montreal's Ferguson and Dave Balon as two who were zeroing in on Bower. In Thursday's game, both were singled out by Bower on several occasions as he swung his stick to clear players from the front of the Toronto goal.

BAR WRITERS

The Canadiens' dressing room was closed to reporters after the game and coach Toe Blake did not comment on the loss as he left the rink.

The dejected Habs caught a train back in the afternoon where the fifth game of the series will be played Saturday. Their sombre faces were ample proof that they had been humiliated by an old man.

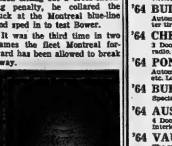
With a 2-1 lead, the Canadiens appeared to be content to sit back and wait for the breaks.

The breaks came, but Bower wasn't to be beaten and the Montreal team ran out of legs to carry them with the rejuvenated Toronto club.

Ellis' goal that tied the score 2-2 at 3:16 of the last period was probably the turning point in an otherwise Montreal-dominated game.

The screwout, 175-pounder took a pass from rookie centre Pete Stemkowski at the Montreal blue line but got fooled by his lone control of it.

However, the Habs defensive duo of J. C. Tremblay and Jacques Laperriere offered no resistance as the Leaf forward and he finally kicked it back onto his stick just as Worsley came out to smother the play.



Ellis simply swept the puck around the fallen Worsley and into the net. The 20-year-old youngster nearly scored again with about five minutes remaining in the game when he skated through most of the Canadiens' team and had Worsley out of position only to slide the puck past the open net.

Referee Art Skov assessed eight of 14 minor penalties in the game to the Canadiens but Toronto, except for Kelly's goal, was less than impressive when holding a man advantage.

Leaf's power-play was muzzled, as it has been throughout the entire four games, by Canadiens' Jim Roberts and Jean-Guy Talbot.

Roberts set the pattern for the early going when, with Ferguson sitting out a cross-checking penalty, he collared the puck at the Montreal blue-line and sped in to test Bower.

It was the third time in two games the fleet Montreal forward has been allowed to break away.

JOHNNY BOWER

So The Selectors Say

White Sox Biggest Threat To Yankees

By JACK HAND

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — This obviously is the year to pick New York Yankees to lose.

They have won five straight pennants. Nobody has won it.

Al Loper, Chicago's eternal optimist, says Baltimore Orioles, not York, the top team to beat. In the spring training standings the Yanks are right down there with Kansas City Athletics and Washington Senators.

Yogi Berra has gone. Mickey Mantle is hobbled. Whitey Ford is getting bombed.

But before proclaiming 1965 a get-even year for the vast army of Yankee haters, a glance at the rest of the league suggests caution. If not the Yankees, then who?

The White Sox look like the best bets. Cleveland Indians are outsiders. Minnesota Twins have power to burn but no defence. Detroit Tigers are old. Los Angeles Angels have Dean Chance and Fred Newman. Forget the rest.

MUST PRODUCE

Chicago could do it if Moose Skowron and Joe Ward have sensational years and if Ken Berry makes it big. Baltimore needs a 100 - per - cent Walt Bunker and Steve Barber and an injury - free year for Boog Powell.

The Yanks won it last year despite sub - normal seasons by many of the regular cast. If Tony Kubek, Tom Tresh, Joe Pepitone and Clete Boyer get form as usual, they should win again.

Here's the way it looks from here:

1. New York
2. Chicago
3. Baltimore
4. Cleveland
5. Minnesota
6. Detroit
7. Los Angeles
8. Boston
9. Washington
10. Kansas City

Johnny Keane will have his problems with the Yanks but he is used to problems. Mantle probably will be in and out of the lineup with bone and bursitis nicks.

Cleveland is being touted as the dark horse of the year. Birdie Tebbetts has fine young pitchers in Sam McDowell and Luis Tiant and added power in Rocky Colavito and Chuck Hinton to go with Leon Wagner. A healthy Max Alvis should be a big help.

Minnesota is angling for a second baseman and trying to figure out how to play all its power men without letting fly balls drop safely. Pitching is thin, lack of Camilo Pascual and Jim Kaat.

Detroit, operating under action manager Bob Swift during the illness of Chuck Dressen, has possibilities but needs pitching.

The Angels have the pitching but are short on power.

Boston Red Sox could be better under manager Billy Herman but Tony Conigliaro and Carl Yastrzemski must hit a flock of homers to make up for the loss of Dick Stuart.

Washington's latest additions from the Dodgers should help but pitching is still short.

Kansas City, last and 42 games behind the Yanks last season, has a sad spring due to injuries and problems of Jim Gentile.

Masters Tournament

Player Leads Field With 65

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Gary Player has moved in front of the hottest band of shooters in the history of the prestige-laden Masters golf tournament.

The elite field of 91 of the world's best pro and amateur golfers relentlessly hammered the proud par 72, 6,980-yard course and left Defending National Golf Course from the opening first-round shots in the morning until Bobby Nichlaus, Tony Lema, Dan Sikes and Tommy Aaron.

Even with that 65—one stroke off the course and Masters record of 64 set in the opening round by second-place finisher Lloyd Mangrum in 1940 — the chipper South African had a tremendous task ahead of him if he hoped to duplicate his 1961 Masters victory.

In all, 11 players shot 68s or better, nine had 70s, including 75 and 80 respectively.

defending champion and four-time winner Arnold Palmer, 1, had 71s and 11 matched par 72.

Vancouver veteran Stan Leonard was among the 75s and George Knudson of Toronto had a 72. The other two Canadians in the field, amateurs Gary Cowan of Kitchener and Nick Weslock of Toronto, had 78s and 80 respectively.

The Trots

TORONTO (CP)—Rusty Riddell, a chestnut stallion trotter, Thursday showed that a winter on ice hasn't harmed his ability to win on turf.

The trotter won his third race of the season with a one-length victory in the first race at Greenwood Raceway to return a $62.30 mutuel.

Owner Elmer Trimble of Barrie gave the horse he bought Jan. 1 to trainer Bill Carroll, also of Barrie. After three weeks of training, Carroll ensured the horse to race on the ice at Orillia, Jan. 30. The horse won both heats of the double dash event.

Rusty's win Thursday night was the first half of a daily double. Andy, owned by Glen and Doreen Hoskin of Oshawa, won the second race for a total of $228.30.

Always Wanted to Do Show On the American Indian

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—One of the advantages of being a successful producer of a well received television documentary series is that personal enthusiasms may sometimes be indulged.

"I had always wanted to do a show on the American Indian," said ABC producer-writer John Secondari, "and the more I studied Custer and the events at Little Big Horn, the more eager I was to figure out a way to do the story from the Indians' point of view."

Thus, Custer to the Little Big Horn will be presented as part of Secondari's Saga of Western Man series tonight on ABC—with a meticulous reconstruction of the battle, filmed on the scene in Montana.

As television games go, Celebrity Game on CBS is about as inane as they come. In its season premiere Thursday night, a panel of nine show business personalities addressed themselves to such grave questions as whether women worry more about staying single than men, whether it is wise for a man to win every argument with his wife and whether divorced couples can remain friends.

But somehow, under the nimble guidance of host Carl Reiner, the result is a giddy, often funny 30 minutes.

MR. MELTZER ON REAL ESTATE
"What's Your Problem?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

Most Agreements of Sale contain a clause to the effect that the buyer agrees not to record the Agreement of Sale. It is my experience that not one buyer in 100 is aware of the potential importance of this clause.

This couple wondered.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: As faithful readers, when we bought our house we retained our own real estate broker and carefully examined all the "fine print" on every document ourselves.

One thing puzzled us. On the Agreement of Sale, there was a clause to the effect we agreed not to record the agreement. We questioned it (although we did not even know one could record this document) and although both our broker and the seller's said it was standard and not to be concerned, neither could explain its significance to our satisfaction.

We have our home and there were no problems, but we still wonder about that clause. Would you explain it to us in your usual lucid style? — Mr. and Mrs. R. W. T.

ANSWER: The significance of this clause is compara b l y to your fire department. W h e n there are no fires or trouble they may seem superfluous — but their presence is an important protection in time of need.

The presence of this clause is an advantage to the seller; its absence an advantage to the buyer. When an agreement is recorded it places a "cloud" on the title, and until this is removed the owner will have extreme difficulty selling.

For example: Suppose a buyer and seller have a disagreement as to the date for the settlement. If the clause is included in the Agreement of Sale the seller could declare a default, claim the deposit and resell to someone else. If the clause is absent (or deleted) and the buyer records the agreement, the seller is stymied and he must initiate action to settle the dispute — and the advantage in negotiation of the disagreement has been shifted from the seller to the buyer.

In this case, therefore, I must disagree with the brokers who told you the clause was "not important" — because it can become important. A good indicator is that when professionals deal in real estate, as buyers they always try to have the clause deleted from the standard agreement — as sellers they strive to see that it remains.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Our first house will be a home in a retirement community, and we disagree whether to pay cash or buy it with a mortgage.

My husband is 63 years old, and between his retirement pension and savings we will have ample income for our needs. We have $28,000 in cash, stock and bonds, and can buy for cash. I want to. My husband says he has heard it is better to buy with a mortgage. We would greatly appreciate your straightening this out for us. — Mrs. J. L. O.

ANSWER: In your case I strongly recommend you buy for cash. You have ample funds and persons in retirement should not be burdened with the mortgage payments.

If your husband were 30 years younger, I would as strongly recommend that you buy with a large mortgage and use the cash for investment, or the opportunities liquid assets give for capital growth.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I signed a contract with a builder for a $30,000 house. The first plans he showed me were totally unacceptable, and each set he has shown me since has been worse. I finally realized he didn't know what he was doing, and could never do the job right. I cancelled out.

Now he claims that I owe him $3,000. Since I gave him no money to seal the deal, and he hasn't really done anything, I don't see how I can owe him for anything. — C. P. E.

ANSWER: I'm afraid you may be in for further disappointment. You apparently signed a contract with a "15 percent liquidated damage" clause, collectable by the builder if you do not go through with the job.

Consult your attorney immediately. He may be able to find the clause to contest the builder's claim and have the contract nullified.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Every time we plug in the oven, or the toaster, the lights dim temporarily. For years we paid no attention to this and have had no trouble. Our son has started studying physics in High School and is driving us crazy with his new brilliance about everything.

He is after us every day, telling us it is a dangerous condition. Experience has taught us better. Will you explain to him that this is common in old houses — and that "A little knowledge is the dangerous thing." — J. AC

ANSWER: I'm afraid this just proves that "A little experience is not always the best teacher" — your son is right.

The dimming of the lights is an indication that your electrical system is overloaded. Is a common cause of serious — too often fatal — fires.

The fact that you successfully have crossed traffic against the lights for many years, is no endorsement for the practice or a guarantee the next car won't run you down.

Metropolitan Opera Basso Again Back in Home Town

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Alumnus of the Year at University of California, Los Angeles, is Jerome Hines, famed Metropolitan Opera basso, who never took a music lesson at the university.

In his hometown this week to intone the title role of Moses at the music centre, Hines learned he had become only the second entertainment-world figure to be chosen for the annual award. The first was choreographer Agnes De Mille.

Hines, who graduated in chemistry in 1943, said:

"I had thought I wanted to be a singer since I was 16. I continued taking private singing lessons; at that time, the best operatic coaches couldn't afford to work for universities. I also was interested in chemistry, mathematics and physics and I knew they could provide a good profession to fall back on.

"I realized how risky it was to try for an operatic career. Today, only 150 singers in this country can make a full-time living from opera, most of them attached to the Metropolitan or the City Centre in New York."

FATHER OPPOSED

His father, a movie production official, balked at raising his boy to be a singer and conspired to have a friend discourage him.

"The friend, Edwin Lester, Civic Light Opera boss, heard Jerome's voice and told his father: "Mortgage your house, sell your car, do anything to give this boy opera training." Lester also changed Jerome's name from Hines.

He also has sung in leading opera houses of Europe and South America, missing only Paris, Vienna and London's Covent Garden. He figures the high point in his career came when he sang Boris Godunov in Moscow in 1962.

"That was right in the middle of the Cuban crisis," Hines said. "Even our ambassador couldn't get in to see Khrushchev, yet he came backstage after the performance to meet me."

When Khrushchev marvelled at Hines' six - foot - six - inch height, the bass replied, "Why, I'm just a California midget."

Hines lives in South Orange, N.J., with his wife and four young sons and makes about 40 forays into the hinterlands each year for concerts.

His future plans? "To return to Russia in November and do some of the more obscure operas we don't do here. And I hope — to meet Khrushchev again."

Big Deal Paying Off For The Senators

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

The C.A.R.E. package Los Angeles Dodgers shipped to Washington appears to be waging an effective war on the Senators' poverty.

Ortega, part of the package from the Dodgers, helped spark the Senators to an 8-3 victory over Baltimore Orioles and to the top of the American League's exhibition baseball standings Thursday.

The right hander was one of five players the Dodgers gave the Senators for pitcher Claude Osteen and infielder John Kennedy last December. Emigrating with Ortega were infielder Ken McMullen, first baseman Don Ven, outfielder Frank Howard and pitcher Peju Richert.

In his final tuneup for the season's opener against Boston Red Sox next Monday, Ortega blanked the Orioles for five innings before Nick Willhite, another ex-Dodger, completed the six-hitter by allowing all three Oriole runs.

McMullen collected four hits in the victory that boosted Washington's record to 11-10.

FLOOD STARS

St. Louis Cardinals whipped New York Mets 6-1 as Curt Flood rapped three singles and a double and Ken Boyer two doubles and a single.

Dan Williams helped pitch and bat Cleveland Indians to a 4-1 victory over San Francisco Giants. The former New York Yankee allowed four hits in six innings and scored in the fourth after singling.

The Yankees stopped Milwaukee Braves 6-1 behind the three-run homers of Joe Pepitone and Johnny Blanchard.

Deron Johnson drove in three runs and Frank Robinson two, leading Cincinnati Reds past Chicago White Sox 5-1. Chicago's Tommy Agee suffered a broken bone in his right hand in the game and will be out of action for a month.

Kansas City ended a nine-game losing string with an 8-4 triumph over Minnesota Twins as Bill Bryan sparked the Athletics with a grand-slam homer.

Jacksonville Suns, champions of the International League, toppled the Dodgers 4-1 while rain washed out Chicago Cubs and Boston Red Sox.

AP Calls Repeat Cards—Yanks World Series

Favor Yankees For 6th Flag In Row

By MURRAY CHASS

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Yankees, who couldn't beat Johnny Keane and the Cardinals in the 1964 World Series, are favored to get another crack at St. Louis—with Keane on their side—this year.

The Yankees were voted into a record - shattering sixth straight American League pennant by a narrow margin in balloting by 266 sports writers and broadcasters in The Associated Press' annual pre-season baseball poll.

St. Louis received almost as slim a margin over Philadelphia Phillies and Cincinnati Reds.

The Yankees, with Keane replacing Yogi Berra as their manager, recorded 60 more points than Baltimore Orioles and 160 more than the Chicago White Sox. The Cardinals, now under Red Schoendienst, outpolled the Phillies by 76 points and the Reds by 91.

St. Louis, which won the 1964 pennant on the last day of the season after being selected for third in the pre-season poll, had a total of 2,189 points while Philadelphia had 2,113 and Cincinnati 2,098.

Votes were counted on the basis of 10 points for first, nine for second, etc., down to one for 10th.

The Yankees finished with 2,400 points, Baltimore 2,340 and Chicago 2,240.

PREDICTION CORRECT

In proving the prognosticators correct last year, the Yankees won the pennant by one game over Chicago and two over Baltimore. St. Louis nosed out Philadelphia and Cincinnati by one game each.

If the Cardinals come through as selected, it would mark the first time since 1957-58, when Milwaukee Braves won, that a team repeated as pennant winner in the National League.

The paper battle for the top spot in the NL was much closer - all less than 100 in the younger league. Only 312 points out of a 10,000 total separated St. Louis from San Francisco, picked for fifth.

The Giants, fourth last season, drew a total of 1,877 points. The Dodgers, pre - season choice last year who wound up in a tie for sixth, held fourth place in the pre-Sandy Koufax injury days with 36 first-place votes and 1,939 overall.

Voted into the second division were Milwaukee Braves, Pittsburgh Pirates, Chicago Cubs, Houston Astros and New York Mets.

In the closest struggle in the AL, Cleveland Indians edged Minnesota Twins for fourth place by 34 points, 1,658 to 1,624. Those teams tied for sixth place in 1964's final standings.

Detroit headed the second division with Los Angeles, Boston, Washington and Kansas City following.

The Mets, a perennial last place choice, drew the most votes for any one spot—185 for 10th in the NL. The Athletics earned 179 for last in the AL.

Ter-Haar Beaten by SACO 6-2

SACO dropped Ter-Haar Daubers 6-2 last night for their second consecutive victory, deadlocking the best-of-seven Quinte Hockey League finals at two games apiece.

Due to arena commitments, dates for the remaining games have been changed. The fifth game will be played Monday, at 8.00 p.m., not Sunday as was earlier announced. The sixth game is now slated for Wednesday and if a seventh is needed, it will be played next Thursday.

SACO took a 2-1 first - period edge last night, made it 3-1 after two beats and outscored the Daubers 3-1 in the final twenty minutes.

Reo Urch scored Ter - Haar's initial goal, aided by Hubert Pointer, while Peter McIlveen notched the other, with Gary Duggan assisting.

The winners took the lion's share of penalties. There were eight called in all with SACO collecting six, four of them in the third. S. Woodcock, of SACO, and Ter - Haar's D. Robinson got majors for fighting at 13.50 of the final heat.

SETS RECORD

BERLIN (AP) — Olympic champion Mike Larrabee streaked to a world indoor record of 46.3 seconds in the 400 metres Thursday and led the United States to an easy track and field victory over West Germany. The U.S. men won 10 of 13 events in the two-day, indoor meet and piled up 101 points to 56 for the Germans. The American women won their meet 61-32.

Proctors Defeat Melville

Proctor Silex trimmed Melville Shoreliners 8-3 in Wellington last night to keep their hopes alive for the Prince Edward North Shore Hockey League championship.

Melville still leads the best-of-seven titular set three games to two.

Dates for the remaining games have been changed so as not to conflict with Stanley Cup playoffs on TV.

The sixth game will be played Monday night and the seventh on Wednesday, if necessary. Both will be at Wellington, at eight o'clock.

Last night's tilt was the fastest and one of the best of the playoffs. The winners never trailed. It was 2-0 after one heat and 4-2 after two periods.

The winners outshot Melville 44-31 while Shoreliners got four of the six minor penalties. Proctor had Earl Foster checking Melville's high-scoring Joe Scott very closely all night, holding him off the scoring list.

Neil Holding scored two Proctor Silex goals and helped on another. Don Duffy got one goal and two assists and Jim Hicks had one of each. Morris Weeks scored the other goal, Ralph Irwin had two assists and Earl Foster one.

Ed Boss triggered all three Melville markers with single assists going to Dominque Degazio, Roger Cannon, Don Simpson and Eldon Carson.

Rivard May Be in Peru Says Report

LIMA (CP-Reuters) — Peruvian police have received a tip that Lucien Rivard, 40, who escaped from Montreal's Bordeaux Jail March 2, may be in Peru.

Police in Peru have launched an international search for Rivard following the tip from Interpol, the international police organization.

Javier Campos Montoya, director of the Peruvian police investigations department, said U.S. police also have asked for Rivard's detention.

Rivard was being held in Montreal pending the outcome of extradition proceedings launched by U.S. authorities.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): Finish projects. Don't hang on to situation which drains vitality. Shake off emotional lethargy. Examine future possibilities. Applies to personal as well as professional life.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): Paradoxical situation may exist. Take initiative. Lead rather than follow. Set example. Check with expert. Gain knowledge from a variety of sources. Then use experience to arrive at firm decision.

Pisces (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20): Intuitive intellect accented. Hunch proves profitable. Consult neighbor or fellow worker. Share desires, hopes. Then you gain valuable allies. Stress reason, logical approach.

If today is your birthday . . . you are an innovator, a pioneer. You investigate — and take a chance in creative fields.

General Tendencies: Cycle high for Leo, Virgo, Libra. Special word to Gemini: If you are versatile, your chances for success are heightened.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For April 10

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Your day and evening to enjoy creative expression. Romantic interests highlighted. You will be better able to put meanings across. You earn respect — and love.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Be ready for challenges, some obstacles. Stress the new, unusual. Don't be bogged down with details. Restrictions due to be lifted. Know this and plan accordingly.

Gemini (May 21 to June 20): Be objective. Take short journey, if necessary. Handle correspondence with ease. Obtain hint from today's Taurus message. Important to be specific and thorough. Co-operate with relative.

Cancer (June 21 to July 22): Your sense of humor can "save the day." Family members tend to be ultra-sensitive. This likely to revolve around subject of money. Give a little . . . gain much.

The Day They Used Gas!

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

On April 15, 1915, the day the 1st Canadian Division took over 4,500 yards of Flanders front in the Ypres salient in the First World War, a talkative German soldier defected to the French.

The deserter told French intelligence the Germans were preparing to use poison gas in an effort to pinch out the 17-mile curving salient around Ypres.

When the deserter's name appeared in the memoirs of a French general long after the war, the turncoat was caught by the Germans and in 1932 he was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Ironically, in 1915 his story made little impression. French intelligence dutifully reported it to the Allied armies on the Western Front but it was all but ignored.

Fifty years later, men still react with horror to stories of the first use of poison gas.

Chlorine is a heavy, greenish-yellow gas which clings to the ground as it is rolled forward by a gentle wind. It attacks the lungs, often fatally.

The gas was used in the German dye industry which employed some 37 tons of it each day. Less than five days' worth would be needed by the 4th German Army against Ypres.

WAITED FOR WIND

By April 11, 1915, the Germans had 5,730 cylinders of gas—160 tons—ready for the first gas attack. For 10 days there was no wind from the right direction.

Meanwhile, some 18,000 Canadians had taken over the sector assigned to them, finding that shell holes had been used both as latrines and graves. The land around the ancient moated town of Ypres—known to English-speaking soldiers as Wipers—was so soggy that trenches couldn't be dug more than two feet deep.

April 22, a Thursday, dawned bright and sunny. The Canadians were well into their frontline routine shoring up defences. They were green troops and had been sent into the line for just a taste of what it would be like later.

At 3 p.m. the 3rd Brigade got word there were 100 mouth organs it could pick up at headquarters. At 5 p.m. the Germans opened the valves of their gas cylinders and the retching cloud of yellow-and-green vapor began drifting toward the Allied lines at five to six miles an hour.

The first gas attack fell mainly on two French colonial divisions which were driven back, opening a gaping hole in the salient's front. By midnight the Canadians had gathered together a 1,500-man force which launched a bayonet counter-attack by moonlight. There were fewer than 500 survivors.

SHOT THROUGH HEAD

Eric Seaman, a machine-gunner who now runs the Ontario Canteen Fund in Toronto, was in a baseball game behind the lines with men of the 3rd Battalion, a unit in close support, came staggering back.

"We were sent up to help the 14th Battalion," he said recently. "On the way up we ran into some transport coming back, and a transport sergeant told us: 'You've got them on the run.' Like hell we had. We lost half our men going up.

"I remember one man who'd grown a bushy beard and wouldn't shave it off even when ordered. I last saw him lying dead over a hedge with his whiskers draped over the bushes.

"Jack Hewitt, an ex-North-west Mounted Policeman, was knocked flat and I saw he had a hole in his forehead. But he was able to talk. I asked him how he was and he said: 'Like I've been on a hell of a big drunk.' A bullet had hit him on top of the head and come out front, but he lived until a few years ago.

Gnr. Seaman was captured with two others of his crew. The remaining five were killed or wounded.

"My battalion went into the fight with about 900 men and came out with between 300 and 400 and most of the officers lost," said Bert Steele, 74, now secretary of the Toronto Originals Club, an organization of 1914 volunteers. He was with the 79th Cameron Highlanders in Winnipeg and was moved with his company into the 3rd battle.

"We lost many of them in a bayonet attack going into Kitchener's Wood," he said. "By the time we got into the wood there weren't many of them, and we went through like a dose of salts. When we were moved back to straighten out the line we were under heavy fire, and we lost a lot more. But we had stopped them soon enough, so that they didn't get through."

As the Allies tried to re-establish the original lines, there was a dreadful confusion of orders and countermanded orders, lost communications, lack of information. The Canadian counter-attacks led the Germans to exaggerate the size of the forces opposing them, and they dug in to assess the situation. Fortunately, they never drove home their original advantage.

LOOKED LIKE SMOKE

"If they had kept going, they'd have gone right through us," said Frank Ball, a 65-year-old retired tram motorman in Toronto. He was an artillery man with the 9th Battery and had just completed his stable chores for the afternoon—the guns were horse-drawn—when the alarm came.

"We looked over and saw this yellowish cloud," he said. "It was like the smoke you see on top of a brush fire. We couldn't figure out what it was until we they called the Algerians—coming back clutching their throats, hey were crying, 'Gaz, gaz.' They were pitiful."

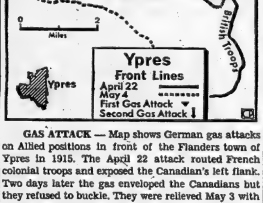
On April 24, at 4 a.m., the second gas attack came and this time it enveloped the Canadians first, especially the 8th and 15th Battalions.

After the first attack, the best the soldiers could devise was a piece of damp cloth tied over the nose and mouth. But it helped little.

"With eyes blinded and throats burning, men collapsed on the floor of the trench in suffocating agony," Col. G. W. L. Nicholson records in the Canadian Army's official history of the 1914-18 war.

The Canadians bent but didn't buckle under the German onslaught. Four of them won Victoria Crosses in the fighting which lasted until May 3 when the Canadians were relieved.

Col. Nicholson says the successful defence of Ypres in 1915 stands as a triumph of the common soldier not only over the enemy but over the bad judgment of his own generals (at that time British). The commander of the tenacious 2nd Brigade, Canadian Brig. A. W. Currie, rose to command of the 1st Division later that year and to command of the Canadian Corps in 1917.



It was Currie who established the principle, adhered to ever since, that Canadian formations must be commanded by Canadians.

Even in 1915, the British war office conceded that one Canadian division had "saved the situation" at Ypres. The 1st Division held on until enough British and French reinforcements arrived to end the danger of a German breakthrough.

This Ypres battle—there were to be more of them—cost the Canadians 6,036 casualties in 15 days. The Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, which served in the same battle with the British 27th Division, suffered 678 casualties besides.

After the First World War, the Commonwealth War Graves Commission built the Menin Gate War Memorial in Ypres to honor 54,900 Commonwealth soldiers who perished in Belgium. Of these, 6,994 are Canadians, most of whom died in the 1915, 1917 and 1918 battles of Ypres. Canadian deaths in the 1915 battle numbered 1,988.

There are 112 war cemeteries in and around Ypres. There is at least one Canadian soldier in each.

GAS ATTACK — Map shows German gas attacks on Allied positions in front of the Flanders town of Ypres in 1915. The April 22 attack routed French colonial troops and exposed the Canadian's left flank. Two days later the gas enveloped the Canadians but they refused to buckle. They were relieved May 3 with the Germans still two miles from Ypres. There were 1,988 Canadian deaths, after the French collapse. (CP Newsmap)

TWO SHIPS AFIRE IN ST. LAWRENCE

More Marines Land To Guard Big Air Base

New Air Strikes Made Without Meeting MiGs

SAIGON (AP)—Another 1,400 U.S. marines waded ashore at Da Nang today as the U.S. continued to beef up its combat muscle around the big air base, 190 miles south of Communist North Viet Nam.

U.S. navy and air force planes carried out new strikes against North Viet Nam, knocking out the Kin Cuong highway bridge on Route 7, about 150 miles south of Hanoi.

All aircraft were said to have returned safely. Pilots said no Communist aircraft were encountered and anti-aircraft fire was light.

The marine battalion which landed at Da Nang reinforces some 2,000 marines already based there.

MORE WILL COME

Brig. Frederick Karch, commander of the 9th Marine Expeditionary Brigade, said another battalion will arrive in the next few days and be assigned to the Hue area, north of Da Nang and 50 miles from the border.

The sounds of war drifted down to the beach from a battle between a South Vietnamese company and a platoon-sized group of Viet Cong, holed up in an old French fort in the hills three miles away.

Karch said the battalion will be deployed in the hills west of the Da Nang airstrip. They brought with them tanks, 105-m.m. howitzers and other material.

The first four Fifth Phantom jet fighter planes from the marine Flight Attack Squadron 531 being sent to Viet Nam arrived today. The other 14 fighters were expected soon. The marines have wanted their own air strike arm, which would be available at all times. The U.S. and Vietnamese fighters and bombers based at Da Nang are often all away, either on strikes against North Viet Nam or against the Viet Cong.

Although the marines' role in Viet Nam has been described as defence of the air base and freeing Vietnamese forces for the fight against the Viet Cong, the continued buildup has caused speculation that the use of American combat units on the ground might be imminent.

The New China news agency said 12 U.S. planes were shot down and many others damaged over North Viet Nam during the massive air raid Friday.

SAY ONE LOST

U.S. officials said of the 220 warplanes that struck a variety of North Vietnam targets, only one plane—a Navy Skyhawk—was lost. They said the pilot bailed out over the sea and was rescued.

RECOMMENDS INCREASE

OTTAWA (CP) — The tariff board has recommended an increase in the duty on imported live turkeys, and Finance Minister Gordon told the Commons Friday this would be given "careful consideration." The existing duty on live turkeys is two cents a pound. The board recommended that this be changed to 10 per cent of the price of the birds, but not less than three cents a pound.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A very large area of high pressure will dominate weather picture today resulting in sunny skies and seasonable temperatures. Extensive cloud area and precipitation will spread across the Great Lakes tonight and Sunday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials today assessed what may have been the first U.S.-Chinese air encounter of the Viet Nam war as a passing brush rather than a deliberate collision between the two powers.

The possibility that China may come to Communist North Viet Nam's aid in a big way later has not been ruled out. But Friday's skirmish was not regarded here as a sign portending massive Chinese intervention.

Washington appears to be keeping the affair in relatively low key.

U.S. spokesmen did not suggest the MiGs were Chinese and they emphasized the American were under orders not to fly into Chinese territory.

Other U.S. sources said that with U.S. jets frequently near Hainan during their operations against North Viet Nam, it is not surprising to find Chinese planes scrambling from their island base—especially when a sudden turn by the Americans could quickly bring them over the island.

On the Chinese side, it was noted Peking radio saw fit at this time only to issue a short account of the event with the other routine denunciations—for Chinese propagandists—of "provocative activities" by the American.

Driver for Civil Rights Group Trades Shots With White Boys

JONESBORO, La. (AP) — A Negro man driving four volunteer civil rights workers from the University of Kansas to a gas station said he exchanged gunshots early today with four white teen-agers in a station wagon.

The FBI office field office in New Orleans said its agents are conducting "an inquiry to determine if a violation of federal law had occurred."

It was not immediately determined if there were any injuries.

It was the latest development on the racial front in this deep south state, which saw two marches Friday at Bogalusa—a papermill town like Jonesboro — by Negroes protesting what they termed Ku Klux Klan terror.

Civil rights leaders at Bogalusa called off further demonstrations for the weekend. A Klan official told his followers to "lay low." The Bogalusa mayor preached moderation.

Elmo Jacobs, a 38-year-old Jonesboro Negro, said he believes he may have hit some one with one of the four shots he fired from his .38-calibre pistol.

The hospitals in the Jonesboro area said they had not treated any gunshot wound victims in the last 24 hours.

Jacobs and Miss Oretha Castle, a field secretary of the Congress of Racial Equality, said they counted 14 bullet holes in Jacobs' car. The count was verified by Harry Krause, a reporter on the University of Kansas' daily newspaper and one of 11 volunteers from the college who are in Jonesboro to help rebuild a burned - out Negro church.

Krause was not in the car with Jacobs at the time of the reported shooting incident.

Krause said he called Jonesboro police and was told that no incidents had been reported. Later the police dispatcher said he had several telephone calls inquiring about the matter "and I'm trying to find out what happened."

Autobahn Crowded, Road Open

BERLIN (AP)—The first of four convoys carrying families of U.S. combat troops reached Berlin today along the autobahn after only routine Communist checks.

It was the first large-scale allied troop movement since the Soviets and the East Germans began harassing the vital lifeline six days ago.

The last other groups which entered the autobahn at Helmstedt early today were reported moving normally along the 110-mile highway that connects West Berlin with West Germany.

The Communists made no attempt to close down the highway, as they have every day since Monday this week. It remained possible that they might do so later in the day, because they claim that Soviet-East German manoeuvers will go on along the autobahn route until Sunday.

The first troops were from a unit normally stationed in Berlin. The other groups were returning to Berlin after training in West Germany.

Brokers Couldn't Recall Their Sources of Rumors

TORONTO (CP) — Two brokerage house employees testified Friday they could not remember their sources for rumors about a valuable find on the Timmins area property of a papermill town like Jonesboro — by Negroes protesting Windfall Oils and Mines Limited.

Leonard Bednarz, a mining analyst for James Richardson and Sons and Albert Vance, a mining engineer and stock analyst for Bongard and Company, testified before the royal commission investigating trading in Windfall shares last summer.

Windfall shares rose to $5.60 from 56 cents and collapsed to 90 cents between July 6 and July 31.

Mr. Bednarz told the hearing that on July 3 he sent an interoffice wire to all Richardson branches which said "significant mineralization had been found in Windfalls drill core. This was the earliest report of alleged mineralization the commission had heard of. Mr. Bednarz said he could not recall his source.

In a memorandum Monday July 6, Mr. Bednarz quoted depths in the Windfall core and said copper and zinc values had been noted from visual assessment of the core.

Two days later he referred in a memorandum to the Windfall "discovery hole but said this was a typing error.

On July 9 he quoted specific percentages of copper and zinc, but told the commission he could not remember where he obtained his information.

The head of the royal commission, Mr. Justice Arthur Kelly of the Ontario Court of Appeal, asked Mr. Bednarz for a list of contacts he would normally call for information.

Mr. Bednarz said he would supply it at later hearings.

Earlier in Friday's hearing, Mr. Vance said he sent a wire to all branches of Bongard and Company July 6 saying Windfall had 185 feet of "massive sulphides — often a signal of ore values—in its drill core.

Mr. Vance told the commission "I have so many sources I couldn't possibly specify where this came from. It would be a source in which we had faith and considered reliable.

Lawyer Accused of Calumny

By KEN KELLY

QUEBEC (CP)—The Dorion inquiry holds the 42nd and final hearing today in its investigation of charges of attempted bribery and political pressure against aides to federal cabinet ministers in the Lucien Rivard affair.

After that, its up to Chief Justice Frederic Dorion of the Quebec Superior Court to assess more than 2,000,000 words of evidence by 65 witnesses since last Dec. 15 and report to the federal government.

At least two lawyers were scheduled to speak at the conclusion of hearings today.

One represents Raymond Daoist, Montreal lawyer who acted for Rivard in fighting in Canadian courts efforts by the United States to extradite Rivard on charges of narcotics smuggling and conspiracy. Mr. Daoust also appeared before the inquiry as a witness.

Commission counsel Andre Desjardins has recommended that Chief Justice Dorion examine the credibility of Mr. Daoust testimony.

Final rebuttal was to be delivered by Yves Fortier, counsel for Montreal lawyer Pierre Lamontagne. Mr. Lamontagne complained to police Aug. 14 that he was offered $20,000 last July 14 and subjected to political pressure to agree to Rivards release on bail. Mr. Lamontagne was counsel for the United States in the extradition proceedings.

Flames Drive Men Into Water After Collision

Ship Radio Reports Sailors Leap Into Lake

MONTREAL (CP) Two ocean - going freighters collided in Lake St. Peter today and caught fire. At least one of the vessels was still burning five hours later.

There was no official report of casualties. Some unconfirmed reports said there were both deaths and injuries.

Radio reports indicated some crew members had to leap into the water.

The freighters involved are the German-registered Transatlantic and the Dutch-registered Hermes.

Attempts by reporters to reach ships in the area by radiophone were unsuccessful because of emergency communications priorities. One telephone operator told a reporter there were deaths but did not elaborate.

Doctors were reported to have been invried to both vessels by helicopter and boat.

The Transatlantic was still burning. A report from a helicopter-borne reporter from Montreal radio station CJAD said the fire appeared to be centred amidships. He said the vessels were in the middle of the shipping channel about three miles offshore.

Lake St. Peter is, in effect, a widening of the St. Lawrence River 50 to 60 miles northeast of Montreal.

The report that the men were jumping into the water came from a ham radio operator in Trois - Rivieres who said he picked the message up from one of the ships.

Harry Broad, president of the B and K Shipping of Montreal, which owns the Transatlantic, said the ship was carrying a general cargo. A report from Halifax said part of the general cargo unloaded there but still aboard when the ship left for Montreal was a trotting horse imported from Germany to race in Montreal.

Also said to be aboard were the owner of the horse and his wife. Their identities were unknown.

Mr. Broad said he had no report that the ship was in trouble. He said doctors had boarded the ship.

The Hermes, also carrying a general cargo, was headed downstream from Montreal.

Montreal Shipping, the agents for the Hermes, said it knew only that the ship was involved in the collision and had no details of damage or possible casualties.

13-Vote Margin For Govt.

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Pearson government experienced one of its closest shaves in the Commons Friday, defeating a non - confidence motion on the "morality issue" by 13 votes.

For the first time since the Liberals took office two years ago, the four opposition parties joined forces in a formal confidence test to censure Prime Minister Pearson for "refusing to take action to eradicate wrongdoing in high and low places."

The Progressive Conservative motion was defeated 106 to 93. The government was saved by the absence of 39 opposition MPs and the abstentions of two others. Many of the absentees are known to oppose a general election at this time.

The Opposition is expected to introduce one or two more non-confidence issues when the throne speech debate resumes Monday.

TWO CAME CLOSER

Only two other non-confidence motions have come closer than Friday's to toppling the Liberal government, which is six seats short of a clear majority.

A motion criticizing the Liberals' pro-nuclear policy was defeated by 11 votes May 21, 1963, and another blasting the 11-per-cent sales tax on building materials and production machinery was rejected by eight votes Feb. 25, 1964.

The Diefenbaker government was overthrown and forced to call an election after losing two tests of confidence by identical votes of 142 to 111 on the night of Feb. 5, 1963.

Finance Minister Gordon will announce Monday the date of his next budget speech, which will be the signal for another election later this year.

The Conservative censure motion was introduced Friday by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, was supported by 66 Conservatives, 25 New Democrats and six Social Credit-ters.

INDEPENDENTS OPPOSED

The motion was opposed by 104 Liberals and two former Conservatives now sitting as Independents. Leon Balcer (Trois-Rivieres) and Remi Paul

After 10 Years in Low Key, War in Viet Nam Now Reaches High Pitch

SAIGON (AP)—After 10 years of low-key but bloody guerrilla fighting, South Viet Nam's war is moving into the big league. How it will turn out is anyone's guess.

It has often been speculated that Viet Nam could be the fuse to set off a third world war.

This week, that possibility looked more real than ever in view of these developments:

—The tempo of U.S. air raids over North Viet Nam stepped up and began thrusting deeper than ever into enemy territory.

—Enemy resistance to the air raids also stepped up. For the first time, Communist and U.S. warplanes were slugging it out.

—Air fighting was moving closer to Communist China.

more U.S. marines began lanzing today and within a day or two the number of marines in South Viet Nam is expected to rise to about 7,500.

This will bring the complement of U.S. servicemen in Viet Nam to more than 30,000.

But far more important is the new role Americans will be playing here. For the first time, U.S. combat units will be fighting the Viet Cong on their own, not as advisers to Vietnamese units.

Technically all the marines coming in are to defend Da Nang Airbase—the base of U.S. air operations against North Viet Nam.

But defence is broadly interpreted in this case. The marines will be patrolling and fighting many miles away from Da Nang, even in the mountain passes between Hue and Da Nang, to sweep the Viet Cong from the area.

They might even be used on "cagle flights," helicopter-borne operations which in the past have employed only Vietnamese troops.

If it is found there are still too few marines, more surely will be brought in.

Neither the North Vietnamese regular units nor the Viet Cong has been idle. There is evidence that the Communist guerrillas in central Viet Nam now are equipped with 75-m.m. pack howitzers and skilled forward observers with good American equipment.

Heavy Communist forces, possibly including regular North Vietnamese units, are reported to have been moving at a steady rate into striking positions near the South Vietnamese frontier.

There has been something of a lull in Communist activity during the last two weeks and this is viewed as an ominous sign. Such lulls almost invariably precede big Viet Cong offensives.

It is felt the Viet Cong might try to pick off one or more of the big pivotal towns of central Viet Nam and hold them. There have been some reports the Viet Cong has considered a siege against Da Nang itself.

Top U.S. officials are understood to feel chances of any real Viet Cong success in such an onslaught are small, although some spectacular short - term victories might be racked up. But they do not want to take chances, and the marines are landing.

The marines will be operating only in underpopulated areas designated by Vietnamese commanders. But this may well soon lead to bloody and heavy fighting.

Behind all this is the spectre of direct entry into the war of China. Few officials will be surprised if Chinese troops began showing up.

Long, Continued Conflict Looked for in Viet Nam

U. S. Learns MiGs Still Carry Sting

By ARCH MacKENZIE

Canadian Press Staff Writer

President Johnson coupled his Viet Nam war buildup of new conditional peace negotiations with a warning that the United States should prepare for a "long, continued conflict."

"It will require patience as well as bravery—the will to endure as well as the will to resist," he said.

There is little official optimism in the U.S. government in the communist North Viet Nam —regarded as the key — will come running to the peace talks table. There is none about China.

The reason for this American attitude is rooted in the evident belief of the Communists that they continue to hold South Viet Nam almost within their grasp. Their confidence in the tactics which in 7 years of struggle France from Indochina is bolstered by the comparative ease with which the Viet Cong guerrillas can continue to exist in the country and terrorists strike in the cities.

And in all likelihood fortify-ing this determination to keep on is Johnson's avowed determination to quit South Viet Nam only when it is "free from outside interference."

He tied that in with the most bitter attack that he has made against China since he became president in late 1963.

WAR GOES ON

There continues to be in South Viet Nam a clear pattern of carrying on the war against the south from within, fed by the north.

Observers agree that a comparative lull in fighting this winter preceded the current offensive of regrouping forces. There is continuing U.S. support which is on that terrorism, dwarfing the 17-death attack on the U.S. Embassy in Saigon, is the deadliest.

Finally, within 40 or 50 days will come the season of torrential rains. These can only benefit the Viet Cong.

They are certain to impede — perhaps sharply — the capacity of U.S. planes to bomb North Viet Nam. They will curb the efficiency of the helicopters and fixed-wing aircraft which have been a main U.S. weapon.

ATTACK IN RAIN

It is being recalled now that May, 1954, was the month that the forces of Ho Chi Minh chose to crush the French at Dien Bien Phu. Under cover of the rains, the Viet Cong can be expected not only to expand their military activities but also the flow of reinforcements in arms and men.

The approach of the rainy season, observers feel, may well see an intensification in American air strikes in the hope of convincing North Viet Nam to bargain before its slim industrial reservoir is wiped out.

So far, the U.S. says, it has been unsuccessful in military targets, which includes bridges and rail and road links.

HOW MUCH WATER SHOULD YOU DRINK?

All livings cells of the body function in a fluid environment. This fluid is steadily lost through the gastro-intestinal and urinal tracts. More is lots by perspiration and through the lungs. It must be replaced because the skin cannot absorb moisture from the air no matter how humid the day.

The body usually functions best if two quart of liquids are taken in each day. One quart is considered the minimum. So estimate how much you get each day in coffee, etc., and drink additional water to help keep you healthier.

CN Industrial Agent Tells LODA Members of Aims

TRENTON — Canadian National Railways officials have the same aim as municipal authorities and such promotional bodies as the Lake Ontario Development Association . . . the development of communities throughout the country.

Stanley C. Durrant, industrial agent for the CNR, working out of Belleville, Thursday night compared the basic attitudes of the railway with LODA members and area community leaders at a Zone Two meeting of LODA in the Red Lion Restaurant at Trenton.

Active in all phases of area development since moving to Belleville in July, 1963, Mr. Durrant urged the fifty LODA members at the meeting to promote their communities in every way possible, in order to attract industry. He said it was the responsibility of every industry to the area, just as it was the job of such communities as Trenton and Belleville.

At a dinner meeting in the Gilbert Hotel on Wednesday, L. E. Dent, manager of the CNR Rideau area, told Mayor James MacDonald and Clerk Councillor C. W. Larry that although CNR trains will make fewer stops at Trenton after April 26, those which do will make better connections will be able to do so easily at Belleville. Much of the freight formerly shipped from Trenton will also be trucked to Belleville for shipment. A Zenith telephone line will be set up so that Trenton customers can make direct connection with Belleville.

Mayor MacDonald expressed delight that there seemed to be a "pattern" of utility services moving out of Trenton, he added, "we'll just have to make the best of it, I guess."

'Pretty Boy' Admits Living High Off Crime

OTTAWA (CP) — Victor (Pretty Boy) Levesque proclaimed in court here Friday that he has been the victim of "police frameups" and harassment, but he freely admitted living high from the proceeds of crime since 1962.

Levesque, facing a charge of robbery with violence at the home here of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Plant Nov. 9, 1963, also claimed he had suffered from too much newspaper, radio and television publicity.

The 24 - year - old Cornwall, Ont., native who surprised the court Thursday by taking the witness stand, said he presently is under several lengthy sentences, including a 25 - year term, for his alleged activities as a member of a gang of hooded bandits who staged a series of robberies in eastern Ontario and Quebec in 1963.

Levesque said he had been deliberately hurried into trials without proper opportunity to prepare his defence.

Referring to the convictions which are now under appeal, he said "I'll be able to prove my innocence."

Under cross examination, Levesque said he had many dealings in respect to the theft and sale of stolen merchandise in Montreal and admitted that at times he had worn a gun and carried a gun while committing robberies.

A veteran of one of Canada's most sacrificial contributions to modern history last night called the Maple Leaf flag "a step in the right direction" to national unity.

Ellie Donaldson, deputy district commander of the Canadian Legion, and a veteran of Vimy Ridge, made the comment after his keynote address to the Belleville Legion branch here last night.

He spoke at the annual Vimy Day banquet of the Legion, which traditionally marks one of the most triumphant Canadian feats of arms on behalf of democratic freedom.

The bloody Western Front holocaust of nearly 40 years ago became a byword for democratic determination. As the years roll by the dwindling number of veterans who shouldered together in its front line are rescued once a year from anonymity by the Legion's annual Vimy celebration.

Last night's event in Belleville was the occasion of Ellie Donaldson's remarks.

As a Legion comrade, a participant in the historic feat, he focused most of his address on memories of the occasion.

Toward the end he recalled the many men who squared up with him during the historic onslaught.

"We had a French-Canadian, Gus Gagnon. We had an Indian, Ben Green from Brantford. We had an Irishman . . ."

ALWAYS UNITED

"We were a cross-section of people, yet we were united there was no thought in mind," he told the Legionnaires.

"We didn't think of a man's color, of a man's religion. We were united. We knew, when the chips were down, they were going to be there.

"That is the main thing that over the years has come out of Vimy—the fact that Canadians were united."

The sacrifice made at Vimy, he felt, had set an example for fighting generations to come. Yet, the younger contemporary, generation seems to have a desire to bring divisive issues into the limelight.

In this respect, he advised, "we of the Legion must set an example."

The "Old Sweats" (the fond nickname given British front-line troops in World War One) will not stand for separatism.

The Old Sweats will stand for any flag that will be put up," he added.

WILL RECOGNIZE FLAG

After his speech, the veteran expanded on his remarks and said he personally would recognize any flag hoisted "in the country and recognized by the Legion."

"Over this new flag there shouldn't be any fights," he said bluntly.

Mr. Donaldson added he always felt the "flag issue was something that had to come. We still love the old Ensign, but we're still man enough to recognize the flag in our country."

"We all want to be united under one flag."

"Personally," he added, "I don't think the new flag is the only issue (in the controversy of national unity) . . . but it's a step in the right direction."

"I mean it," he emphasized, as he concluded the interview.

Lawyer

U.S. authorities, went over the wall of Montreal's Bordeaux Jail March 2 and disappeared.

At Fridays hearing, Jules Deschenes, counsel for the federal government, and Norman Mathews, counsel for the RCMP, each aimed verbal blasts at Ross Drouin, counsel for the Progressive Conservative pirpz.

Mr. Deschenes accused Mr. Drouin of calumny against Justice Minister Favreau for a statement Mr. Drouin made the justice minister ventured into a field—criminal law—about which he knew nothing.

Mr. Deschenes maintained Mr. Favreau was fully qualified and wholly justified in deciding Sept. 18 against laying criminal charges against Raymond Denis, then executive assistant to the immigration minister and accused by Mr. Lamontagne of offering him $20,000 in the Rivard affair.

Mr. Mathews argued that Mr. Drouin had talked "sheer nonsense" to the commission in suggesting that the federal government was responsible for the safekeeping of Rivard. He said Mr. Drouin seemed to suggest the RCMP should have been sent into provincial-run Bordeaux Jail to watch over Rivard.

SAYS HE'S AMAZED

Mr. Deschenes also said he was amazed that Chief Justice Dorion did not take "immediate measures"—he didn't specify what — against Erik Nielsen, Conservative MP for the Yukon, because of parts of his testimony to the commission.

He said Mr. Nielsen had tried to attack Mr. Favreau's integrity and make the commission a pawn in party politics. The Yukon MP had tried to suggest in the witness box that Mr. Favreau was laid criminal charges against two Yukoners in retaliation for Mr. Nielsen exposing the Rivard affair in the Commons last Nov. 23.

Mr. Mathews argued that of a "despicable smear campaign" by some newspaper editorials and cartoons to blame the RCMP for Rivard's escape. The Mounties had had nothing to do with guarding Rivard.

Mr. Mathews argued that there was insufficient evidence last Sept. 18, and still is insufficient evidence, to charge anyone in the Rivard affair.

The only possible charges would be of attempted bribery against Denis, which would be thrown out of court, or of conspiracy to obstruct justice against Denis, Liberal organizer Guy Masson, murder suspect Robert Gignac, Mrs. Rivard and Liberal MP Guy Rouleau.

The evidence against them, especially against Mr. Rouleau, fell far short of ensuring conviction.

There had been suspicious statements and actions but convictions were not registered on the basis of suspicion.

Youth Board Wanted

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario legislature's select committee on youth recommended a provincial youth authority Friday and asked for permission to determine what kind of authority it should be.

The committee also recommended establishment of small group homes for children now being sent by the courts to training schools.

In its interim report to the legislature, the committee said three types of youth authority had been suggested.

One would be similar to the Alcoholic and Drug Addiction Foundation, another would be attached to the government and the third a separate department within the government.

An authority could do research to fill gaps in youth services and by being on a provincial basis could make the best use of the few trained youth workers available the report said.

WOULD BE SMALL

The group homes recommended for children of inadequate parents would house eight to 12 children in homelike conditions but would include diagnostic and treatment services.

The children would attend public schools and be supervised by house parents.

Children's aid societies should control such homes, the report said.

The committee was headed by Argue (PC — Kingston).

In other business, Stephen Lewis (Trinity—Toronto Scarborough) demanded an immediate public inquiry into the case of Freedom Fawcett, the Saskatoon Township farmer who has been judged criminally insane after killing his wife.

Mr. Lewis said he had a new piece of evidence—an affidavit from Fawcett's original criminal lawyer, Malcolm Kronby of Toronto.

The lawyer says in the affidavit, Mr. Lewis said, that a psychiatrist at the Penetanguishene Hospital for the Criminally Insane told him in 1961 that in the opinion of hospital doctors Fawcett was not mentally ill.

HONED ORDER

Four days later, Mr. Kronby says, the same psychiatrist, identified as Dr. E. F. Houston, was one of two doctors who signed an order committing Fawcett to the hospital.

Outside the house, Premier Roberts said he may make a statement on the Fawcett case next week. He said he will consider Mr. Lewis' appeal to refer the Fawcett case to a community institution and place him in an Ontario Hospital.

Mr. Lewis said the original indictment which led to Fawcett's incarceration had never been proven in court.

The new allegation made by two Euphrasia Township tax assessors that Fawcett had physically assaulted one of them and had shot a tire out of their car as they fled from his farm.

Fawcett later was arrested by the provincial police as the farmer was driving in his car with four neighbors. A Supreme Court lodge later criticized the OPP officers for shooting recklessly at the car.

IS 'PERILOUS'

Mr. Lewis said committing the man to mental hospital for 3½ years on the basis of the assessors' incident involving the tax assessors was a "pretty perilous foundation for depriving a man of liberty."

He asked why the testimony of Dr. Houston, psychiatrist, Ralph Harbottle, had not been introduced in the courts. Harbottle signed a statement in which he said Fawcett neither struck the assessors nor fired at their car.

None of the four neighbors to Fawcett's car had been called to testify either, Mr. Lewis said. When the case was reviewed in the Supreme Court of Canada, Justice Spence had said he might have been assisted by this evidence.

Attorney - General Arthur Wishart and Fawcett was represented by a most capable lawyer who had the opportunity to call whichever witnesses he wanted. The lawyer might have had good reasons for not calling two children and their evidence might work against his client.

From the point of view of the man's sanity, Mr. Wishart said, he was aware the defence had engaged psychiatrists but had decided not to call them because of numerical preponderance was offensive, Mr. Lewis said.

In a public inquiry no evidence could be withheld because of any legal procedure, he said.

Mr. Lewis said he understood the petition had been misplaced in the attorney - general's department since January, 1962.

Mr. Lewis said he understood the petition had been misplaced in the attorney - general's department since January, 1962.

Mr. Lewis said it was interesting that a petition germane to an investigation being carried out by the government in the Fawcett case was not even known to the attorney - general.

Facial Injuries Sustained in School Shop

Raymond Wellman of Bonarlaw, 17-year-old student at the Stirling-Rawdon District High School at Stirling, is in Belleville General Hospital with serious facial injuries, following an accident in the school's woodworking shop on Thursday.

School principal Robert T. Hayes, said the boy was lathe-turning a wooden bowl, when the glued laminations flew apart. One of the sharp sections struck the boy in the face, gashing this cheek and fracturing his cheek bone.

Mr. Hayes said it was still not known whether the boy's eyesight would be damaged as the full extent of the injuries had not been determined.

The injured Stirling high school student is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wellman of Bonarlaw.

An Age of Stress

This is an age of stress—in world affairs as well as in family life and personal relationships. In reality, though, it has ever been thus.

Stress is an integral part of the act of living, as inescapable as it is necessary. British writer Claude Cockburn once talked of the "everlasting sense of anxiety and feeling of guilt without which no healthy individual could get by for more than an hour or two."

In its extreme form, of course, anxiety, worry or stress, is crippling, uncomfortable—and dangerous. That is one reason why our mental hospitals are strained to their limits. Thousands of people are seriously ill, mentally, because of intrinsic mental defects or through pressure of circumstances. In other words life itself, or the pressures of this modern age, are too much for some. They can no longer cope and end up in the care of a psychiatrist or in a mental home, or both.

There is more stress on stress, as it were, today, because of the growing knowledge of mental problems and of methods of treatment. But the current emphasis on such problems has its dangers. It is fashionable nowadays to seek treatment from a psychiatrist and to talk of one's problems. And there is no harm in doing so, for any psychiatrist will tell you that talking over the problem, preferably with a close friend, is half the battle.

But let us keep it within reason. Let us eliminate some of the stress on stress by directing our minds along healthier channels. This world affords so much of interest to the outward looking person that there should be no time left for looking inward or for the encouragement of the neurotic tendencies that we all suffer to a greater or less degree. Given such a healthy outlook there should be no need for the plea of a Kingston General Hospital psychiatrist, Dr. R. F. Briggs, for the appointment of a psychologist to detect students with mental health problems.

Perhaps we are indulging in wishful thinking, for Dr. Briggs said that if Kingston is the same as other centres, surveys have established that five per cent of the student population requires help. In Kingston this would mean about 300 students out of a school population of 10,000. Yet this year only 41 were seen at mental health clinics in that city.

By all means encourage preventive care by the appointment of psychologists for the schools, but let the public help itself off the neurotic hook by encouraging a healthier attitude to life. Let us give neurosis the old heave-ho when there is no excuse for entertaining it.

Our Enemy

Wallace Nesbitt, Conservative M.P. for Oxford, is annoyed by the "short-sighted" critics, inside and outside the House of Commons, of United States policy in Viet Nam.

Some, he said, criticise the U.S. in such a way that "you would honestly think the U.S. was our enemy."

At that point in his remarks, we hope he had forgotten the members of the House nodding their heads in approval of his tongue-lashing.

But he had to add "instead of Communist China."

How is that again? Communist China our enemy? Potential enemy, yes, unfortunately. But enemy? We thought Canada was at peace, with every nation in the world. If Mr. Nesbitt thinks China is our enemy, did he protest against selling our wheat to a foe?

Peace is partially a state of mind and Mr. Nesbitt's statement, even if just a slip of the tongue, reveals an all-too-common outlook which, if it became universally accepted, here and in China, might go a long way to make war inevitable.

The only really awful thing about a submarine is the smell. It's part diesel oil, part salt water, and part hydrocholoric acid from the batteries. It gets into the seams of your clothes and snuggles there like old, cold fish; it seeps into your body, till you sweat it out at your armpits. Your skin glistens with it, your breath stinks of it, it's behind your ears and between your toes. A fortnight's leave is hardly enough to get rid of it; it has caused divorces. No cleaner on earth can ever eradicate it, no laundry quite wash it away.—Novelist Julian Mitchell.

To Your Good Health
Cysts on Breast Are Not Necessarily Cases of Cancer

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Doctor: I just had breast X-rays. My doctor said I have a cyst in the right breast. In three months I have to go back for more X-rays.

I'm worried sick. I didn't get too much chance to ask about it, as my doctor gave me the results on the phone.

Will the cysts have to be removed in time? I can feel it and it is annoying. Will this result in cancer? — Mrs. C. D.

Since cancer of the breast is one of the very common forms among women, I can understand your alarm. You suspect the worst. But let me explain things a bit.

Not every lump is cancer. More lumps aren't than are. Cysts (glands that have been swelling) are considerably more frequent than cancer.

For the sake of safety, my rule is that every lump in the breast should be suspected until it is proved not to be malignant. That's just common sense, don't you think?

We've made considerable progress in curing breast cancer, but it is an area in which we can make a big improvement if we put to use all that is known about it—and most important of all is early diagnosis.

X-ray of the breast (mammography) is now carried out more frequently. Fine! A cyst can often be distinguished from cancer by this method, but the ultimate and positive test is removal of the lump and laboratory examination of it.

To set at rest a prevalent fear, this means removal of the lump, not removal of the entire breast. If it is malignant, then removal of the breast is in order; if it isn't, the only aftermath is a small scar. Better a scar than taking a dangerous chance. In any event, some cysts are such a nuisance that they are better removed regardless.

There is no evidence that a cyst will result in cancer. The danger is rather that by coincidence the two conditions may occasionally exist at the same spot. Obviously this won't happen often. However, we can't say that it never does.

What I'm trying to do is relieve the minds of the many who have cysts, yet not let one single person become too confident and say, "It's a cyst, so it can't be cancer."

Our protection against cancer is of the same cost as our defence of this nation—eternal vigilance.

In all probability you need have no fear of cancer. But you should have the further X-rays, three months from now, as a sensible precaution.

And since the cyst bothers you my thought would be to remove it for that reason — the annoyance. There will be the added benefit of proving definitely that it is not malignant.

Dear Doctor: A drug list recommended 50,000 U.S.P. unit Vitamin A capsules for sinus. I think that much every day is dangerous. What is your opinion? — Mrs. E. S.

That's a high dose to take daily.

It is not a cure for sinus disease. True, a reasonable amount of Vitamin A is important in keeping the membranes of nose, throat, mouth and sinuses healthy, but excessive doses can be toxic.

Consult your doctor. For one thing, find out if you really have sinus trouble. Many catarrhal conditions are loosely labelled sinus when they actually are something else and need a quite different treatment.

To Mrs. W. S. M.: No, asthma is not contagious, so there is no harm in a person with asthma caring for young children.

Some Solace For Aging

Hamilton Spectator

Life is made worth living by the solace one finds lurking around corners.

For the man over fifty, tired and weary and still lingering on there are those two fountains of youth, soccer star Sir Stanley Matthews, age fifty, and Canadian Johnny Longden, a star jockey at fifty-seven, to remind him that life isn't really over.

If you are over the hill at sixty, think of Cary Grant, a romantic idol at sixty-one.

And if you are balder than the proverbial 8-ball, think of all the sighs and womanly groans that greet Yul Bryuner's naked noggin.

Even the usually semi-depressed forty-to-fifty crowd has its youth movements. There's John Bower, still stopping hockey pucks at forty plus, and Warren Spahn, pitching big league baseballs at forty-four, to remind them that all is not really lost, especially if one keeps one's waist measurement below forty.

Yes, it's the solaces that count. Tennis anyone can have.

When massed soldiers and specially constables prohibited a public march, the Great Charter was taken to the British House of Commons in a hansom cab 117 years ago today—in 1848. Containing nearly 2,000,000 signatures, it petitioned for universal suffrage, vote by secret ballot, and four other points, of which all but one later became law in England and many other countries. At the time, the Chartist movement was suspected of being a republican revolution and nothing was done about its petition.

Ottawa Offbeat
Daffodils, Tulips and EMO Emerge From Hibernation

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Maybe it is Viet Nam.
Could be the crisp state of international nerves.
Or perhaps it is just that an all-expense-paid excursion to Ottawa for a springtime conference among the daffodils and tulips is a mighty soothing thing.

But whatever the reason, the Emergency Measures Organization, which has remained quite decently comatose these many, many months, suddenly is threatening to come back to life.

The Emergency Measures Organization, or EMO, as it was known in its earlier headline-making days, is that colossal federal agency the taxpayers found in the political fallout following the shooting down by the Russians of the American U-2 "Spy Plane," and the resulting blow-up six years ago in Paris of the explosive Eisenhower-Khrushchev Cold War peace conference.

From nothing to those six short years, the EMO, while doing little more spectacular than building the not-so-secret but-still-mysterious "Diefenbunker," deep-buried in the native Nepean sandstone 20 miles west of the capital, has transformed into a quite respectable little bureaucratic "Empire," with an annual budget of $6,000,000, a staff of 219 and a $23,000-a-year Director-General.

Now EMO is summoning all hands to Ottawa for a round-table on "Planning for Peacetime and Wartime Emergencies."

SURPRISE SURPRISE

This call to action may come as a surprise to many people especially those who let the EMO take or scare them into building one of those hideously-gotten "Fallout Shelters" in their backyards or basements.

(And how many thousands of cans of sardines went stale and how many bottles of home-made hires soured into vinegar stored in those "Fallouts" waiting for World War Three?)

Strange that EMO would show its head again in public instead of just quietly and safely vegetating on the Federal payroll, out of sight and out of mind like some other agencies.

(There are stories heard in these bureaucratic parts of Ottawa, that one senior cookie, like so many elves, working away, neglected and all but forgotten in vast government cubby holes, with nobody knowing for sure what they are supposed to be doing, did have the ultimate security, for they can't be fired when nobody knows what to fire them for.)

And to think EMO, if it had hided its time, might have achieved this enviable state of untouchability. But no, it had to come back to the light.

And this is a bit surprising in view of its previous disasters.

The first came when EMO, the "Diefenbunker," described by eyewitness Liberal MP Grant Deachman before the Commons Defence Committee, was ordered into operation with a select group of Ministers and Mandarins on top at the first whiff of atomic smoke.

Since, hollerously, it is still supposed to be secret, no real accounting ever has been made of the cost, though there have been no details that it could have run as high as $60,000,000.

A HUMILIATION

The very grotesqueness of this monstrous luxury cave long has been a sore point with the Bureaucratic Establishment that crash-built it in a wildly panicky embrace of the "On the Beach" concept of doomsday defence.

With "On the Beach" long off the best-seller list and the nuclear - end - of - the - world panic over, Mr. Deachman has suggested that the EMO declare it surplus and have the Crown Assets Disposal Corporation sell it off, at maybe one mill or less on the dollar, as a place to store the Prairie wheat crop if Trade Minister Sharp shouldn't be able to peddle all those hundreds of millions of bushels to the Russians or The Chinese.

Even John Diefenbaker, for whose protection back in 1959 as Prime Minister the bunker was built, found it a humiliation. The EMO built it for him as a surprise, like some gargantuan gift for Christmas, and when they arrived to tell him Dief recoiled in horror, making a public point and great display of taking "shelter" in the basement of the Prime Minister's residence at 24 Sussex Drive during a mock nuclear obliteration of Ottawa and most of Eastern Canada.

The EMO had one other notable boob.

That came on another simulated nuclear air strike when the Capital supposedly was going up in a mushroom cloud.

Defence headquarters sounded a city-wide battery of raid-warning sirens, then couldn't turn them off for almost an hour.

Everybody heard them except EMO. And four days later the EMO Capital Zone Co-ordinator said it was still all news to him. Nobody told me, he explained, and since as he said, he did not read the papers and never listened to the radio, how was he to know?

Rural districts and outlying towns and villages again exemplified a fine spirit of willingness to co-operate with the nation's blood plasma efforts at the Kiwanis Clinic yesterday, when 181 donors, 134 of them from outside points, eclipsed their blood for the Dominion's wounded. Only 37 city donors were present, the greater majority being women.

Included in the out-of-town donors was a paratrooper recently returned from overseas, who told clinic officials a grim story of the work being done by the Medical Corps and of the urgent need over there of the important plasma.

Out of town points represented at the Sunday clinic included— Smithfield, 1; Malone, 2; Preston, 2; Delora, 6; Picton, 12; Cherry Valley, 12; Foxboro, 1; Dartford, 9; Warkworth, 5; Trenton, 2; Bloomfield, 3; Campbellford, 2; Roseneath, 2; Milford, 14; Wellington, 8; Frankford, 9; South Bay, 1; Marmora, 23.

BRIDGE

"The bizarre world of cards . . . " — Ely Culbertson (1891 - 1955.)

"For one thing," declares a Belleville bridge player, when asked why she liked the game, "bridge never bores. No two hands are ever alike."

A point well taken, indeed.

Just imagine: the odds against a player being dealt the same hand twice is about 635 thousand million to one. To put it another way: there are 635,018,559,600 ways 53 cards can be dealt to one hand of 13 cards.

Is bridge popular in Belleville?

Numerous private and civic (marathon as well as duplicate) bridge groups offer undeniable proof that the city is indeed bridge-minded. What's more, classes for beginners are flourishing.

One such class (of ten tables) meets weekly at the YMCA to receive instruction from the well-known bridge expert, Mrs. J. E. (Hazel) Pugh, 111 Palmer Road, who prefaced her lessons, begun in January, by saying in part:

"The custom of card playing goes back to English history to the first half of the 15th century. During the Christmas season it was lawful for everyone to play cards, but for some years, fear of neglect of the serious business of archery practice, was the cause of laws against card playing at other seasons of the year.

"Henry the Eighth was a confirmed card player and according to Shakespeare he was busy playing cards on the occasion of the birth of his daughter Elizabeth.

"A letter written by Margery Paston to her husband during the last quarter of the 15th century is one of the earliest references to card playing in England.

"The date is Christmas Eve, and she writes about their eldest son's visit at Lady Morely's to learn what sports "they used" at Christmas. He was informed "there were no disguisings (? masques) nor harping, singing, nor any loud disports, but only play at tables, chess and cards."

While whist had been played for some time, the game of bridge was introduced into England only in 1890. The game is said to be of Russian origin and brought to London by way of Paris by travellers from Egypt, Constantinople and the Levant.

"The origin of the name "bridge" for the game is unknown, but one English authority believes that the name comes from the method of keeping the score on the line resembling a span of a bridge, where honors are recorded above and the scores below."

Up to the outbreak of World War II. Ely Culbertson, whose book "Blue Book on Bidding" was a best seller, was the leading bridge authority in the world. We had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Culbertson speak during the war years, when he was on a lecture tour.

"I became a kind of one-man Peace Foundation," he had said, "endowed not by Carnegie or Rockefeller but by the bridge players." He spoke highly and with gratitude of the game which raised him as he put it to such prominence. Here is his description of a deck of cards:

"The bizarre world of cards . . . a world of pure power politics where rewards and punishments were meted out immediately. A deck of cards was built like the purest of hierarchies with every card a master to those below it, a lacky to those above it. And there were "masses" — long suits — which always asserted themselves in the end, triumphing over the kings and aces."

Persecution Complex Needs Prompt Medical Attention

DEAR DORIS — We landed in Canada poor as birds in 1951. No language, no money, no friends. After many troubles in Europe we started once more from the beginning.

My wife is a wonderful, good hearted and intelligent lady. But she is very shy; too shy to talk to people with her broken English. She refuses to come with me to visit friends; she gets sick. Lately she is frightened about everything.

DORIS CLARK

She says that all the people are watching her and that even the minister who tried to help her is a spy. Now she thinks I am against her too and trying to help the communist agents to kidnap or kill her.

I try to get her to the doctor but then she tells me: "I know you want to let the doctors and agents kill me or lock me up somewhere!"

I would like to hear your opinion before I do something about it. — NEWCOMER.

DEAR NEWCOMER — The persecutions of the years have caught up with your wife. Failure to speak English has made her people her fear-filled silence with enemies. She knows a past where such things happened.

Mental hospitals knew many such cases following the 1956 influx from Hungary. And at other times.

Frequently such a one turns on her nearest and dearest. This too is a symptom if illness. Get the doctor's help, with or without her consent. The situation is now beyond you, but medical skill can do a great deal.

With electric heating the temperature you set is the temperature you get

"You set the thermostat in each room and get a nice even temperature which stays the same" says Mrs. R. D. Murray who lives in an electrically heated home near Trenton, Ontario. The Murrays are one of many families recently interviewed throughout Ontario to discover their personal opinions about electric heating. Mr. Murray has this to say:

"There are no hot or cold spots. There are no cold corners. It is as an even heat right across the whole house. And I think it is a much healthier heat . . . the floors are warm and the air isn't dry. It is just right."

"If we were to build another house tomorrow, it would have electric heat in it," adds Mr. Murray, "because electric heat is so safe and so clean."

The Murrays are only one of many families who feel the same way. However, there's more to electric heating than its unmatched comfort. Electrically heated homes, insulated to Hydro standards, cost no more to heat than homes with other systems. Flameless electric heating is dependable, safe, and completely clean. There is no combustion to produce dust, dirt, film or soot. No wonder so many people are turning to electric heating for the comfort, cleanliness and economy they want in a heating system.

ELECTRIC HEATING FOR YOUR PRESENT HOME

If you are planning home extensions or if parts of your home are not now properly heated, you can install supplementary electric heating for less than it costs to extend your present heating system.

Status of Canadian Women Discussed at W. C. T. U. Meet

The March meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held in Bridge Street United Church, opening with an Easter and Lenten message.

The county convention was announced for April 28th in Newburgh.

Mrs. Vandervoort gave the devotional meassage, based on "Christ is the way, the truth, and the life."

Confusion, frustration, tension and fear abound on every side and only God has the answer. He is constant, dependable and unchanging.

WOMEN'S STAATUS

The status of Canadian women was discussed by Mrs. Blake Way and her assistants from the clip sheet. This information was taken from statistics of "Reflections on the Status of Women in Canada," by Marian Royce, Director of Women's Bureau, Department of Labor, Canada.

"The years of this century have seen many revolutinary developments — particularly in the woman's world. The number of women in the labor force has multiplied five times. It is a safe assumption that almost every girl in Canada will spend some years of her life in gainful work. Frequently she may be both a job holder and a homemaker."

"In jobs women now comprise more than 30 per cent of the labor force. Married women with paying jobs now outnumber single women.

"Women control up to 70 per cent of U.S. wealth — probably the same could be said of Canada's — 30 per cent of the savings accounts, 70 per cent of the insurance policies, nearly one-half of the nation's homes, three-quarters of the purchasing power and more than one-half of the stock holding power."

REGIONAL DIFFERENCES

Canada's situation has a bearing on the role of women. It is a vast country with marked regional differences. The seaboard area of the four Atlantic provinces, Quebec and Ontario, with their rapidly expanding cities; the Prairie wheat land, where oil is fast becoming a determing element in economy and the Pacific region of towering mountains and another long sea coast.

"In the large cities women readily find work, outside the home. In the parts of the country where production is based on timber and minerals, the women remain at home."

MULTI-CULTURAL

"Canada is a multi-cultural nation. Slightly less than half of her 17 million people are of British origin; almost one third from French stock; one fifth have their roots in other ethnic groups and a small minority are descendants of earlier North American peoples, Indian and Eskimo. Each culture has its own tradition of woman's role."

"The pioneering nature of life in a new country has been the dominant factor in the lives of Canadian women historically.

In the early days women worked side by side with their men clearing the land, planting crops and even on occasion shouldering the musket to defend their families and lives from hostile forces.

This is an unwritten story of courageous souls whose deeds will never be recorded. They made homes in log cabins, fed their families, spun and wove their clothing and bedding. They nursed their sick using homemade remedies. They made their soap, candles and dyed their meat. It is owed to these pioneer mothers, to a great degree, the fortitude and determination which characterized the Canadian men and women in two world wars.

How do the women of today measure up to the examples of the past? was the question asked.

Family businesses are diminishing in number. The trend today is to work outside the home.

Educational status of Canadian women is available on every level to girls and women. The majority of the publicly supported schools of Canada are co-educational, except in Quebec. At the secondary level they can choose their choice of fields as there is no legal barrier in Canada against women's entry into any field of work.

Girls must be made aware of the wide variety of occupations open to them and urged to take advantage of opportunities for vocational training.

"Efforts are being made to understand and cope with the factors that contribute to lower wages for women. The community takes pride in women who achieve success."

"Canadian women can be expected to shoulder a larger share of responsibility as citizens in an increasingly complex world."

Argyll Chapter Plans for Fund Raising

The regular monthly meeting of the Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E. was held in the Officers' Mess on Wednesday.

The Regent, Mrs. K. D. H. Willcocks was in Hamilton attending the Annual Provincial Meeting so Mrs. A. Cunningham occupied the chair. The treasurer Mrs. H. Kokesh was the other guest.

Following a short business meeting ways and means were discussed towards raising funds. The rummage sale convener reported a successful sale. A request from the officers to supply refreshments on May 30th on the occasion of the Trooping of the Colors was discussed. It was decided to cater at this event.

Magazines and paper back books are to be brought to the May meeting for shipment to Germany. A card of thanks was received from Mrs. C. Cox, a member of the St. John's Chapter, in appreciation for the gift of a floral centrepiece following the silent drill night at the Armouries.

It was with regret that the resignation of Mrs. F. Burtt, educational secretary, was received and accepted. Major F. Burtt has been transferred to Ottawa by his firm. Mrs. Burtt has been active in the chapter having held office in several departments and will be greatly missed.

Lt. Col. Angus Duffy was welcomed and he discussed several departments of E.M.O. He distributed forms to the members to be used as a practice for future information. These forms are for registration and enquiries in time of an emergency, and so must be accurately filled in.

A vote of thanks was expressed to Col. Duffy for giving of his time and interesting material.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses.

St. Michael's Bridge Club Ends Season

One of the most successful bridge marathons of the 1964-65 season came to a delightful, though regretful conclusion on Monday evening. The marathon was run by St. Michael's Bridge Club, which is sponsored by St. Michael's Catholic Women's League.

Piloting the marathon through the winter were Mrs. Genevieve Gallagher who was in charge of the beginners' section and Miss Stella Ford, who was in charge of the more advanced Mixed Bridge Section.

Winners for the final half (Beginners) were: Mrs. Thelma Morrison and Mrs. Edna Evers; Mrs. Abbie Frechette and Mrs. Edna Lockhart; consolation, Mrs. Hazel Booth and Mrs. Win Mulholland. High score for Monday evening's play went to Mrs. Helene Edwards, with Mrs. Ivy Long placing second and Miss Bernice Bunnett, consolation.

The door prize was won by Mrs. Clara Lathangue.

In the more advanced mixed tournament section first prize for the latter half of the tournament went to Mrs. Thelma Fitzgibbon and Mrs. Irene Trudeau; second prize was won by Mrs. Grace Clapp and Miss Margaret Fairbairn; third by Mr. and Mrs. Ted Boretski. The team of Miss Ann Lafferty and Miss Margaret Donoghue won the consolation.

High score for the evening went to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Chapelle.

Miss Rosamund VanAllen and Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Smith were awarded a prize for having attained the highest score for 20 hands during the marathon.

Numerous door prizes were drawn for during the evening.

The large attendance at this marathon testifies to the popularity of Bridge in Belleville and to the pleasant atmosphere created by those responsible for its success.

Going Places

Of London's Fine Cathedrals St. Paul's Greatest of All!

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

LONDON — That Sir Winston Churchill's funeral was held in St. Paul's Cathedral instead of, say, Westminster Abbey, might have surprised foreigners. But not the British.

St. Paul's occupies a special place in the hearts of all Britons and, to a great extent, all members of the Commonwealth family. It is, in fact, known as the Parish Church of the British Empire.

Westminster Abbey may be full of kings and princes — as well as long-forgotten non-entities whose families bought their ways in. But St. Paul's is the last resting place of the true heroes of the British — Wellington, Kitchener, Nelson, even Sir Alexander Fleming, discoverer of penicillin. And, of course, it houses the tomb of that odd genius who designed and built it all in his own lifetime — unique among the world's great cathedrals — Sir Christopher Wren.

"Si Monumentum Requirus Circumspice," reads his tablet. If you seek his monument, look around you. There are few more monumental monuments to one man in the world.

For more than 13 centuries a cathedral dedicated to St. Paul has stood on the small promontence near the centre of London known as Ludgate Hill. All of the first four were destroyed by fire, the last of them by the Great Fire o fLondon in 1666. But ravages of the years and civil war already had done most of the job by the time Wren was commissioned to rebuild the last cathedral in 166.

Then in his early 30's, Wren already had had a career in astronomy and medicine. Though he had no training as an architect, he made him famous, 52 other London churches are his design.

Like all geniuses, he had his eccentricities. While the cathedral was under construction, he would observe the work in progress through a telescope from Shakespeare Bankside, across the River in Suffolk, and fire those whose efforts displeased him.

Seven years passed before the first stone for the new St. Paul's was laid, while Wren submitted designs trying to please both the king and the commissioners. The oak model of one of the designs, 20 feet long and in 12 months in construction, rests today in the cathedral's trophy room.

When the present design finally was approved, things went no more smoothly than they did before. Wren outlived his favor with the court: at one time his salary was withheld and not until 1711 did he receive his arrears. In 1718, at the age of 86, he was fired as surveyor general: the new generation considered his architecture old-fashioned. Four years later he was among the first of Britain's great to be interred in the cathedral.

St. Paul's is most famous for its massive appearance, a sight that was dramatically emphasized in World War II when virtually all the buildings of the surrounding area were destroyed. It appeared for a while that the cathedral would suffer the same fate as its predecessors — destruction by fire — but by some miracle it survived without major damage.

BOMBS REMOVED

One of the most dramatic incidents in its survival occurred when the cathedral was hit by two unexploded bombs which might well have destroyed it. Both were safely removed by a Canadian-led bomb dispos al crew.

Like much else about the St. Paul's, its famous dome — second only to St. Peter's — was a source of controversy in its day. Critics and purists considered it a sham because it was actually three domes — the external one, a cone-like support inside, and the famous inner one with its paintings by Sir James Thornhill, who spent many years on his back doing them and suffered badly from rheumatism the rest of his life.

Paintings, vaulted ceilings, mosaic designs, an exquisite oak screen above the high altar, the famous Whispering Gallery (Where the Last Tattoo was played for Churchill), and the unique geometric spiral staircase are all part of the exquisite interior beauty of St. Paul's.

But there are many smaller and more human things to its appeal, such as a pretentious statue of Samuel Johnson in Greek robes, and the gargantuan effigy of Dr. John Donne, poet and one-time dean of St. Paul's, dressed in a shroud, his face a death mask, th efigure standing on an urn.

St. Paul's, which is the seat of the Bishop of London, the most powerful church in England, is built at a time when no one knew whether England might become Catholic again. Thus, unlike most Protestant cathedrals, it contains many chapels, dozens of one dedicated to the distinguished Order of the British Empire.

Some of the most moving, and least known, is the American Memorial Chapel behind the High Altar. Its stained glass window bears the crests of the 50 American states, and there is a gold-surfaced case containing a scroll with the handinscribed names of 28,000 service men who died while based in Britain during World War II. Paneling in the chapel also contains representations of American birds, fruits and flowers, surrounded by a carved and gilded eagle.

Battle flags and numerous memorials to Britain's war dead throughout St. Paul's emphasize the country's special affection for its weather-beaten and battle - scarred Parish Church of the British Empire.

Life Changes Drastically For 11 Women

VANCOUVER (CP) — Life has changed drastically for 11 women who lost their husbands in the Grandeur avalanche Feb. 28.

Mrs. Lillian Anderson of Vancouver spends her time with her three children and is trying to drive her late husband's car.

Her husband Craig was one of 26 men who died when an avalanche tumbled down a mountainside burying the Grandeur Mining Company camp 530 miles northwest of here.

"We are getting along with the $2,500 from Grandeur and the Workmen's Compensation Board pension, but I will probably have to get a job later on," said Mrs. Anderson.

Mrs. Sally Davis of Vancouver hopes to get a job so she can stay with her two daughters in British Columbia.

"We like it here," she said.

The financial picture is not so bright for Mrs. Pansy Geiger of neighboring Burnaby. Her husband George, 56, was a metal worker not employed by Grandeur and as a result she did not receive the $500 from the company.

Eight of the widows live in British Columbia, two in Ontario and one in the Yukon. Twenty-four children are father-less because of the slide.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ogilvy Observe 50th Anniversary

WELLINGTON (Special) — Well-known and highly respected residents of this lakeshore village for the past half-century, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ogilvy celebrated their golden wedding anniversary today.

Due to the indisposition of Mr. Ogilvy, the event was marked very quietly by a family dinner at the residence of their son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ogilvy.

The bride and groom of fifty years were married in the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Picton, by the Rev. Louis Barber. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. George Bailey, who also marked their golden wedding last Wednesday.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Ogilvy were born in England, Mr. Ogilvy coming to Canada at 17 years of age and, Mrs. Ogilvy arriving when she was nine.

They have resided in Wellington for the past fifty years after spending some time in various parts of Prince Edward County.

Mr. Ogilvy is the son of the late John and Mary Ann Ogilvy formerly of London, England. He has two sisters living in England, Mrs. Sarah Phasey and Mrs. Charles Nodder.

Mrs. Ogilvy is the second daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Carver formerly of this village. She has two sisters, Mrs. George Bailey of Wellington, Mrs. William first of Ontario and one brother, George H. Carver of Belleville.

Two children were born to the union, a son, Mr. Jack Ogilvy and a daughter Mrs. Tom Morris, both residing in Wellington. There are five grandchildren.

CHARTER LEGION MEMBER

Both Mr. and Mrs. Ogilvy have taken an active part in the community life of the village.

Mrs. Ogilvy is a member of St. Andrew's Anglican Church; the Woman's Auxiliary of the church; the Wellington Women's Institute and the Royal Canadian Legion Women's Auxiliary.

Mr. Ogilvy is a veteran of World War One. He enlisted in Belleville in 1915 with the 39th Battalion going overseas with the unit and serving there until his return to Canada in 1919.

He is a charter member of the first branch of the Royal Canadian Legion to be formed in the village and is a past-president of that organization.

After his return from England, he engaged in farming which he followed for eight years.

He became associated with a village dairy later purchasing and operating milk business of his own. He remained in this sphere of activity until eight years ago when ill-health forced him to retire.

Possessed of a jovial personality, Mr. Ogilvy in his active years was one of the more popular business men of the village. He took part in many community affairs ranging from those for village betterment to the theatrical.

Many friends from the village and district outside extended felicitations to Mr. and Mrs. Ogilvy on the attainment of their golden wedding.

Horticultural Society Hears Of Various Planting Methods

STIRLING — The April meeting of the Stirling Horticultural Society was held on Monday evening in St. John's Anglican Parish Hall with 38 men and women in attendance.

The president, Mrs. Floyd Armstrong, conducted the business. The secretary, Mrs. Ray Rose, and the treasurer, Mr. Harry Waite, gave their respective reports. There are 260 members to date and the canvassers were thanked for their efforts.

The silver trophy has arrived from Eaton's for the flower show on June 10th and the Swift Canadian Company is providing prizes.

Mrs. H. Wells reported sending get well cards and the read thank-you messages. The Society will sponsor a sale of plants and bulbs in the village in May.

APPOINT DELEGATES

Mrs. Frank Harding and Mrs. Morley Ayrhart were appointed delegates to attend the provincial annual meeting at Orillia in Guelph in July. The president has purchased a set of books written by John Bradshaw dealing with culture of bulbs, annuals, potted plants and other items. This set will be donated to the Stirling Public Library.

The president introduced district director Phil Dodds of Picton, who is in charge of District No. 2. He brought greetings and spoke briefly. He stressed that everyone should be a member of the Horticultural Society and thus strive to make their home a better place and a little more beautiful because of living in it.

In 1956 District No. 2 spent approximately $213,000 for civic improvement in this area. He stressed that all projects be marked with appropriate signs stating that it is the work of the Horticultural Society.

Mr. Dodds outlined several fundamentals and spoke briefly re the Ontario competitions. The speaker also stressed that in order to have a harvest of beauty in the centennial year that trees be planted by everyone and thus there would be five million more trees in 1967.

Mr. Dodds introduced Mr. Jack Laughlin of Picton who is an authority on growing gladioli, dahlias and roses. He gave a most informative address on methods of planting gladioli bulbs, cutting floral bouquets and later harvesting the bulbs for storage. Mr. Laundry develops new strains from seedlings and thus has a large array of colors. He said that dahlias should be hot barely covered with soil when they are first planted. When uncovering plants set outside first take off the straw and wait before working the soil around the plants.

LEADERS KNOWN

Mr. Laundry showed several slides of gorgeous floral arrangements. These were shown in vases, set in shrubbery and others growing in the fields and gardens. There were also delightful colored views of gladioli, dahlias, iris and roses which in everyone thoroughly enjoyed.

The president expressed the thanks and the group tendered an ovation.

There was a large number of door prizes donated by the president and these were available to all members.

In January the Society decided to give 12 flowering crabtrees as a special gift this year. The names of the 206 members were placed in a box and Phil Dodds drew the winners as follows: Miss Lenora Williams, Mrs. Douglas Faires, Mrs. Cyrus Summers, Mrs. Lindsay Sills, Mrs. Clarence Fitchett, Mrs. Russell Warner, Stirling Public School, Mrs. Harry Cooke, Mrs. Harry Francis, Mrs. Lawrence Munro, Mrs. Raymond Cooney and Mrs. Wilbur Johnson.

The meeting closed with a contest conducted by Mrs. Harry Clarke on trees and their names.

A luncheon followed conveyed by Mrs. Frank Harding and her assistants.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen voiced thanks to Mr. Dodds for his official message, to Mr. Laundry for his informative address, to the refreshment committee and to all others who had had made the evening such a success.

QUESTION:

. . . have you a suitable recipe for spaghetti sauce with meat that could be made in large quantities ahead of time to serve 200? . . . Nancy C.

ANSWER:

Make double the amount below to serve 200. (It would be more convenient for you to make two separate batches to serve 200.)

SPAGHETTI WITH MEAT SAUCE (to serve 100):

¾ cup salted fat, 15 lbs. ground beef, 2½ gals. tomatoes (could be peeled raw or four 100-oz. containers of can), 1¼ qts beef stock, 6 oz. salt (¼ cup plus 1 tablespoon), 2 tablespoons pepper, 1 tablespoon chili powder, 4 lbs. onions, weighed after peeling and mincing, 2 lbs. minced celery, 6 lbs. uncooked spaghetti.

Melt the fat in institution-size roasting pan in oven at 375 deg. Fahr. Add all of the meat and braise until lightly browned in small batches, stirring. (Give yourself plenty of time for this braising step.) Transfer beef to large kettle, draining off the pan with the beef stock and adding it too. Also add tomatoes, seasonings, onions and celery. Bring to boiling, then simmer 3 hours, stirring frequently.

To Cook Spaghetti: Bring to boiling 6 gals. water and add 10 oz. salt (¼ cup less 1 tablespoon). Add spaghetti gradually enough that water does not stop boiling until cook zippy-hetti this long, but most Canadians like it tender — and it goes further.) Drain well through colanders. Combine spaghetti and meat sauce and keep hot but do not burn. Serve sprinkled with grated cheese.

ANSWER:

The following is very popular and delicious:

SHRIMP NEWBURG (chafing dish):

2 lbs. raw shrimp, shelled, deveined, 6 tablespoons butter, 2 cups cream, 6 egg yolks beaten, ¼ cup heavy cream, freshly grated nutmeg, paprika, cayenne pepper, salt, toast.

Saute shrimp in butter in the top pan of a chafing dish for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Stir in sherry. Remove from heat. Put the bottom pan of the chafing dish on the stand and fill it with boiling water. Set the top pan over the boiling water. Beat egg yolks with cream until thick and foamy. Stir the egg yolks and cream mixture into the shrimp mixture. Add a dash of nutmeg and paprika, a few grains of cayenne pepper and a little salt. Ann Landers

Absentee, Divorced Father Stranger to His Children

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I was divorced seven years ago when our sons were six and eight. Their father is at present $9,000 in arrears with his support cheques. But the money is the least of my complaints. He rarely exercises his visitation rights and the children hardly know him.

ANN LANDERS

Three months ago my ex-husband remarried. The first thing he did when he returned from his honeymoon was to take the boys for a Sunday. He was a stranger to them. They asked me not to make them go with him again. I insisted, however, two weeks later — and they were miserable.

Should I continue to insist that they go with their father? They are fit at ease with him and I suspect they do not like his new wife. I need your help. — NO MIRACLE WORKER.

DEAR MIRACLE — You cannot force boys 13 and 15 years of age to go with their father if they don't want to. Do reason with them, however, and make an honest effort to get them to go.

After another four or five visits, if they do not go willingly, it will be apparent to their father that he has lost them and I suspect he will give up.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My wife's family are grand people but they include horseplay among their inalienable rights.

Two years ago they broke up our wedding reception by pretending to "kidnap" my bride right out of the receiving line. They tried to throw her in the back of the pick-up truck which was parked in the alley. My wife and I planned and paid for the wedding ourselves and we were furious when they turned it into a slap-stick comedy.

Now my wife's younger sister is being married. The family clowns want to paint "Help Me" on the soles of the groom's shoes to amuse the guests during the kneeling ceremony.

Tell us, please, how much fun is the family entitled to? — THE RDC'S.

DEAR RDC'S — Not that much. Some clods forget that a wedding is a religious ceremony and those cheap and timeworn gags are not only tasteless but they rob the bride and groom of the respect and dignity they deserve.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — We were two nice kids who wanted to spend our evenings at home playing records, or watching TV, eating popcorn and holding hands.

I met 17 and a high school senior. He was one year older. I received my diploma wearing a graduation gown which I fitted out completely because I was seven months pregnant.

Today, four years later, I wish I hadn't been so sure I knew all the answers. We have our own apartment and the furniture is almost paid for, but the love I was sure would last forever faded after a couple of months.

Our second baby was born less than one year after the first baby. I've had two miscarriages. (I pretend to be sad, but I was relieved. Two kids are more than enough right now.)

My husband and I are trying to make our marriage work but it's an uphill fight. So much is missing from our lives. Sometimes I feel so desperate I cry my heart out and ask God why this happened to me, but I keep the answers.

Please print my letter for the sake of other teen-agers. We wanted only to be close together and now we are so close I am suffocating. — TOO LATE.

DEAR TOO LATE — I admire you for trying to make the best of it. Chin up, Girl, and keep plugging. And to teenagers for whom it is not yet too late, I say learn from this girl's experience.

• • •

Awkward and self-conscious? Unsure of yourself? Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "They Key To Popularity," enclosing with your request 35c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

MELROSE MODEL MISSES

The seventh meeting of the Melrose Model Misses was held on April 6, at the home of the leader, Mrs. Mac Lester.

Since the home assignment for this meeting was to complete the blouses, costume jewelry and record books each of the girls worked on one of these. They were assisted by the leader, Mrs. Mac Lester, assistant leader, Mrs. Leslie McLaren, and Mrs. Roy McLaren. Mrs. Lester demonstrated the bar tack for a worked buttonhole and showed the girls whose blouses have set in sleeves, how to do this.

The next meeting which is the final one for this project will be held April 16 in the basement of the Melrose United Church.

Retirement Party Held For Couple

BONARLAW — On Friday evening Springbrook Orange Hall was filled to capacity with friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. William Barlow to honor them on their retirement from business.

The stage was set to represent Barlow's general store and post office. A beautiful bouquet of flowers, a gift from Mrs. Barlow's sisters and brothers, added to the setting.

Mr. Hiram Mumby was master of ceremonies, following his opening remarks Mr. Murney Bateman sang with his own guitar accompaniment. Five little girls in costume from Bonarlaw School, Marjorie Bateman, Rhonda Brown, Brenda Edwards, Anne Hewitt and Karen Englehart sang a song. Ken Bain in kilts sang a Scottish number; Kim Acker and Johnny Hutchings, as Negroes, gave a comic dialogue.

Mr. and Mrs. Barlow were called to the platform and presented with a corsage and boutonniere by little Rodney McKenna.

Mrs. Jack Prest acted as commentator for a "This is Your Life" story in which about 30 people — old school friends, family, business associates, representatives of the council and county council, fraternal organizations, St. Mark's W.A., and Springbrook W.I. paid tribute on microphone off-stage.

Each recalled some incident from the past or brought greetings from the various groups represented and were in turn identified by Mr. and Mrs. Barlow, who were to try and recognize them. Mrs. Barlow became on stage to greet the honored couple.

Mrs. Annis Heath played appropriate music throughout the program.

Rev. Stewart spoke briefly and Mr. Ronald Brown made the presentation of a movie camera and projector with which Mr. and Mrs. Barlow suitably replied.

Mrs. Acker Orchestra played for dancing and lunch was served.

A Lift for Living

Must Face Consequences Despite Avoiding Decisions

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

Why is the weather so tempestuous in the springtime? It is because the season cannot make up its mind.

Springtime is not clearly one thing or another, either winter or summer. The season seems unable to decide which it will be, so it vacillates back and forth. Some days it chooses warmth. The sun comes out from behind leaden clouds. Coldness yields. Snow melts. Brooks make the days tender. Then spring impulsively indulges its taste for winter. The air is chilled. Snowflakes fall from bleak skies. The marsh that has awakened to the spring peeper's song, falls silent, hurt by winter's careless blow. Earth and skies will become more settled when the weather renounces its fickleness, makes a choice between winter and summer, and is loyal to its decision.

Indecision is the soul's stormy weather. It is miserable. Some people plan their lives so as to find what peace of mind they can by reducing hesitation to a minimum. Florenz Siegfield, the noted theatrical producer, liked candy and kept a large box of licorice drops on his desk. When a friend observed, "I didn't know you liked licorice drops," Ziegfield replied, "I don't particularly, but they're all black. So I don't have to make up my mind which color is best."

OF MANY KINDS

We cannot play Ziegfield's little game with life in general. Life's colors are not all black, and its flavors are not all licorice. Life's choices are multicolored and of many tastes. Whether we like it or not, whether we are profoundly frustrated or not, some selections must be made among all the possibilities confronting us.

The New Testament vividly pictures Pontius Pilate as a stormy soul who could not make a choice. The Gospels tell us that just before His crucifixion, Jesus was taken by His enemies before Pilate, procurator of Judea, who held office under Tiberius Caesar. Tiberius was a tough emperor who would excuse no rebellions or civil unrest in the Roman provinces, and Jesus was accused by His enemies of treason against the Roman Empire. If the accusation was valid Pilate was obligated to punish the prisoner. But when Pilate examined Jesus he found no evidence that the charge was true. So Pilate sought to free the accused. Jesus' enemies insisted that He was guilty and must die.

Pilate then attempted to find some way of making no decision at all. He sent Jesus to Herod, hoping Herod would decide what should be done with Him. But Herod returned Christ to Pilate. Then Pilate gave the crowd a choice between Barabbas, a rebel and a murderer, and Christ; he would free one or the other. The crowds chose to free Barabbas and kill Christ. At last, Pilate ordered Christ scourged, and He was lacerated by whips to which were tied sharp fragments of bone. Then Pilate presented Christ to the crowd, thinking that such a humbling and painful punishment might satisfy the people. But His enemies were still insistent that Christ be slain.

PLAYED HIS PART

At last Pilate could stall no longer. He was in authority. Christ was Pilate's "affair" as well as a victim of the crowd. Mark's gospel says, "Pilate, wishing to satisfy the crowd, released for them Barabbas: and having scourged Jesus, he delivered Him to be crucified." So he let others make the big decision after all! He washed his hands of the whole matter and cravenly blamed the ugly business on the Jews. Yet, in spite of hesitancy, maneuvering and hand-washing, Pilate played his part in Christ's crucifixion.

Conservation of Heirlooms

By LENNY WILLIAMSON

PRESERVING IRONWARE

A rust-free, well-rubbed piece of iron or steel has a grey, tinny look. There are three ways of restoring the typical black color of iron and sealing out air-borne sulphur and moisture that cause rusting.

Flat black paint isn't too satisfactory because in time the paint flakes off and rusting starts again.

At Upper Canada Village, housewares are polished with oldfashioned stove blacking — a good method if you don't mind repolishing every year.

The lazy man's way of darkening iron and steel and protecting them almost forever from rust was first developed in European museums to preserve armour and gunmetal. Continuing research has proved that the "wax bath method" as it's called, is better than oiling for all iron both ancient and modern. You might pass this method along to your husband for his workshop tools.

Here's how you use the "wax bath" system at home:

Turn your oven control to 250 F. Put your flat iron or trivet in the oven and leave it until it's heated through. Meanwhile, melt some paraffin wax, the same kind you use to seal your jams and jellies. When the iron is hot, brush the surface with the melted paraffin until the invisible pores in the metal will soak up no more. Cool, scrape off excess wax with a knife, remove the last traces from grooves with a bit of turpentine. And that's it!

In the case of iron with wooden fittings, a tool say, plunge the metal part quickly in boiling water, dry by holding above a hot element until the water evaporates, then paint with paraffin.

Objects too big to go in the oven can be heated by sitting them in front of an open oven door and treating them, when hot, a portion at a time.

Don't tell the museum technicians, but housewives knew all about this method long ago. Remember when good cooks, after the meal, always wiped the hot surface of the old cast-iron wood-range with a waxed-paper bread wrapper?

Next week — marble and stone. Send any questions to the Hastings County Museum, or call the Curator at 962-3731.

LIGHTING THE CONVICTION, SAYING

By Walter S. Crowe

A MOTORIST WHO NEVER BACKS UP

It happened in Fitchburg, Massachusetts. Two motorists averted a head - on collision by mere inches. They were on the main street and traffic was a heavy. Each refused to move his car. Instead, the balky fellows got out of their cars, and stood arguing for 30 minutes, while traffic was being blocked for some distance on either side of them.

They were arrested and convicted on charges of disturbing the peace, and each of them paid a fine of $50. Even after that, one of them appealed the conviction, saying, "I still think the other guy was wrong."

The Bible says, "pride goeth before destruction and an haughty spirit before a fall". We might add, "an haughty spirit before a traffic dollar fumble." A little humility, a little willingness to say, "I'm sorry I was wrong", would have saved some frayed tempers, 30 minutes of time, holding up traffic for several blocks; the inconvenience of a court appearance, and the loss of $50 each. Humility is a highly-rewarding virtue. In addition to other things, it is conducive to calmness of spirit, peace of mind, normal blood pressure, self-control, and happy human relationships.

LOSING TWO LEGS TO GAIN A NEW LIFE

In Jersey City, New Jersey, a girl of 13 decided to have both her legs amputated, so that she could have artificial limbs. Since she had been a month old, her legs had either been in plaster casts, or in braces. She had never known what it was to walk, run, dance, or go horseback riding. She had always wanted to become a nurse. This also was impossible.

But her doctors assured her that if she would have amputation of both legs, and permit substitution of artificial limbs, she would be able to walk, dance, ride and work as she wanted to. In this way, a door to a whole new life was opened to her.

There are no gains without pains. Everything that's truly worthwhile requires some sacrifice. We must give up the minor to gain the major. Whether we are striving for a master's degree; an Olympic championship; a Nobel prize, or some highly coveted trophy, we must discipline ourselves accordingly, and sacrifice some things in order to attain. So it is in the spiritual realm. Material, earthly, worldly things cannot hold first place in our life if we will attain to a high degree of spiritual experience.

Lines on Life

Mature Man Has No Difficulty in Controlling Emotions

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

"I know that my anger gets the best of me. I know that I should control my temper. But I'm helpless. They are beyond my control."

This man is deadly serious. He spoke of his vices not with imperious pride but with downright shame. His distress was confounded by his clear and firm belief that there was nothing he could do to alter his situation.

But he soon came to see that he was, in fact, deceiving himself. He was capable of controlling his passionate excitations, his anger and wrath — with certain people: his boss, his customers, and all others who exercised power, authority or direct influence over his life and affairs.

His wife was gentle and meek — so he could scold her and shout at her without fear of retaliation.

His children would not dare fly back at him—so, he could, with impunity, flail away at them.

But not with his boss. He spoke pleasantly enough. Nor with his customers. He wanted their confidence and trust, and his reason kept his passion in check whenever they were around.

The people whose good opinion he valued, and whose criticism he dared not incite—these, his anger never excited.

Theory of reason tells us not to be angry when the consequences could be disastrous. Reason tells us this long before our flaming passions are enkindled. Reason, when we recognize it as "good reason," tells us not to give way to "bad feelings." In such situations, reason conquers emotions by coming to the fore, to ward off the consequences it can make clear to us, long before the rising smoke of battle.

Yes, reason does speak to us. But too often, we pay it no heed unless we are frightened of the consequences of being unreasonable. When we are afraid that we may lose — we reasonably avoid the battle. When we assume that we can win - we'll take our chances on winning, unreasonably.

This lack of maturity is to be a reasonable man even when not threatened, to allow reason to be heard before losing our head. But more: the mature man not only allows reason to speak to him, he speaks to reason. He can tell his reasoning self how much he hurts his feeling self when he wounds those who cannot retaliate—his wife, his children, his neighbors and associates.

Home and School News

GLEN MILLER—JOHNSTOWN

The Glen Miller and Johnstown Home and School Association held a general meeting April 7 at the Glen Miller School. The usual order of parents to this meeting was poor, considering the fine guest speaker Mr. B. J. Thompson, Q.C. a barrister from Brighton.

Mr. Thompson was educated in Brighton public and high schools; studied law at Osgoode Hall in Toronto, was called to the bar in 1950 and appointed Queen's Counsel in 1964.

His topic for the evening was wills and how important they can be to a family in case of unexpected death. A will if properly written up can eliminate with long delays in the disposition of property and debts. An executor named in a will has more power to carry out the desires outlined in a will. Thus an administrator would have if there is not a will at the time of death. Mr. Thompson was thanked for giving an informative talk and answering questions for those present.

The group decided to sponsor a spring fun dance at the Glen Miller Hall April 24. Chaperons will be present to help with refreshments. Friday, May 28 has been the date set for the Fun Fair this year. Parents are asked to think now about donations for the following tables: sewing, hobby and novelty, white elephant, touch and take, baking and candy. The teachers and students will work together on various booths.

LEAVES MANY TREASURES

HADLEIGH, England (CP)—Dick Bennett, who died here recently at 74, bequeathed his lifelong hobby to the parish church—a collection of 25,000 bottle corks. They will be auctioned off, as he wished, to raise funds.

Club Activities

AVONDALE NEIGHBORS' AID

Mrs. R. Griffith was hostess on Thursday afternoon to Avondale Neighbors' Aid with 18 members and two visitors present. Mrs. Woeberger became a new member.

The president, Dorothy Macleas, opened the meeting with a Scripture reading.

Lena Reid was in charge of devotional and reading was given by Edna Denyes.

The secretary's report was given by Edna Davenport, in the absence of Betty Lough. Four telephone coolers have been reported sold.

Wyn Reed read the Hastings Manor Auxiliary report. The next meeting is to be held on April 12.

Refreshments were served by Erma Reid, Cynthia Wright and Della Wiley, followed by several games of bingo.

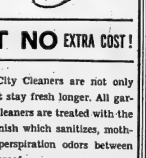
The president thanked the hostess and all who helped to make it an enjoyable evening.

SODA PUTS OUT FIRE

A burning frying pan will not be put out by water, but liberally sprinkled baking soda will do the trick.

A large, loosely-woven or open-mesh bag filled with bars of differently colored or shaped boiled soap makes a nice bath accessory.

AWAIT DATA



OTTAWA (CP) — Technical data from the United States is being awaited before completion of the federal inquiry into crash of an Air Canada DC-8 jet which killed 118 near Montreal 17 months ago, it was revealed Thursday. 13-Vote

(Berthier - Maskinonge - Delsanadiere).

Conscious by their absence were 28 Conservatives, eight New Democrats, three Social Credit MPs and two Creditistes. H. A. Olson (SC Medicine Hat) and Jean - Louis Fresette (SC Portneuf), did not vote, saying they were paired with absent MPs.

On the liberal side, there were 22 absentees and Ralph Cowan (York - Humber) was paired. Speaker Alan Macnaughton does not vote, except in a tie.

Just before the close vote, a Social Credit non - confidence motion was disposed of easily in a voice vote because the 11-man group headed by Robert Thompson did not press for a roll call.

Only three Social Credit MPs were in the House when the party's motion came up for a vote at 5:30 p.m. EST as scheduled. Under the rules, at least five MPs must stand up to force a recorded vote.

SEEK 'DEBT-FREE' MONEY

There had been reports that the other three opposition parties were prepared to support the Social Credit motion, even though it called for use of "debt-free money" from the Bank of Canada to boost family allowances and invest in public works and services.

The only three Social Creditors who were in the House for the vote on their party's own motion were Guy Marcoux (Quebec - Montmorency), Maurice Cote (Chicoutimi) and Mr. Fresette.

Mr. Thompson and four of his supporters wandered into the Commons later while the division bells were ringing for the vote on the Diefenbaker motion. They were Mr. Olson, Marcel Lessard (Lac St. Jean), Bert Leboe (Caribou) and A. B. Patterson (Fraser Valley).

It was believed to be one of the first occasions when a recorded vote failed to materialize on a non-confidence motion.

REFERS TO CASES

The Conservative motion did not elaborate on its charge of "wrongdoing" but Mr. Diefenbaker had referred in his speech to four recent cases involving cabinet ministers and Liberal MPs:

Allegations that former cabinet aide Raymond Denis offered a $20,000 bribe and that Guy Rouleau, former parliamentary secretary to the prime minister, and two aides in Justice Minister Favreau's office exerted political influence in vain attempts to obtain bail for narcotics suspect Lucien Rivard.

The forced resignation of Yvon Dupuis as minister without portfolio and his prosecution on charges of receiving $10,000 to exert influence on the Quebec government to obtain a racetrack betting charter.

Criticism of Edmund Asselin (L - Montreal Notre Dame de Grace) in a Quebec royal commission report for realizing a "dishonest" profit on a land sale to the Greater Montreal Protestant School Board.

Admission by State Secretary Lamontagne and Postmaster - General Tremblay that they purchased thousands of dollars worth of furniture without down payments from Montreal firms that later went bankrupt.

Mr. Diefenbaker also referred to the case of Judge Adrien Mercier of the Quebec Superior Court, a former Liberal MP who was sentenced to two years in jail for perjury last year and now is appealing.

The Rivard affair lead to a judicial inquiry by Chief Justice Frederic Dorion of the Quebec Superior Court, who was expected to complete four months of public hearings today and start drafting a report to the government.

A preliminary hearing has opened in St. Johns, Que., into the charges against Mr. Dupuis. Mr. Asselin has been sued in a civil action by the Montreal school board.

Since most of the cases are before the courts, there were few references to them in the first four days of the throne speech debate this week.

David Orlikow (NDP - Winnipeg North) said Friday his party was disturbed by Mr. Pearson's handling of the scandal charges. There was "general disgust and discouragement in the nation," especially since Mr. Dupuis and Mr. Asselin still were in the Liberal caucus.

"We are much disturbed by the character of the response, the hesitation, the blind or vague spots in the stories given us by the prime minister," he said. Parliament's reputation had been affected.

He said the Conservative non-confidence motion, in effect, indicated the "moral integrity" of the government and passed a harsh judgment on Mr. Pearson's "capacity for making unhappy decisions" and his ability. Mr. Orlikow was absent when the motion came up for a vote.

The motion read as follows: "We respectfully regret that your excellency's advisers, (the cabinet) because of confusion and indecision in dealing with several problems, and the careless indifference and neglect of the prime minister in refusing to take action to eradicate wrongdoing in high and low places under federal responsibility and to restore public confidence in the honesty and integrity of government, no longer enjoy the confidence of this House and of the Canadian people."

Mr. Pearson denied Tuesday that he is indifferent to wrongdoing. He had set up the Dorion inquiry and obtained the resignations of Mr. Rouleau and Mr. Dupuis as soon as specific charges had been placed before him.

Chance Remark By Husband Had Effect

HAMILTON (CP)—It took an unsuccessful shopping trip, a tape measure and a chance remark from her husband to put a 46-year-old Leamington, Ont., woman on the weight-reducing skids.

Mrs. Walter Towie is one of 1,000 members of the Ontario Take Off Pounds Sensibly Club which met here Friday. It took her two years, two months and two days to reduce from 231 to her present weight of 150 pounds.

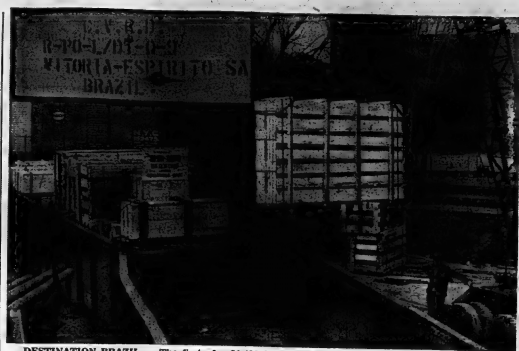
Mrs. Towie said she once weighed 275 pounds. She is just five-foot-two.

"I joined TOPS after an unsuccessful shopping trip in which I couldn't find a coat that would button over my tummy."

Her husband suggested they order from a catalogue.

"We got a tape measure. He handed me one end and told me to hold it and he would run around with the other end. I know he didn't intend to be mean but, boy, the next day, I saw an ad for TOPS in the paper and joined."

Before joining TOPS, women are required to have a medical examination, a diet approved by a physician and a desire to lose weight.



TOPS women do not use so-called wonder diets, liquid diets and weight - reducing pills.

They lose weight by eating the same foods as thin folk—but less of it.

Local Firm Ships $1.5 Million Conveyor to Brazil

The first five cars of a 16-car shipment of conveyor equipment valued at close to one and a half million dollars is being readied in Belleville this weekend for a destination in Brazil.

The equipment is being built by Stephens-Adamson, local metal fabricators, for installation at the Companhia Vale Do, a new iron mine at Tubarao on the Rio Doce (Sweet River), near the port of Vitoria, in Brazil. It consists of a ship loading system similar to that built by Stephens-Adamson for the Iron Ore Company of Canada at Seven Islands.

When the shipment of equipment is completed a representative of Stephens-Adamson will travel to Brazil to supervise installation. Value of the contract is $1,490,000.

Just to make certain that everything fits, the conveyor equipment is completely assembled at the Belleville plant prior to shipment. It is then torn down and crated for loading on railway cars.

The Belleville metal fabricating company employs approximately 250 men with a large percentage of its business being for the export trade.

Edmonton's Aggressive Mayor

Elected Over Garbage, He's Been Dumped Twice!

By RON MacDONALD

EDMONTON (CP)—Garbage got William Hawrelak into civic politics.

As he tells it, he was a shy man of 32 in 1942 when a group of citizens asked him to go before Edmonton city council to appeal for better garbage collection.

"I was very, very reserved, but I took the appeal to council even though I knew I would be laughed at.

"Afterward people said, 'Here's the kind of man we want. He's willing to stand up for something even though he's laughed at.'

"The next year I was asked to run for alderman. I came into civic politics at the wish of the public."

As a remnants of William Hawrelak's reserve are invisible today, and any laughter directed at him as a civic politician inaudible.

He has been elected mayor of Alberta's capital six times, twice by acclamation. He first won the office, which now pays $15,000 a year, in 1951 when he promised to "get Edmonton rolling" and "sell" the city far and near.

Since then, the city's population has trebled to 356,000, it issued construction permits worth more than $100,000,000 a year, road plans to spend $100,000,000 by 1980 on expressways.

He claims credit for improving recreation facilities, a city policy of setting aside land for industries and a program to provide creches for children of working mothers.

TWICE DUSTED

But if Edmonton is rolling smoothly, Mr. Hawrelak's path as mayor has been decidedly bumpy. Twice his involvement in land deals has cost him his office, most recently March 21 this year.

Controversy has swirled around him since a royal commission in 1959 accused him of "gross misconduct" in land dealings. He resigned, wiping tears from his eyes, the day the royal commission made its report, but became set to win the mayoralty again in 1963.

The city launched a civil action to recover $266,000 from Mr. Hawrelak, various companies and other persons mentioned in the 1959 report. Mr. Hawrelak and the city agreed in 1961 to a $100,000 out-of-court settlement.

He says he believes now he should have declared his interest in the dealings investigated by the royal commission but insists he did not actively use his office to gain any special advantage. None of the deals investigated then was with the city.

Mr. Hawrelak says that to ask a businessman to divest himself of any part of his interests on assuming office will not bring morality to that office. Each public servant, he says, must decide for himself how to act ethically and his decision will be judged by the electorate.

GOT LEGAL ADVICE

His second removal from office came under the City Act, a provincial law that governs civic administration. It says a civic official must not have more than 25-per-cent interest in any company that has a money contract with the city.

The court decision, to be appealed shortly, said Mr. Hawrelak had a 40-per-cent interest in a company involved in a land contract with the city.

Mr. Hawrelak says he declared his interest in the deal and claims it was not a "contract" within the meaning of the act. He adds that his lawyers and the city solicitor advised him the deal was legal, and the judge who disqualified him from holding the office did clear him of any "active impropriety."

Should Mr. Hawrelak fail to win his appeal, he says he'll continue in business at least for a few years. "My plan has been to devote four or five years to consolidate my private interests so that I can leave them to return to public life."

Meanwhile, the mayor's chair is filled by Vince Dantzer, 41-year-old lawyer elected to city council in 1963, chosen by fellow aldermen under procedures outlined in the City Act.

Whatever happens, the people of Edmonton expect to hear much more from the heavy-set, thick-featured man of Ukrainian descent whose big voice, persuasive manner and instinct for politics have made him the city's most talked-about man.

ORGANIZED FARMERS

Born on a farm at Wasel, Alta., 49 years ago, William Hawrelak says he came up the hard way. "At the age of nine I operated a four-horse gang plow on the farm."

He finished the first eight grades of school in four years and graduated from high school a 15. He was packing his bags for Kingston, Ont., to attend university when a hail storm wiped out the family's crop. He never did get to college but later took night courses in commerce.

Over the years he was federal hail insurance agent, liquor store clerk, federal agriculture department inspector, municipal tax collector, veterinarian and general insurance salesman.

He was one of seven men who organized the Farmers' Union of Alberta and he represented the province's farmers on the National War Finance Committee during the Second World War.

But many reports his business dealings, many of them wrapped up with a handshake rather than written contract, have made him a wealthy man but he laughingly says: "I owe much more than I'm worth."

He is sole owner of Prairie Rose Manufacturing of Edmonton, a soft-drink bottling firm whose Orange Crush he drinks in incredible amounts, and has interests in "about 12" other firms.

ADMIRED ROOSEVELT

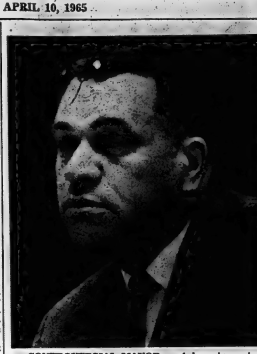
In 1957, after being invited by Prime Minister St. Laurent to join the federal cabinet if he won election, he was defeated as Liberal candidate in an Edmonton riding, but he hasn't abandoned all thoughts of federal office. "I will run again some day, I think."

An admirer of the late Franklin Roosevelt (he has a collection of the U.S. presidents' books, speeches and recordings), Mr. Hawrelak has a personal touch reminiscent of his political idol.

"I believe in the greatest good for the greatest number. My philosophy has always been to work toward and emphasize the individual as the most important part of society.

"I never discourage anyone from coming to see me. If a widow comes into my office to tell me about her troubles and I can listen and talk with her and send her away with a smile on her face, then I feel I've had a good day."

In common with FDR, Mr. Hawrelak gets the bulk of his support from middle-class and poorer voters. In the 1963 election, his neighbors in fashionable Windsor Park, where he lives with his wife and one of their three daughters, voted 4 to 1 for his opponent, Stanley Milner, 36-year-old company executive and alderman.



"The people who vote for me are the people who need help," he says. "I'm going to give them help so long as God gives me breath."

And as with Roosevelt, few people are neutral when it comes to William Hawrelak.

Alderman Ed Leger, who helped precipitate the 1959 royal commission inquiry and has been one of Mr. Hawrelak's most dogged foes, says:

"Mr. Hawrelak is a very adept politician. He's a smooth, glib persuader. When he turns on the charm he's a very charming individual. But I don't think Mr. Hawrelak has ever been interested in anyone but Mr. Hawrelak."

Among those who disagree is the Edmonton Journal, which, in an editorial the day after the March 21 court decision, called him "an aggressive, popular and able mayor."

Power Struggle Diary Back In Fort William

FORT WILLIAM, Ont. (CP)—A diary pegged on an 1820 power struggle in Canada's western fur-trading country has come home to Fort William from a private collection of the late Lord Beaverbrook.

It was written when fur was king in the wild northwest and the old North West Company and rival Hudson's Bay Company were at war.

The author, fur-trader Simon McGillivray Jr. of Fort William, a North West man, was a prisoner of the Bay company in a 15-by-10-foot room in a Coal Island fort off the western shore of Lake Athabaska.

Between Oct. 23 and Dec. 3, 1820—while a prisoner there—he wrote an account of the struggle that led to amalgamation of the two fur companies in 1821.

Early in 1821 Simon gave the diary to his twin brother Joseph.

Their father, William McGillivray, was principal director of the North West Company and directed its affairs from summer headquarters here and at other times from Montreal.

RETURNED TO LONDON

William, after whom this Lake Superior port is named, retired from the fur trade and moved to London after the amalgamation.

The Fort William Times-Journal says it is almost certain the diary crossed the Atlantic ocean in his effects. He died at London in 1825.

In 1957 the diary turned up in rubble of a house being demolished in London.

It arrived here in March, a gift to George B. MacGillivray, Times - Journal president and publisher, who is apparently not related to Simon McGillivray.

It came from Sir Max Aitken, Lord Beaverbrook's son. It had been in Lord Beaverbrook's private collection at the University of New Brunswick in Fredericton, capital of the province in which the British publisher and parliamentarian spent his boyhood.

John Gordon, editor-in-chief of England's Sunday Express and friend and associate of Lord Beaverbrook, wrote a letter which accompanied the diary.

In it he said, "Now that he (Lord Beaverbrook) is dead, I have suggested to his son, Sir Max Aitken, that it should go back to McGillivray country. Sir Max agrees."

DIE NEEDLESSLY

OTTAWA (CP)—The National Safety League of Canada said Thursday the main reason for playtime accidents among children is lack of supervision. The league said in a press release almost all of the more than 2,000 children killed in accidents every year die needlessly.

Newfie Seeking Tourist Dollars

By DAVE BUTLER

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundland, an island of rugged beauty with great appeal for sportsmen, looks for a huge increase in tourists during the next 10 years. But it all hinges on improved communications with the mainland.

O. L. Vardy, Newfoundland's tourist director, predicts tourist business in the province will reach $100,000,000 by 1975. But he qualifies his optimism by adding: "The whole thing will fall flat on its face without adequate ferry service."

Hilberto inaccessibility and tourist department policy have restricted the influx of visitors from other parts of Canada to this island which offers much to the hunter and the angler.

Mr. Vardy pointed up some of the difficulties. If residents were lucky enough to get a place on the single ferry crossing Cabot Strait, the MV William Carson, they found poor roads, accommodation and services on arrival. Other methods of reaching the province would be too expensive for the average tourist.

But prospects are improving.

FINISHING SCENIC ROAD

The Trans-Canada Highway, a wide, high-speed ribbon of pavement, is scheduled for completion this year. It will be the first time one smooth road will meander the more than 600 miles from Port aux Basques to St. John's. The road runs through some impressive scenery and almost every one of the step of scores of quaint fishing communities.

Hotels and motels are springing up and the government has set standards of quality. Liquor licensing is liberal compared with the other Atlantic provinces.

In 1956 Newfoundland reaped $5,000,000 from the tourist industry. By 1962 this had risen to $18,743,000 and last year about $27,000,000 was taken in. Prospects this year are for a $30,000,000 take.

The big jump is hoped for in 1966 when Newfoundland's "Come Home Year" is expected to bring $100,000,000 in tourist $60,000,000. If all goes well, Mr. Vardy predicts the figure will soar to $100,000,000 in 1975.

He remarks sadly that "hundreds of people were turned away at Sydney, N.S., last year because the William Carson wouldn't take them." He says at least one more ferry is needed across the strait are required.

Transport Minister Pickersgill, Newfoundland's member in the federal cabinet, says the question of additional ferries is being given "sympathetic consideration."

The province is optimistic that expanded ferry service will be provided.

The first $100,000 of a planned $250,000 will be spent this year in advertising in national and international publications. The advertisements inviting people to come to Newfoundland will carry a distinct Newfoundland flavor.

For the first time Newfoundland has adopted a symbol which will appear in the advertisements and which the government hopes will become synonymous with holiday trips.

The symbol consists of a circle representing the island, a three-pronged spear denoting Neptune's trident and the province's maritime heritage and broken horizontal lines portraying the sea, an ever-present reminder of Newfoundland's insularity.

Mr. Vardy is confident that since 110,000 tourists came in 1964 without any advertising to persuade them, many more will come when the advertising campaign gets going. He is also confident of the Newfoundlander's knack of being quick to learn how tourists should be treated.

The tourist director says people come to Newfoundland for various reasons, including hunting, fishing, camping at one of the 17 new provincial parks, sightseeing or just enjoying the "romantic and historic" surroundings dating back nearly 500 years.

But basically he says "people want to come here just for the novelty of being here for the first time."

'No Way They Can Beat Us' — Imlach

* * * Habs Call Berenson

By AL McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Punch Imlach brought his Toronto Maple Leafs to town Friday night and, while still singing the praises of Johnny Bower, refused to be drawn into controversy over the relative merits of opposing goaltenders in the Stanley Cup hockey playoffs.

It was Bower, the 40-year-old veteran, who limited Montreal Canadiens to two goals Thursday night before his Toronto mates came alive to turn the defiant lads into a 4-2 victory.

The win evened the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series at two games apiece.

While praising Bower, Imlach refused to fault Montreal veteran Gump Worsley, who replaced the injured Charlie Hodge in the Canadiens' nets for the last two games.

Commenting further on Worsley's two losses, on a 2-2 overtime decision Tuesday night in Toronto—Imlach said:

"Gump had to be pretty good against Bills and Reds on different occasions last night (Thursday) . . . don't forget they were right in for clear sailing on their chances.

HAD IT SOFT

"Hodge had it soft in the first two games and he was on his home pond, but Worsley had to step in away from home."

A groin injury in the second game of the series last Saturday night—which Montreal won 5-1—sidelined Hodge. He completed the game but was taken to hospital Monday when the ailment did not respond to treatment.

Hodge, who helped fashion Canadiens' 3-2 victory in the opener, is expected to be released from hospital today.

Another goaltender, Ernie Wakely of Quebec Aces, was recalled Friday to act as standby for Worsley in tonight's game. Wakely's American Hockey League club was eliminated Thursday night by Rochester Americans.

Imlach said he felt certain his team would get by the Habs following their Thursday comeback victory.

"There's no way they can beat us now—they (Leafs) just took matters into their own hands after Bower's efforts in the second period," Imlach said.

ADD BERENSON

On the other side of the fence, Canadiens' general manager Sam Pollock said the Habs were adding Gordon (Red) Berenson, also from Quebec Aces, in an attempt to correct the offensive and defensive lapses.

Berenson played three games for the Habs late this season and managed a goal and two assists. The red-headed utility forward can play centre or left wing and in 69 games with the Canadiens during the 1963-64 season had seven goals and nine assists, although he was used mostly in a penalty-killing role.

Pollock in a burst of optimism said there is the possibility of further reinforcements being recruited for the next series.

"I said the first series," that's how confident we are of getting by this one," Pollock said.

However, a Leafs veteran, 37-year-old Leonard (Red) Kelly, holds a different view.

KELLY OPTIMISTIC

The Liberal member of Parliament for York West, after admitting the commuting schedule between the House of Commons and varied risks in a tough grind, said he felt the Leafs were homing in.

"I felt it in the second period (Thursday) that things were starting to roll for us as a team," Kelly said. "It's the first time in the series I felt the team moving together."

Both Pollock and Canadiens' coach Toe Blake expressed confidence Friday and both said the Canadiens have been playing better hockey than Toronto.

Blake blamed a lack of scoring punch as much as defensive errors for the two losses.

NEED A GOAL

The Montreal coach said that wingers John Ferguson and Claude Larose just need one goal to get them rolling. Ferguson has been scoring aore lately since the series opened and Larose has managed only one assist after a 31-goal regular season.

Apart from the insertion of Berenson in the lineup, Blake refused to disclose any plans for lineup changes.

Imlach said he will go with the same team that beat Montreal in the last two outings.

"Everybody's fit and well," was the Toronto coach's retort to a question as to his line arrangement for tonight. "What everybody's fit, everybody plays."

The two teams each have scored 10 goals in the four games to date but Canadiens have outshot the Leafs 121 to 124 and have been penalized 114 minutes to Toronto's 104. . . .

Canadiens have scored seven power-play goals to the Leafs' two.

Sixth game of the series will be played in Toronto Tuesday night at 8 p.m. EST.

Trenton One Win From Title

TRENTON (Special) — Four unanswered goals in the second period helped carry Trenton Legion to within one victory of their second consecutive OMHA Juvenile "A" championship last night.

Legion whipped Port Colborne 5-3 before around 1,300 fans in the opening game of their best-of-three Ujular series.

Second game of the set will be played in Port Colborne next Thursday. If a third is necessary, it is scheduled for Trenton on Saturday, April 24.

The Legion lads were never behind. They led 3-0 at one point in the first but Port Colborne came in hot late in the period, cutting the margin to 3-2. Then came the winners' fourmost in the second to put it out of reach. Action was close again in the third.

Trenton notched the visitors by a wide margin, 52-29 overall. It was a cleanly-played contest with only a few minor penalties assessed.

Andy Poeple scored three goals and added an assist to pace the Trenton attack, two of his markers coming in the first period. Linemate Al Ferguson led all point-getters with a pair of goals and four helpers. Jim Bonn, third man on the line, drew three helpers.

Bob Fraser scored a two-goal man for the winners, also assisting on one, while Larry Poechman and Ken Reynolds also scored and Ray Bale got an assist.

Bruce Jackson gave a one-man scoring display for Port Colborne, triggering four goals. Wayne Gallipeau netted the other one. Doug Young drew two assists, with singletons for Brian Scott, Don Murdock and Dave Urwelck.

ANNOUNCES DATES

DETROIT (CP) — Jack Adams, president of the National Professional Hockey League, Friday announced dates for the first four games between St. Paul Rangers and Tulsa Oilers in their best-of-seven series for the league championship. The series opens at St. Paul with games April 11 and 13. The teams move to Tulsa for the third and fourth games April 15 and 17.

Palmer, Nicklaus, Player Pearson Seeks Ban Removal

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons Friday steps are being taken through diplomatic channels to try to remove a ban on six National Hockey League players teaching at a hockey school at Innsbruck, Austria, in May.

J. T. Greene (L — Renfrew South) asked Mr. Pearson about reports that the hockey players are being prevented from taking part in the school by the International Ice Hockey Federation.

On March 5, IIHF president John F. (Bunny) Ahearne said after a closed meeting of the federation's directors that "no professional outfit will be allowed to play in Innsbruck."

If any ice stadium in Europe permitted a professional team to play, it would forfeit membership in the IIHF games.

The six players — Ron Stewart, Tim Horton, Frank Mahovlich of Toronto Maple Leafs and Alex Delvecchio, Gordie Howe and Norm Ullman of Detroit Red Wings — were planning to teach at a hockey school run by former NHL player Larry Regan.

Regan saw Mr. Pearson Thursday and said that he now is confident the group will be able to go to Austria for the school opening May 1 as planned.

Replying to Mr. Greene, the prime minister said in the Commons:

"I can tell my Hon. Friend that appropriate steps, through diplomatic channels, are being taken to remove, if possible, the obstacles in the way of this tour of NHL players led by . . .

Trenton Trounces Moose Jaw 7-1 In Opener

NELSON, B.C. (CP)—Nelson Maple Leafs built up a 2-0 lead after one period and then trounced Moose Jaw Pla-Mors 7-1 Friday night in the first game of their western Allan Cup hockey semi-final.

Second game of the best-of-five series will be played here tonight before the teams go to Moose Jaw for all further games.

Big Three Share Masters Lead

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The pressure increased today as Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player shared a one-stroke lead going into the third round of the Masters tournament.

Palmer, the defending champion and four - time winner, Nicklaus and Player were shooting for a $20,000 first prize cut of more than $100,000 purse and a chance at winning a sort of golfing Olympic, which draws the world's outstanding pros and amateurs.

They were bunched at 139, six under par for the 6,900-yard course, but turned killer again Friday after being a soft touch on Thursday's opening round.

Close behind the co-leaders were Dan Sikes at 139, Tony Lema at 140, Tommy Aaron and Doug Sanders at 141, Bo Winziger at 142, and Georgs Bayer at 146.

The cutoff point was 148 and all those who made it will play the final 18 holes Saturday.

Nicklaus, who won the Masters in 1963 and 1965, was the only one of four Canadian contenders to stay under it. He added a 73 to his opening 72 Friday.

Veteran Stan Leonard of Vancouver, who shot a one-under-par 71 on opening day, ballooned to an 84 in his second try. The two amateurs also bowed out, Gary Cowan of Kitchener, totalling 154 and Nick Weslock of Toronto 156 at the halfway point.

For NHL Stars' Trip Pearson Seeks Ban Removal

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons Friday steps are being taken through diplomatic channels to try to remove a ban on six National Hockey League players teaching at a hockey school at Innsbruck, Austria, in May.

J. T. Greene (L — Renfrew South) asked Mr. Pearson about reports that the hockey players are being prevented from taking part in the school by the International Ice Hockey Federation.

On March 5, IIHF president John F. (Bunny) Ahearne said after a closed meeting of the federation's directors that "no professional outfit will be allowed to play in Innsbruck."

Replying to Mr. Greene, the prime minister said in the Commons:

"I can tell my Hon. Friend that appropriate steps, through diplomatic channels, are being taken to remove, if possible, the obstacles in the way of this tour of NHL players led by the incomparable Gordon Howe."

Mr. Pearson added there is one hockey player who is comparable to Gordon Howe. That is the member of this House for York West (Red Kelly), who in his 1461h Stanley Cup game scored two goals last night.

Mr. Greene said outside the House it was disgraceful that just because Bunny Ahearne, the czar of European hockey, doesn't want these players to go, they cannot go."

Dizzied The Brain Stadium Outshines Game

HOUSTON (AP)—It wasn't exactly like going out to the old ball game.

There was no one you've ever seen before, anyway.

Almost the only thing is the fans were those drab figures in white and gray suits running around out there on the grass.

There was so much color in the Houston domed stadium—the wild reds, purples and oranges of the tiers of seats and the flashing scoreboard—that it dazzled the eye, dizzied the brain and made it hard to concentrate on anything as everyday as New York Yankees and Houston Astros engaged in exhibition combat.

Mel Durslag of the Los Angeles Herald - Examiner summed it a little nicely, too.

"A club of the Astros' rank moving into a stadium of this structure is roughly tamount to the Beverly Hillbillies taking a mansion in California's fashionable suburb," he said. "The next step in Houston will be to dome the whole town."

Up in the top tier—where you can rent a box for only $200 a season—the fans lolled-at ease in purple chairs. The field was far, far below and the players looked about the size they do on a color television set.

If you got tired of watching the game you could step into your private, panelled room and have food and drink served by waiters in red and gold livery.

Or you could drop in on the Sky Club, a long, dimly lit room where tall, cool drinks are served by tall, cool girls in long hostess gowns.

And what did the first nighters think of all this?

"I'd see better if I was two levels down," grumbled a man who didn't seem to get the idea of the Sky Club section.

Well, if you wanted to, you could walk down just one flight of stairs and emerge in the yellow-seated section known as the high stands. Nothing fancy there. Just plain yellow seats and chairs.

Men rose and stretched in their shirt sleeves. Smoke curled in the air. Peanut shells littered the floor, and the homely smells of beer and popcorn drifted in the air.

Somehow, it seemed like a ball game there in the yellow stands.

Abel 'Not Worried About Hut Hull'

Back To Detroit

By JERRY GLADMAN

DETROIT (CP) — Sooner or later, Detroit Red Wings have to find a way to stop Bobby Hull from scoring goals.

Detroit coach Sid Abel, back in friendly surroundings after Hull and the Hawks evened their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final with two straight victories on Chicago ice, tried to downgrade the Golden Jet's importance as the clubs prepared for the fifth game Sunday night.

"I don't care if Hull gets a dozen goals as long as we win games," Abel said Friday.

The current state of affairs is that the blue-hot winger has scored half a dozen goals in the series and Detroit hasn't been winning games lately. Add his two assists and you have Hull figuring in eight of the 13 goals the Hawks have scored in the four games.

It's a problem the Red Wings hadn't counted on before the playoffs began. At that point Hull, hobbled by injuries to both knees, had been held to one goal over the last 21 games Hull, Detroit Hockey League schedule and was a doubtful starter for the playoff opener in Detroit.

HULL PROMINENT

It was just as well for the Wings that Hull wasn't healthy. They pulled out the game 4-3 as the Chicago ace scored the Hawks' first goal and assisted on the other two. He scored two more goals as Detroit won the second game 6-3.

In Chicago, Hull's two-goal effort paced the Hawks to a 3-2 victory in the third game and his blistering slap-shot from the blue line gave them a 2-1 edge in the series.

That gave him a career record of 30 goals in 49 Stanley Cup playoff games and veteran observer suggested that Hull could win the series all by himself.

Outwardly unimpressed, Abel insisted Friday that he isn't unduly worried about containing the Hawks' one-man gang.

"We'll talk about it, obviously, but right now I don't plan anything different," said the Detroit coach.

During the regular season, when Hull registered seven of his 39 goals against Detroit, his check was Paul Henderson, a 22-year-old right winger, who kept him under reasonable control. Henderson hasn't had the Hull assignment during the playoffs.

ANOTHER PROBLEM

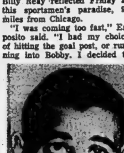
Abel also has offensive troubles. Detroit's two big lines, centred by Alex Delvecchio and Norm Ullman, produced only a single goal in the two Chicago games, the other two coming from 39-year-old Ted Lindsay, who plays on the third line.

With a platoon of newly-arrived farmhands from Pittsburgh, Detroit's two big lines, he "doubtless" will make some shifts in Sunday's lineup but added that he has no major changes in mind.

Leo Labine is due to arrive here from Chicago today. The Wings plan to remain at their hideaway in nearby Toledo until Sunday.

Ran Into Hull

Esposito Made Wrong Choice



By STERLING TAYLOR

ROCKTON, Ill. (CP) — Phil Esposito says he would rather collide with the steel goal post than Chicago Black Hawks' Bobby Hull.

Hull, who scored the winning goal as the Hawks defeated Detroit Red Wings 3-1 to even their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi - finals 2 - 2 in Chicago Thursday night, had collided with the Hawks' rookie centre in their own end.

"That was the hardest check of the series," Chicago coach Billy Reay reflected Friday at this sportsmen's paradise, 90 miles from Chicago.

"I was coming too fast," Esposito said. "I had my choice of hitting the goal post, or running into Bobby. I decided to take Bob because I thought he'd be a softer cushion.

PHIL ESPOSITO

"I should have taken the post. Running into that guy is like hitting a concrete wall."

Esposito rubbed his side where he had taken the brunt of the collision, and watched most of his team-mates cavort about the indoor swimming pool.

"Bobby could win this series," said Elmer (Moose) Vasko.

The blonde super-star has collected six goals and two assists in the first four games.

WE'RE STRONG ENOUGH'

"This club is physically strong enough to beat the Wings," said Camille Henry.

"Playing two of the three last games in Detroit will make a difference, but they (Detroit) have been playing over their heads most of the season. They were due for a let-down. We had a let-down in the first game after losing seven straight games."

Chicago had lost the final five games of the regular season NHL season and dropped the first two games of the semi-finals in Detroit before defeating the Wings in the third game at Chicago Tuesday.

Despite most of his charges, Reay looked like a care-free tourist rather than a man who did mapping strategy for the fifth game of the series in Detroit Sunday night.

There was a trace of worry, however, when someone referred to Chico Maki, struck on the head by a stick just after scoring the first goal of the Detroit-Chicago game Thursday night.

Maki was slated for x-rays Friday and Reay said he probably wouldn't have a report on the forward's condition until sometime today.

The Hawks were to fly to Detroit late today. The sixth game of the series is scheduled for Chicago Tuesday and the seventh, if necessary, will be played in Detroit Thursday.

Two Games Up

Flyers Clip Marlboros

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Two power-play goals spelled the difference Friday night as Niagara Falls Flyers defeated Toronto Marlboros 4-2 to take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven final for the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A title.

The third game will be played in Toronto Sunday.

Marlboros had a 1-0 lead on the first of two goals by Gerry Meehan before Toronto defenceman Wayne Mosdell was sent off for slashing midway through the first period. Fifteen seconds later, Dave Woodley tied the score.

Andre Lajeunesse and Ted Snell scored within the next five minutes to give the Flyers a 3-1 lead at the first intermission. Snell outmanoeuvring both defencemen and drawing out Marlboro goaltender Gerry Desjardins for his goal.

NARROWS GAP

Meehan's goal narrowed the gap in the second period, in which the Marlboros had the edge, but a goal against Toronto right - winger Paul Laurent for kneeing early in the third again gave the Flyers the manpower edge. This time it took 29 seconds for Bill Goldsworthy to rap home the clincher on a pass from Jim Lorentz.

Toronto played without left-winger Wayne Carleton, sidelined by recurrent knee trouble.

Marlboro coach Jim Gregory was without services of Meehan, Nell Clark and Ray Winterstein was disrupted by a mix-up between Clark into the ice in the second period. Both Gregory and Niagara Falls coach Bill Long said they expect both teams to improve.

Each team had 31 shots on goal.

The winners of the series will meet the survivors of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A final between Garson - Falconbridge Native Sons and Kapuskasing Maroons. Kapuskasing won 3-2 Friday night to cut the Native Sons' lead in the best-of-five round to 2-1.

President Johnson in Houston and Mayor Ivan Allen, Jr., in Atlanta made big hits in helping dedicate $50,000,000 worth of new baseball stadiums, but it was a 37-year-old retired player who provided the biggest lift.

President and Mrs. Johnson joined a crowd of 47,876 that saw Houston Astros edge New York Yankees 2-1 in 12 innings Friday night at the Astros' $31,000,000 domed stadium. It was the first professional baseball game ever played indoors.

Mayor Allen was on hand for a reception welcoming Milwaukee Braves, then watched with 37,287 fans as the Braves defeated Detroit Tigers 6-3 in the $18,000,000 Atlanta Stadium.

The Houston affair, though, was the one that won the game for Houston.

It was a single by coach Nellie Fox, acting as a pinch hitter with two out, that Jim Wynn scored from base. The hit, off Pete Mikkelsen, blooped into right field and Wynn kept running around with the winning run.

Fox, an 18-year-old major league veteran, is listed on the Astros' roster only as a coach.

The one - time American League batting champion Player has seen only sparse action as a player this spring.

President Johnson, a Texas native, received a huge standing ovation when it was announced he had arrived. He and the first lady waved from a window of the plush, private suite of the Astro owners, located high above the right field section.

The president wasn't around for the finish, though He saw Mickey Mantle homer for the Yankees in the sixth and left three innings later with the game tied 1-1.

In Atlanta, Mayor Allen greeted the Braves, who will move there next season. The most popular Braves during a parade through the city were veterans Ed Mathews and Hank Aaron. It was another Aaron, however, who sparkled in the first game at the Braves' future park.

Hank's younger brother, Tommie, clouted a three-run homer in the first inning that started Milwaukee on its way. Joe Torre later socked a two run homer and a run-scoring double.

In less glamorous proceedings, home runs by Zoila Versalles and Harmon Killebrew gave Minnesota Twins a 2-1 triumph over New York Mets.

Four-Way Showdown

Pot Holds Big Pile Of Green

By BILL NEVILLE

MONTREAL (CP) — Something, old, something new, something borrowed, something blue and a big pile of green.

That roughly is what the Stanley Cup playoffs are all about.

In simpler terms, it adds up to two trophies and $144,000 in cash.

The chief prize, from a symbolic point of view at least, is the Stanley Cup itself, one of the oldest trophies in North American sports and originally "borrowed" — permanently, as it turned out — from the lacrosse teams.

The cup, which cost Lord Stanley of Preston $46.87, but the National Hockey League $15,500 in upkeep since, is awarded annually to the amateur hockey championship of Canada. The National Hockey Association took possession of it, however, in 1910 and turned it into a professional trophy.

"Since 1926, it has been even more restricted with only NHL teams competing for a spot on its shiny silver exterior.

The actual trophy to be awarded this season is a brand new one, the Conn Smythe Trophy, donated by Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens in honor of the former coach, manager, president and owner and to be awarded to the player selected as the most valuable to his team during the playoffs.

OFFERS NEW WRINKLE

The trophy, which carries a $1,000 cash award, will offer a new wrinkle as far as selection goes. While the regular NHL individual awards are settled through balloting among sportswriters and sportscasters in the six league cities, the Conn Smythe winner will be chosen by the six league governors—the team presidents — in a secret ballot to NHL president Clarence Campbell.

That leaves the money, undoubtedly the most important item of all as far as the NHL players are concerned.

Every player taking part in the playoffs ends up with something based on this breakdown:

Two - thirds of the two semi-final series get 18 $1,500 shares or a team total of $27,000. The losers get $18,000 in $1,000 player units.

The ante goes up for the finals with the winner carting off $36,000 or $2,000 for each of the 18 eligible player spots. The losers get another $18,000 or $1,000 a player.

Thus each semi - finalist is assured of $18,000 a team or $1,000 a player while the cup champion ending up with $63,000 or $3,500 for each member and the runner-up $45,000 or $2,500 a man.

The 18 individual player units are based on the playoff rule that a team may dress 17 but plus a goaltender for any one game. In practice it often works out that the same 18 players do not play every game, leaving it for the club involved to sub-divide the pot to make sure everyone gets something.

Prexy Rests Comfortably

Voss Subs For Campbell

TORONTO (CP) — Clarence Campbell, 60, president of the National Hockey League, was "resting comfortably" at Sunnybrook Hospital today, a hospital spokesman said.

Campbell was taken ill just before the start of Thursday night's playoff game between Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens. The Leafs won 4-2.

The illness was later diagnosed as a peptic ulcer. Hospital officials said no complications are expected.

Friday, the office of Dr. Hugh Smythe, Maple Leaf team physician, said Campbell was "still ill, still under close observation and with no visitors permitted."

Dr. Smythe said no surgery was contemplated on the basis of the preliminary examinations.

MONTREAL (CP) — Carl Voss, National Hockey League referee-in-chief, will take over for ailing league president Clarence Campbell at Saturday night's fifth game of the semi-final Stanley Cup series between Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens.

Voss then will move on to Detroit for Sunday night's fifth game of that series between Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks. He will carry on with both games.

Campbell will delegate a representative for the remaining games of the Montreal-Toronto playoffs.

The arrangements were outlined Friday by a spokesman at NHL headquarters.

Colored Baseballs Don't Help

HOUSTON (AP)—President Warren Giles of the National League authorized use of three different colored baseballs in an effort to offset the sun's glare in Houston's new domed stadium.

Manager Luman Harris of the Houston Astros tried them Friday.

The result was another failure of Astro officials to solve the problem that has made daylight play in the $31,000,000 covered stadium a virtual impossibility.

Giles said orange, yellow and cerise baseballs might be used for two exhibition games this afternoon when the Astros play Baltimore, and Sunday afternoon, when they play New York Yankees.

But Harris put them to the test Friday.

"We tried the orange ball and each Wells Fox said they were worse than the white ones. We tried all three and we're not going to use any of these balls. We will not use any more unless they come up with something else."

"Yellow balls, orange balls, striped balls, I'm sure they won't be able to get it. Just blacken the dome, use a synthetic grass and forget it. That's the only way."

CLAY MAY RETIRE

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cassius Clay, speaking matter-of-factly from Miami Beach, Fla., Friday indicated he may retire after his next fight with Sonny Liston. Clay, scheduled to meet Liston May 25 in Boston, told Los Angeles radio station KRLA in a taped interview: "I just may retire right after the Liston Clay. I have so many things going for me."

Etobicoke Nips Hamilton

TORONTO (CP) — Etobicoke Indians defeated Hamilton Bees 6-5 Friday night to take a 2-1 lead in the best - of - seven Ontario Hockey Association Junior B semi-finals.

Fourth game of the series will be played in Hamilton Sunday.

Greenshirts Shade London 2-1

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Kitchener Greens shirts defeated London Nationals 2-1 Friday night to take the lead in their provincial Junior B hockey semi-final series three games to two.

The Greenshirts could wrap up the series when they play the sixth game Wednesday at Kitchener. Seventh game, if necessary, is scheduled for London on Thursday.

Tom Sonda drove the puck past goaltender John Henry at 13:34 of the third period to break a 1-1 deadlock and give Kitchener the win before 5,000 fans.

Wes Peters broke a scoreless tie at 11:17 of the second period to give London a brief lead. Kitchener's Wayne Gowing evened the count eight minutes later with Nationals playing a man short.

Referee Hugh McLean assessed 15 penalties, eight to the Nationals.

The London team outshot Greenshirts 37 to 29.

The Tracks

PORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — Canada Princess, a pint-sized daughter of Canadian Champ with a long-lived heart, began her undefeated record intact Friday and provided Windfields Farms with their first victory of the Canadian season as she raced to an easy victory in the sixth race here.

The black filly dashed away from the starting gate on top and she increased her lead with every dainty stride. At the wire she was coasting under Jim Fitzsimmons of Calgary. Song of Victory, her stablemate, was second and Wild Lady third.

Because of an easy win last November, most of the 3,929 fans said Canada Princess ran as the favorite and she returned $3.50, $3.80 and $3.20.

Punters got a bonus in the seventh race: Two winners. Just Plain Lucky paid $9.80 and Little Red paid $8.20 for the win when they ran a dead heat.

Tak Inouye of Vancouver, a newcomer to Ontario tracks, rode three winners. In the first race he guided Prince Pomeli to a $3 victory—Inouye's first win of the season. He came back in the third with Fleet Romance and took the nightcap aboard Half Light.

President Clarence Campbell hit the National Hockey League probably will have convulsions but coaches in the Stanley Cup playoffs could stand up in full view of the crowd and television audience, give the choke - up sign to game officials and get away with it. There's a precedent.

It happened during the 1959 Montreal Canadiens - Chicago Black Hawks semi-final at the Chicago Stadium. And coach Rudy Pilous of the Hawks, who finished what certainly appeared to be the sign to referee Red Storey, had a built-in alibi.

Why, shucks, said Rudy, "I was straightening my tie. That wasn't a choke-up signal." He went on to explain "there's a rule in the NHL that says our coaches have to look immaculate behind the bench."

"So what's wrong with a guy fixing his tie?"

There's little doubt that Rudy, now coaching Victoria Maple Leafs of the Western League, was sizzling at the time. He thought Junior Langlois of the Canadiens should have been given a penalty for dumping Bobby Hull and he let everybody know it.

That was the famous game, won 5-4 by Canadiens, that put them into the final and prompted Campbell to say Storey "froze". The referee promptly resigned because "the league president didn't back me up."

Campbell could look at the films until he strained his eyes but, based on the Pilous exhibition, he'd have a tough time slapping a fine on a coach if the coach came up with "the tie-straightening explanation."

Pilous got away with it, and the case closed when Campbell wrote a letter to Chicago owner Jim Norris.

Here's Pilous' story:

"Mr. Norris initialled it and passed it on to (general manager Tommy) Ivan. Tommy initialled it and, passed it on to me." And then?

"Shucks, I initialled it, too," Rudy said.

Now Meet the Son Of Jerry Lewis

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It's Jerry Lewis' greatest production, but give Mrs. Jerry Lewis all the credit.

Gary Lewis, eldest of the comedian's six sons, is the hottest teen-age idol in the U.S. at the moment.

Gary, 19, is leader of a group called Gary Lewis and the Playboys. Last Dec. 15, Gary, who plays drums, and his combo recorded a rock 'n' roll song called This Diamond Ring. By Christmas, it had climbed to No. 5 on the charts.

Recently, it hit the top—on both the official cashbox and billboard charts. Gary is the U.S. answer to the Beatles.

"My dad didn't even know we recorded the song," says Gary. "My mom was our first manager and she paid all the recording expenses out of the household money dad gives her."

Even Gary doesn't know how many copies the record has sold but its rating puts it well over the million-seller class.

When Jerry first heard the recording, his only comment was:

"This is music!"

But kids, who buy most of the records, think so.

Gary, whose only other show business experience was performing and acting with his father, is no overnight success. Last summer, he took his group out to Disneyland for a one-night job. He got it and a steady job for the summer.

Then Ed Sullivan put him on his television show. Soon the network shows hired him. Now he's headlining rock 'n' roll concerts. They're sellouts.

The London Palladium and British television have signed Gary him for a month's appearance. At this, the father stepped in.

"My dad let me take the English job on one condition," says Gary. "We must keep our hair cut, our nails clean and our clothes pressed. He says—and he's right—that it's the only new gimmick left in our racket."

Gary says there are two frightening things about his new popularity.

"One is mobbing by teen-age girls. I thought it was fun at first until a couple grabbed me by the wrist in San Francisco and started pulling me over a railing. One of the guitar players held onto my leg, else I would have been devoured.

"The other is when someone tells you how much they like you and then asks you to get them a picture of your dad."

Sidney Twp. Council

SIDNEY — The Sidney Township council members held a meeting at Wallbridge Hall on April 5. Present were the reeve, Ernest Ketcheson, deputy-reeve Jack Bush, and council members Horace Wright, Gordon Wilman and Burrell Hamilton.

It was decided that a Trojan four-wheel drive diesel loader would be purchased from the Equipment Sales Co., Rexdale. This purchase is subject to the approval of the Department of Highways.

There was a great deal of discussion on the merits of changing the township dump operation to one in which the rubbish would be used as land fill in the future.

The deputy-reeve, Mr. Jack Bush, sketched outline plans of the proposed hall which is to be the centennial project.

Mr. Aquino of Batawa, Sidney Township Fire Chief, reported that there were no fires during the month of March.

A report by Mr. George Caves, Welfare Administrator, was read and approved.

It was noted that the township residents were to be reminded that according to the Ontario Statutes, dog taxes are payable to the collector on the first day of January each year. The cost for a male dog tag, or a spayed female is one dollar for the first dog, and four dollars for the second. A licence for a female dog is five dollars for the first dog owned, and six dollars for the second. Dog kennel licences may be purchased for ten dollars a year. The township bailiff-inspector, Mr. J. W. Bailey, R.R. 5, Belleville, is in charge of collecting the monthly for these licences.

A report on snow-removal expenses for the winter was heard from the Sidney township road superintendent Mr. Charles Fair.

Mr. Byron Harder, Sidney Township Clerk, hopes to have the mill rate for the township within the next two weeks and will notify when it is ascertained.

Star of Show 'Bewitched' Expects Second Child in Fall

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—If all goes according to expectations, next fall will bring the birth of what may well be the most notable television baby since the arrival of Desiderby Arnaz IV in 1953.

Jerry Seal happened to greet the world on the precise day that his parents, Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz, were enacting the charade of the birth of a baby on their television show, I Love Lucy. The result was a television audience that broke all records.

A dozen years later, a similar situation is brewing. Elizabeth Montgomery, star of the top-rated Bewitched, has announced that she and husband William Asher, who also directs the show, are expecting their second child in the fall. Television authorities hope that they are, there is no choice but that Samantha, the witch Miss Montgomery plays on the series, must become pregnant, too.

This is not the first time that the Asher family plans have upset the show's scheduling. Shortly after the pilot was filmed, she discovered she was expecting their first child, Bill Jr. Fearful of any downhills finding buyers, but then came the long wait until Liz had the baby. She began filming nine weeks afterward; her doctor advised six.

"I plan to take more than three weeks this time," said Elizabeth. "Like maybe four."

Asher is already hard at work on the coming assignment; he was directing I Love Lucy when Lucille had her recital.

It was a matter of pure luck that both the Arnaz and the Hicardo babies were boys. Asher is working on that aspect.

COMMITTEE MEET

SIDNEY - TOWNSHIP — Messrs. Myers, Bowler, Plowman and Cassidy of the Bayside Cubs and Scouts Group Committee held a meeting on Monday night. It was noted that the Cubs and Scouts collected $3060 hangers in the community to be sold and the money put toward the new hall. Plans for the hall are being drawn up, and the lot which was donated is being surveyed. The men discussed nominations for the co-op executive, and it was decided to include women from the Mothers' Auxiliary.

After the meeting, the members proceeded to a games night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harrigan, White's Church sideroad. These recreational evenings are being held every Monday night to raise money for the hall, and about 25 people turned out to support the worthy cause. The treasurer reports that approximately $400 has been raised so far, and all the reports are not yet in.

Income Tax Explained

SEPARATED IN TAXATION

Question:

When a taxpayer is separated from his wife in the taxation year, he can claim $1000 for her if he supported her for any portion of the year and her income did not exceed $1250.

If the separation was of a legal nature, that is by written agreement, or court order, and he was ordered by the courts to make specific contributions to her, he may claim the total amount he contributed if it exceeds $1,000.

If the husband was granted custody of any children by the court and employs a housekeeper to look after them, he will have the same exemption as when he was living with and supporting his wife and family. This is determined by claiming the equivalent to married ($1000) on one child and $500 on each child in full time housekeeper is employed, he may claim that same child again for the ordinary child's allowance. This applies only when the separation is of a legal nature. It also applies to a wife who has been granted custody of the children. The income a wife earns after a legal separation will have no bearing on the husband's return.

Where the separation is by mutual consent the husband is legally not as free as a married man living with his wife, and his exemption for her is governed by the amount of her income. If she earns over $1250 he has no claim for exemption for her to have any claim at all he must show some evidence of support of her and the children. Of course if they lived together for any period during the year, he is deemed to have supported her.

For a personal reply, enclose a self-addressed, five cent stamped envelope, plus 25 cents for each question.

Answer: Yes. If you supported her for any part of the year. Question 2. I have been converted me and my young son in 1964. I don't know where he is. Can I claim $1000 as mine to?

Answer: It is doubtful if the tax department would allow it until at least separation is granted by the courts.

WARNS OF HAZARD

COBURG, Germany (AP)—Johann Hartlieb's ambition is to live longer than his great grandfather who died at 107. Last year, when he was only 104 himself, he stopped smoking. This year, over a glass of schnapps on his 105th birthday, he announced smoking is no good for anyone who wants a long life.

No Evidence Of Neglect Jury's Verdict

KITCHENER (CP)—A five-man coroner's jury Friday found no evidence of neglect that would have contributed" to the death of Mrs. Jack Walsh, 45, in the chronic wing of Preston Sanatorium, Waterloo County Hospital, Dec. 3.

"We did find, however, that the present practice of establishing definite responsibility for the patient's continuing medical care is unsatisfactory," the verdict said.

Dr. H. B. Cotnam, Ontario's supervising coroner, who ordered and presided at the inquest, described the present system of assigning responsibility for a patient's care as "loose and confusing."

Dr. C. C. Belyea, president of the medical staff at Freeport, testified that Mrs. Walsh "had not been seen by her consulting physician for some time."

Dr. Colnam indicated that Dr. Belyea's testimony had set unusual throughout Ontario.

NO ONE WANTS JOB

"Once a person is given a chronic label that's what he wants to look after them," he said.

Dr. Willard Sehl of Kitchener told the jury he had been the only doctor to visit Mrs. Walsh. He said he left his practice in December to join an insurance firm.

He said he had signed Mrs. Walsh's admission form last June 19 but "I never considered her as my patient. I thought she was being taken care of in the hospital."

He called the case "a tragedy, but confusion."

Dr. Helen Reesor, a staff doctor at the sanatorium, said she understood that her responsibility ended when she co-signed Mrs. Walsh's admission form with Dr. Sehl.

She said she was certain that nurses were caring for Mrs. Walsh but that she had never treated her professionally because she was not one of her private patients.

Dr. S. J. Hawkins, medical superintendent of the hospital, said that the eight patients have not been seen for some time by doctors. He said there was a patient recently who had not seen a doctor for two years but that has been remedied now. He testified under protection of the Canada Evidence Act.

Jack Walsh, husband of the deceased, said:

"I can't speak too highly of the nursing care at the hospital. She was well looked after at Freeport. I feel the doctor had the finest of sympathetic feelings toward my family."

WAS ILL SINCE 1957

Testimony of doctors showed Mrs. Walsh, the mother of six children, had been ill since 1957. After being examined by Dr. Sehl she underwent tests at a Toronto hospital and was advised of a possible condition of multiple sclerosis, an incurable disease.

During the next seven years since

Mrs. Walsh went to various doctors who all agreed with that diagnosis.

Dr. Gerald Lynn-Davies said his autopsy he performed after Mrs. Walsh's death revealed a brain tumor which the jury said was the principal cause of death.

Dr. Cotnam said the error in diagnosis was not important. "The tumor was a difficult thing to diagnose," he said.

Victim Fails To Gain Compensation

TORONTO (CP) — A Peterborough-area man left paralyzed by a car accident failed Friday in his bid to obtain compensation of $95,288 from the driver involved.

George Dunk, 23, of Norwood, was suing George Bernard Cassidy of Norwood, as the result of an accident July 28, 1963.

Dunk said he instructed another passenger to contribute $1 for gasoline for a trip and the other passenger contributed $2. He contended that Cassidy was in the business of carrying passengers for compensation.

Mr. Justice William D. Parker ruled that acceptance by the car owner or driver of a voluntary contribution toward expenses does not in itself create a contract between driver and passenger. He assessed damages at $95,288 - but dismissed the action.

Mr. Justice Parker found that the other passenger, Winston Hie, paid Cassidy $2 but it was not part of any agreement.

He said even if there was a contract it was ended because Mr. Hie had been taken to Stoney Lake and the group was returning to Norwood when the accident occurred.

Compassion Of Couple Is Rewarded

OTTAWA (CP)—The hospitality and compassion of a $2,500-a-year hotel pantryman and his wife were rewarded here when an odd-jobs man left them the bulk of his surprising $210,671 estate.

The will of George Garlan, filed for probate in Surrogate Court here Friday, showed Mr. and Mrs. William Muntean as the principal benefactors.

The Canadian National Institute for the Blind received $50,000 and Joseph A. Smith of Hull, Que., $10,000 from the 83-year-old upholsterer and handyman who died March 17 at the Muntean home where he had received board and room for $60 a month.

Mr. Muntean, 62-year-old employee of the Chateau Laurier, and his wife, who provided Mr. Garlan with lodging for the last 21 years, received the remainder of the Garlan estate with the stipulation that Mrs. Muntean is to get $20,000 of this."

Mr. Garlan suffered from chronic bronchitis and had difficulty finding lodging quarters until the Munteans took him up in an upstairs bedroom of their modest home.

Mr. Garlan, before 1800, had worked for two years on the farm of Mr. Mungan's father near Vienna, Austria.

Mr. Muntean came to Canada in 1923. Some time later, Mr. Garlan also emigrated to this country, staying at Toronto and Kitchener before coming to Ottawa."

His $210,671 estate (before taxes) consisted of $203,594 in securities, $4,402 in cash and $2,253 in bonds, plus clothing and jewelry valued at $322 and other personal property at $81.

Mr. Muntean said he plans to put his share into property and other investments.

How Your Mind Affects Cancer

ARTICLE 6
By PAT McGRADY

It begins to appear that emotional stress is a factor in cancer. This is shown in animal experiments more clearly than in human studies.

Much of what has been reported on emotional aspects of human cancer seems funny and fanciful, particularly to sound psychologists and psychiatrists.

Dr. Daniel Horn, a psychologist and co-author of the classical study which showed the statistical association between cigarette smoking and lung cancer has stated that, amid the welter of contradiction on the relationship (usually the death of or separation from a loved one) prior to the appearance of cancer symptoms.

Twentieth Century literature includes such nonsense as:

- "Dull" cancer patients do better than "bright" ones.
- Patients in whom the disease does not proceed rapidly tend to be "worthless rascals and totally irresponsible fanatics."
- Patients with cancer of the uterine cervix are subject to dislike for sexual intercourse, failure to attain an orgasm, frequent divorces, and a tendency to marry men who drink.
- Breast-cancer patients have these characteristics: masochism, inhibited sexuality, inhibited motherhood feelings, inability to deal appropriately with anger, hostility under a facade of pleasantness, unresolved conflicts with mothers, and the use of denial as a psychological defense, usually against guilt.
- Men with lung cancer often suffer from serious marital problems, venereal disease, and alcoholism; men with prostatic cancer are tractable, easy to please, unaggressive.
- People with skin cancer tend to become depressed easily, one study contends.

ANIMALS SHOW THE WAY

Animal studies seem to carry substantial significance for humans.

Experimental animals can be matched genetically, for age and physical condition. They can share precisely the same environment. They and control animals can be paired or separated into groups with true mathematical randomness. They can be subjected to similar experimental conditions and yield measurable results.

At the University of Illinois Medical School for example, scientists found that some stresses—surgery or heat (110 degrees F) but not cold (32 degrees F)—increase rats' susceptibility to injected cancer.

The burden of evidence in animal experiments is that stresses do speed the course of cancer, although there is only the most tenuous indication that stress by itself will help initiate cancer.

In Amsterdam, scientists tested the effects of isolation on gregarious mice with a strong tendency toward breast cancer. The results were always the same—the greater the isolation, the earlier and the more frequent the breast cancers.

Of 50 mice crowded happily into a single cage, only 15 developed breast cancer during 17 months of superlongevity; five or six of every group of ten caged together and almost four of every group of five developed cancer.

That sex and hormones play a role is indicated by the fact that when castrated mice were used, 83 percent of the isolated and only 11 percent of the crowded mice showed breast cancer.

Other animal tumors also were stimulated by stresses.

Baby mice removed from the nest for three minutes each day for their first 24 days dies much more quickly from implanted leukemia than old mice not removed from the nest.

A HAPPY HOME HELPS

In other experiments, mice subjected to the trauma of a surgical operation and the application of chemicals which cause more and earlier cancers than mice given carcinogens only.

Soviet scientists in Kiev, using Pavlovian techniques, trained mice to come for food at the sound of a bell and then made the mice neurotic by shocking instead of feeding them; neurotic mice developed breast cancer at eight months instead of at ten months, as nonneurotic animals did.

Many authorities feel that emotions well may be related to cancer; but they deplore most of the present-day clinical approaches to the problem—approaches which are unscientific or pseudoscientific. One of the exponents of the scientific approach is Dr. Eugene Pendergrass of the University of Pennsylvania, former president of the American Cancer Society. He has said:

"I personally have observed cancer patients who had undergone successful treatment and were living and well for years. Then an emotional stress such as the death of a son in battle, the infidelity of a daughter-in-law or the burden of long employment seems to have been the precipitating factor in reactivating the disease which resulted in death.

"The opposite may obtain. I have patients with extensive malignant disease spread throughout the body who are living with their disease and living in comfort. The disease has been controlled by radiation, surgery, hormones and supportive care. These patients live in happy homes.

"Even if psychological factors have no influence on the course of the disease, they have a great deal to do with the well-being of the patient. We as doctors must begin to emphasize treatment of the patient as a whole, as well as the disease."

Tornadoes Kill 214, Injure Thousands

Terrifying Barrage Slashes at 6 States

CHICAGO (AP) — The United States counted at least 214 killed in Palm Sunday's tornado bombardment.

The U.S. Weather Bureau said 37 twisters raked six midwest states. Injuries numbered in the thousands; property damage estimates mounted to several million dollars.

While search of the debris from shattered and scattered homes continued today in some sections, Indiana counted 109 dead, Ohio 59, and Michigan 36. Illinois deaths were seven and Wisconsin had three dead. Iowa reported extensive damage but no deaths.

The rampant weather front which spun the twisters through the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley diminished today in its spread into the east and southeast.

Sunday's storms were deadlier than those the night of March 23-24, 1932, when twisters killed 208 in Arkansas, Missouri and Tennessee. The previous single day in terms of tornado death toll was in 1925 when a March 18 barrage of twisters took 689 lives in Missouri, Illinois and Indiana.

Hard-hit Indiana authorities had no idea of the number of injured or the cost in property damage. There were three twister paths across the state's northern and central area. Power and communication failures hampered any assessment. Some highways were blocked by wreckage.

TOWNS HARD-HIT

At least 22 towns had casualties. Dunlap, Ind., southeast of Elkhart, had many dead in a crushed and scattered trailer home community. Orb-hundred houses were destroyed in Greentown near Kokomo. One hundred cottages were flattened at Koontz Lake northwest of Knox. Lapaz and Wyatt near South Bend were leveled.

In Ohio, the metropolitan Toledo section took the hardest punches, with 13 deaths listed and searchers seeking other victims. The Red Cross reported 178 injured were admitted to hospitals.

Near Lima, In., the Cairo-Bluffton area 12 were killed; 18 died in Lorain County near Cleveland, Ohio. Governor James A. Rhodes declared the tornado - smashed communities

Wind Whistled Like 88

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) "The wind came whistling—a very shrill whistle—like an old German 88 shell in World War II," said Sheriff Richard Weber of Grand Traverse County.

The sheriff spoke from a hospital bed in Grand Rapids. He suffered a severely injured leg when a tornado tore into the Andrea Restaurant in nearby Alpine Township Sunday night.

His was one of several stories of terror told by victims of the series of twisters that hit Michigan.

"There were at least 50 people in the restaurant," Weiler said. "We heard this shrill whistle — and next thing we knew the wall had fallen in.

"Bricks and rafters were all about me. I told my wife—pull off the bricks—one piece at a time.

"All the people were covered with debris. Nobody panicked—It was marvellous. And it was miraculous that everyone got out alive."

Before he was placed in an ambulance, Weiler crossed the road from the restaurant to check on a house that had been flattened, and he discovered a severely injured woman amid the debris.

Weiler said he summoned a priest to attend the woman before he went to hospital.

20,000 Persons Homeless

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Three National Guard units were ordered into the battle today against Minnesota's "costliest flood in history, a major disaster that forced an estimated 20,000 persons to leave their homes.

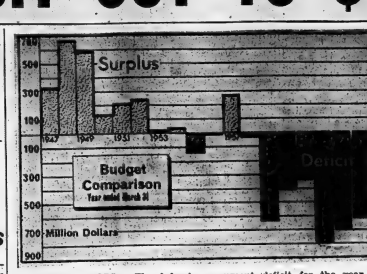
The raging Minnesota River continued its relentless destruction. The Mississippi was swelling, and smaller rivers throughout the state spilled over their banks.

In extreme western Minnesota, the Red River started flooding. Civil defence officials warned persons in low - lying homes in Moorhead to get out before Wednesday.

President Johnson declared 39 counties a disaster area Sunday and promised federal help. The aid will apply only to public facilities such as roads, bridges and buildings.

The Red Cross estimated 20,000 Minnesotans homeless. About 30 highways were closed by high water.

ORDERS DUE GUARD



Governor Karl Rolvaag of Minnesota ordered a National Guard engineers battalion on duty at Hutchinson. About 50 miles west of Minneapolis. The Crow River flooded at Hutchinson, driving 50 families from their homes. About 15 residential blocks and part of the business district were inundated.

Some heavy equipment used last week at Mankato, where the Minnesota River flooded severely, was ordered into Hutchinson. The machines will be used to build dikes and repair highways.

An infantry regiment was put on duty at Crookston, in northwestern Minnesota. National Guardsmen worked through the night, evacuating persons whose homes were being inundated by the Red Lake River.

Another infantry regiment, from Minneapolis, was ordered to security duty in the Chaska area, about 20 miles southwest

'Fight To End' Is Answer Hanoi Paper Gives U.S.

From AP-Reuters

TOKYO (CP) — North Viet Nam has said "no" to President Johnson's offer of unconditional peace talks and derided his proposal for $1,000,000,000 in aid to Southeast Asia.

"We resolutely fight to the end, that is our answer," the official Hanoi newspaper Nhan Dan said in a 2,000-word editorial Sunday.

"If they want to continue the war, we will also continue to fight back."

The editorial said Johnson's aid proposal impressed no one but "a handful of traitors hankering after the milk and butter left unfinished by U.S. imperialists."

Nhan Dan said Johnson had demanded a peace settlement under which "the U.S. still stays in South Viet Nam and its puppet administration must be maintained.

"In other words, the so-called readiness to enter into unconditional discussions' expressed by Johnson is no other than readiness to enter into discussions on the condition that our people must lay down their weapons and submit themselves to the U.S., otherwise the U.S. keeps on using force to attain this goal."

However, the U.S. state department did not view the editorial as an official rejection of Johnson's offers.

"North Viet Nam has not rejected anything," said the U.S. undersecretary of state, George Ball, in Washington.

Ball said the United States is looking for Hanoi's response to an appeal by 17 non-aligned nations for a start on peace talks without prior conditions.

Asked what the United States will do if the Hanoi government officially rejects Johnson's offer, Ball said:

"We will continue what we are doing. We will continue to respond in a measured and appropriate way while continuing to leave the offer on the table. . . .

The chief of the Viet Cong mission to Peking was reported to have turned down the 17-nation appeal.

"No negotiations with the United States imperialists at this moment are entirely useless if they refuse to withdraw

Let Those Pigeons Bill and Coo Pill Would Cut Them to a Few

LONDON (AP)—Alderman Matthew Larmour thinks birth control pills are needed to keep down Britain's blighsoaring pigeon population.

"The pill is the only solution," said Larmour.

Larmour is an alderman at the big fishing town of Grimsby. Like London and scores of other British cities, it has tried all sorts of devices to rid city centres of pigeons.

By the thousands, the pigeons dirty public buildings and statues, interfere with traffic and menace passersby.

"No one could possibly object to the pill being used on pigeons — not even the pigeons" said Larmour.

"The pigeons will not suffer a painful death. They can still mate, but they will not be able to produce more pigeons."

The alderman said he would do some research on the subject and report to the Grimsby city council. He said he wanted to hear particularly from authorities in Berlin and Paris, which also are a pigeon problem.

"It might work," said a spokesman for the Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. "But remember this—it's going to be impossible to give every female pigeon a pill."

Gordon Predicts More Prosperity In White Paper

Appears Budget Will Show Some Tax Cuts

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — An 87-per-cent cut in the federal budget deficit to $83,000,000 for the fiscal year ended March 31 from the previous year's deficit of $619,200,000 was reported today by Finance Minister Gordon.

The huge cut came after a six-year string of dificits running as high as $791,000,000 in 1961-62.

Mr. Gordon's pre-budget white paper tabled in the Commons also said more good times lie ahead for 1965.

It attributed the massive deficit cut to the economy's buoyancy. Budgetary revenues ran to $7,136,000,000, up 14 per cent from 1963-64. Budgetary expenditures increased five per cent to $7,219,000,000.

The gross national product—value of all goods and services produced—rose 8.9 per cent in calendar 1964 to $47,003,000,000, biggest gain since 1956.

It should continue to rise in 1965, the white paper added.

It also predicted that federal expenditures this year will not rise as rapidly as the GNP. This would appear to leave room for some tax cuts.

BUDGET DUE SOON

The white paper is a stage-setter for the finance minister's budget in which he sets tax rates. The budget is expected soon after Easter.

Normally the white paper is a dry-as-dust recounting of past performance. But this year it contained a two-page outlook for the economy in 1965, ending with the words: "The Canadian economy as a whole should move forward to new and higher levels of activity in 1965."

The $83,000,000 budgetary deficit for 1964-65 was the lowest since a deficit of $38,600,000 in 1957-58. In 1956-57 Canada had a surplus of $237,500,000.

When Mr. Gordon presented his budget March 16, 1964, he estimated a deficit of $455,000,000.

Not included in the budgetary figures was the old age security fund, from which old age pensions of $75 a month are paid to everyone 70 and older. In 1964-65 special sales, income

To Present Budget Next Week

OTTAWA (CP)—The 1965 federal budget will be brought down Monday night, April 26, Finance Minister Gordon told the Commons today.

He announced the date after tabling the budget white paper, the report of government financial operations in the 1964-65 fiscal year ended March 31.

It would be "subject to emergencies and barring accidents, of course."

"I'm thinking of the vote Wednesday or Thursday," he added amid laughter. The vote on acceptance of a government motion adopting the throne speech is a confidence issue on which the government could be brought down.

Mr. Gordon last March 22 tabled spending estimates for 1964-65 calling for a record outlay of about $8,200,000,000.

The budget will reveal how he intends to raise the money to pay for it.

LUCKNOW, India (Reuters) — About 70 pilgrims were feared drowned in the Sarja River in Uttar Pradesh State Saturday when railings of a pontoon bridge gave way during a Hindu bathing festival, it was reported here Sunday.

German Ship Capsizes After Fire; Three Dead

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) Arrangements are being made today for a full inquiry into a collision in a bolge of the St. Lawrence River which turned a German freighter into a daytime hell of smoke and flame.

The blow amidships Saturday crippled and eventually capsized the 3,865-ton West German freighter Transatlantic with the probable loss of three lives—the third mate, a mechanic and a passenger.

The 355-ton Dutch freighter Hermes, the other vessel in the collision, received bow damage when the two ships slammed together some 12 miles west of here in Lake St. Peter, a widening of the river.

Twelve of the Transatlantic's 32 crew members were injured.

The crew of the Hermes escaped unharmed and the Dutch vessel, doing a turnabout in course and carrying most of the Transatlantic's injured, made the 80 miles back to Montreal under her own power.

At the time of the collision—in clear weather shortly before 7 a.m. EST—the Transatlantic was inbound for Montreal with general cargo. The Hermes, with a crew of about 30, was travelling toward the Atlantic.

The first victim to be identified was Uwe Krueger, 25-year-old West German third mate of the Transatlantic. The two other men were listed as missing and presumed dead.

Their identities were withheld, but marine sources said the passenger was an Ontario resident returning home after purchasing a valuable race horse in Europe for breeding purposes.

After hours of terror locked in a special deck compartment aboard the blazing ship, the

Pope Thinks World's Peace Can Still Be Preserved

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul blessed the palms, celebrated the solemn Palm Sunday mass, and then told 25,000 Romans and tourists that although the world's peace is sorely menaced it may still be preserved.

By his words and his actions the Pontiff personally led the Roman Catholic world into the observances of Holy Week and toward the hope and triumph of Easter, a week hence.

Although he once again expressed grave concern that the world seems to be straying from the ideal of peace, he expressed faith that mankind's hope for peace may not be in vain.

The Pope reserved his words linking the traditional palm ritual with all branches of Palm Sunday with peace until he had concluded the traditional blessing and distribution of the palms and had celebrated mass.

Then, appearing in his apartment window overlooking St. Peter's Square, where 25,000 persons were assembled under clouded skies, the Pontiff said:

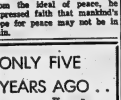
"Today in all the world the Catholic community celebrates the feast of The Redeemer, blessing and waving the fronds of palms and olives which are known to all as symbols of peace.

CONCERNS WORLD

"Again today peace fills our feast day and concerns the world which has always such great need for peace and which feels this blessing of peace so menaced.

"This feast (of Palm Sunday) teaches that peace is a duty . . . an order among men to which all aspire and to which we all must give our contribution with desire, attention and prayer, and for which we must strive with unselfishness, sincerity and love.

"Instead, certain situations place us in doubt whether mankind is any longer able to maintain peace.



"We feel that this blessing (of peace) is compromised that one could say the more the world progresses, the more it goes astray from this ideal.

"But the feast of today teaches not only that peace is a duty, but that it is possible. It is sufficient to desire it and to desire it in Christ. If the gospel becomes the inspirer of life and civilization, we can have peace."

$35,000 Deficit On Operations Says Clerk

TRENTON — The town of Trenton last year had a deficit on operations of $35,000.

This was revealed today by clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry as being due to a number of things—among them a less-than-anticipated response to tax collection billing, and the fact that the sewer rate was instigated in January of this year rather than July of last year. Council has "covered" the deficit in the 1965 budget estimates.

The sewer rate has got off to a poor start, with many water users refusing to pay the extra charge. They are, in fact, "getting away with it," as the utility commission made it clear that while the utilities office bills for the extra charge the commission will take no steps to collect it. "It's up to the town."

Meanwhile, a number of industries have challenged the rate structure, and council has instructed the clerk to meet with them. While the talks are in the offing, the industries aren't paying.

Meanwhile, several references to the town's poor "financial condition" crept into Mr. Larry, Mayor MacDonald and others in charge of the public offices.

The town is in good financial condition, says Mr. Larry. The total debenture debt is within 30 per cent of the total assessment—as laid down by the Department of Municipal Affairs. And this fact, in the opinion of the experts from the department, means the town is operating on good sound footing.

Pellet Guns Illegal for Boys Under 14

Your son under 14 — with a bee-bee gun?

Take it away from him.

Police today issued a strict warning to parents after a minor weekend spree of indiscriminate shooting by youngsters armed with pellet guns.

In one case an 11-year-old boy fired his bee-bee rifle at a girl, aged nine, sending a pellet through her jaw. The young victim required hospital attention.

Today parents were reminded it is illegal for youngsters under 14 to possess the weapons. Otherwise the parents may be charged.

their troops and women from South Viet Nam," Nguyen Minh Phuong told the Peking correspondent of the official Indonesian news agency Antara.

Peking's regime is party newspaper, The People's Daily, said UN Secretary-General U. Thant would not be welcome if he attempts a peace mission to the Chinese capital. It said the United Nations has no right to meddle in a conflict which can be settled only by nations that took part in the 1954 Geneva conference on Indochina.

Instead of "knocking at the wrong door," the paper said, Thant should condemn U.S. actions in Viet Nam and demand that the United States "cease its aggression against South Viet Nam and its bombing of North Viet Nam."

The People's Daily repeated a statement by North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh that peace talks can begin only after the United States pulls its troops out of Viet Nam.

SUPPORT HO CHI MINH

"The Chinese government and people fully support President Ho Chi Minh's statement and, together with the Vietnamese people, will resolutely carry to the end the common struggle to drive the U.S. aggressors out of Viet Nam," it said.

In its attack on the U.S., the Hanoi newspaper Nhan Dan said the "U.S. and its henchmen" in South Viet Nam had, during the last 10 years, "raped tens of thousands of women, including old ladies, children and religious believers, disemboweled, plucked out livers and bile, and buried alive over 5,000 persons."

They had also "herded over 5,000,000 people into 8,000 concentration camps disguised as prosperity zones, resettlement centres or strategic hamlets."

Mantle of Ice In Bay Fast Disappearing

Honeycombed by the action of a strengthening April sun, the winter's mantle of ice in the Bay of Quinte is again about ready to give up the ghost for another season.

Sunday increasing large patches of open water were beginning to show in mid-bay both east of the Bay Bridge and farther up the bay toward Trenton and it appeared that only a stiff wind was needed to break up the ice completely.

Spring flood waters from the upper tributaries of the Moira River are now coursing through the city with the volume of current greatly increased during the past few days.

Routine Calls For Department Over Weekend

Belleville Fire Department had another run of routine calls over the weekend. A lunchtime call Saturday took the firemen to an East Bridge St. residence to deal with an overheated electric motor in the basement, and at 3.00 p.m. Sunday they killed another grass fire east of the Plaza.

Earlier, they investigated burning rubber at car dealer's lot and at 6.45 p.m. an overheated stove pipe at a service station.

The department also received a call to West Moira Street to deal with a defective furnace.

Accident Free Transport, Truck Drivers Get Pins

Close to 100 accident free truck and transport drivers working for Quinte district firms were honored Saturday night by the Transport Safety Association of Ontario when with their wives they were guests at a dinner appreciation banquet at the Masonic Temple.

Safe driving pins, ranging from one to 28 years, were presented by Belleville district Ontario Provincial Police Inspector A. McDougall, and Belleville Police Chief, J. B. McLauchlan.

Recognition for the longest period of accident free driving went to Jack Henderson, driver for Moira Schuster Coal at Belleville for 28 years. One woman driver, Victoria Jones, driver of a "packing truck" came in for a two-year pin.

Pins for Quinte area takes in from Cobourg to Belleville. Prince Edward county and north to Campbellford and Actinolite.

WELCOME EXTENDED

Mayor Jack R. Ellis brought greetings and welcomed visiting drivers to the city. Chairman for the driver appreciation banquet was T.S.A.O. field representative for the "western" section of the Eastern Ontario District between Toronto and Trenton.

Members of the Plainfield United Church Women and Plainfield Women's Institute catered to the banquet.

Gina Shows Up In Beverly Rocks for Show

The Italian actress' jewelry was seized from her hotel suite Friday by California tax men who said she owes more than $50,000 in state taxes.

"I feel naked," was her response to being stripped of the gems.

Hope, hearing of her plight, called Beverly Hills jeweler Marvin Hime, who lent Miss Lollobrigida about $750,000 in jewels Sunday "to bolster her morale" while she taped a Bob Hope television show.

The California franchise tax board said Miss Lollobrigida's debt dates from 1959 when she made a film here with Frank Sinatra.

TRIED TO COLLECT

Officials said they have tried many times to collect the money, and in 1964 filed liens against any personal property she might have in California. The jewels were seized under the lien, they said.

Miss Lollobrigida commented: "Even the Mafia gives at least one warning."

She said she didn't know she owed any California taxes.

She said she offered, after the jewels were seized, to pay the back taxes by cheque, but that the agents wouldn't accept it until her Swiss bank approved the cheque. By the time she got the call through to her bank, she said, it was past closing hours and "they wasn't even a scrubwoman there to answer the phone."

"What is so incredible to me," she added, "is that the tax people wouldn't believe I have assets."

Gross National Product Up 8.9 P. C. Over Last Year

OTTAWA (CP)—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics announced today the gross national product—total value of all goods and services produced in Canada—rose 8.9 per cent last year to $47,003,000,000.

It was the largest annual advance since 1956.

The bureau said the increase was 6.5 per cent in terms of constant dollars, and prices were almost 2.5 per cent higher.

The pace of expansion was uneven through the year, but the expansion was broadly based with all components contributing to the total gain.

There was an upsurge in the first quarter of the year, sparked by the government's winter house-building incentive program, accelerated purchase of some capital goods in anticipation of higher sales taxes, and large wheat sales to Russia. The pace of expansion was more moderate during the rest of the year.

The strongest forward impetus came from the investment sector. A wide range of industries made major new expenditures on plant and equipment, and housing construction set records.

"Consumer markets were buoyant," the bureau said. "Spending rose almost 7.5 per cent, one of the largest gains in recent years. Sales of hard goods durables was unusually strong, although the rate of increase in sales of cars was not as high as in the two previous years."

There was an increase of nearly nine per cent in labor income, the largest rise since 1956. Corporation profits were up nearly 15 per cent.

The bureau said the international climate favored the expansion of trade despite a slowing down in the rate of growth of some overseas countries.

Exports of goods and services were up 15 per cent, while imports rose 13 per cent. There was a further narrowing of the deficit on current international transactions.

Government purchases of goods and services were appreciably higher, with an increase of close to 12 per cent in the provincial and municipal government sectors.

PRICES ON RISE

The bureau said prices of consumer goods and services rose 1.5 per cent both in 1963 and 1964. Prices of investment goods, however, were affected by progressive implementation of the federal sales tax on production machinery and building materials, rising 2.6 per cent in 1963 and 3.6 per cent in 1964.

Personal disposable income for 1964 was $31,612,000,000, up 5.8 per cent from 1963. Accrued farm income for 1964 was $1,472,000,000, down 14.7 per cent from the previous year.

Net personal saving in 1964 was $2,181,000,000 compared with $2,468,000,000 in 1963.

Smallwood and Nixon Take Jaunt to Moscow

MOSCOW (CP) — Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland and former United States vice - president Richard Nixon, rubber - necked around Moscow during the weekend and their adventures included an unsuccessful midnight prowl in search of former Soviet premier Khrushchev and an argument between Nixon and Nikolai Selyenow, vice - rector of Moscow University.

Smallwood, 65, reported the Khrushchev search after his arrival back in London with Nixon, whom he accompanied on a business trip to Helsinki and a tourist jaunt to Moscow. Nixon has been engaged as lawyer for the establishment of a $50,000,000 pulp and paper mill on Newfoundland's east coast.

Nixon and Smallwood were in Finland negotiating for the mill prior to the holiday trip to Moscow.

The party arrived here Saturday morning from Helsinki after concluding an agreement with a Finnish company for construction of the mill.

Bill McIntosh, electrician, got a Scotia Plan Loan —$1300—in 45 minutes.

Bill McIntosh was worried. He'd had a lot of home expenses he hadn't figured on. He needed quite a bit of money—and he needed it quickly.

Bill decided to take his money problems to his bank—The Bank of Nova Scotia. After talking to the manager about the many new things he had to buy for his new home Bill was asked a few quick questions about his job, income and how much money he needed.

In 45 minutes Bill McIntosh knew he would have the money he needed to pay all his home bills.

This is an average example of speedy Scotiabank service. Of course this actual customer was not named Bill McIntosh and the speed of the loan depends upon individual circumstances. But—there are more and more people with all kinds of names and jobs coming to The Bank of Nova Scotia to have their money problems solved—quickly. Why don't you?

A Scotia Plan Loan is one of the best—most practical ways for you to consolidate you debts. Your loan is life-insured at no extra cost. You get speedy service. You get the other advantage of dealing with the interested Scotiabank people. So talk over your money problem—whatever it is—debt consolidation—a new car—with the people at your nearest Scotiabranch. They're ready and waiting to help you. How much money do you need?

British Inventiveness

The death in London of Sir Robert Henry Davis, leading authority on submarines and deep sea diving—the Davis escape hatch for submarine crews was one of his ideas—is a reminder of the traditional inventiveness of the people of Britain.

Consider the great surge of ideas that stemmed from the industrial revolution of the 18th and 19th centuries—and the inventions of more recent times. The British invented the jet engine and the first jet planes, the ejector seat escape system for pilots of jet fighters and the angled deck which facilitates landing procedures on aircraft carriers.

Now it is rumored the British may have to get out of the aircraft industry, because of mounting costs and inability to compete with the kind of resources at the command of the United States. There is even talk of Britain buying most of its aircraft from the Americans. Meanwhile, the Anglo-French "Concorde" project—the plane with which British and France together were hoping to lead the world in the supersonic field—is in jeopardy.

It is sad to think that Britain may no longer produce successors to such brilliant aircraft as the Comet, the world's first commercial jet, the Viscount (first turbo-prop), its successor, the Vanguard, which is used by Air Canada, the Britannia, flown by Canadian Pacific, and the new Trident.

But British skills and inventiveness are not on the wane. Far from it—as a current story from London proves. Inventor Kenneth Dobson has perfected an "electronic detective" weighing only 80 pounds which he claims will save hundreds of lives that otherwise would be lost in air crashes.

Dobson says his Midas flight recorder can discover mechanical and structural defects before trouble develops. It can make 270 simultaneous magnetic tape records of an aircraft's performance.

Orders for the recorder have been received from the United States and the Soviet Union. The U.S. Air Force has placed an $1,500,000 order for the equipping of its entire fleet of Globemaster transports and the Russians have bought six for use in their giant Ilyushin jet airliners.

Because of the Midas, Britain still leads the United States in some areas. For instance, modifications carried out to a Midas-equipped Viscount 701 after it had crashed in a test flight will enable first deliveries of the rear-engined jet to be made more than a year ahead of its U.S. rival, the DC-9.

Rideau Canal Plan

Land development in the Rideau canal and Jakeland region is increasing at "such an alarming rate" that many of the lakes could be ringed by cottages in five years.

This is the view of Ray Muckleston, a Brockville engineer and president of the Eastern Ontario Development Association. Mr. Muckleston has prepared a report for the EODA in which he recommends the curtailment of cottage building in a wilderness and recreational area which he says should be preserved in Leeds, Frontenac and Lanark counties.

Mr. Muckleston envisages 305 square miles of national park in the Rideau. He suggests the government should acquire land adjacent to the canal system in order that the rugged aspects of the area be preserved. The canal itself would be maintained and modernized where necessary.

The plan has much to commend it. Uncontrolled cottage development in this one of Canada's most beautiful areas of virgin terrain —is undesirable. Placed under control of the government, which would be responsible for its ordered development, the region could be preserved for this and future generations of Canadians.

The wilderness area stretches from Seeley's Bay and Brewers Mills in the south to Bolingbroke in the north, skirting the farming sections around the villages of Newboro and Westport.

This world affords little enough peace or privacy and it is regions like the Rideau that compensate for the increasing wear and tear of everyday life. Left in its virgin state, the Rideau will rival Algonquin and Quetico.

It is amazing how historians manage to ignore the subjects of hunger and disease altogether, yet they were the fundamental facts of life for most people until almost within living memory.—W. G. Hoskins, Reader in Economic History in the University of Oxford.

Afraid of Cancer? Then Don't Delay That Checkup

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

It seems as though several times a day, I read another letter from someone who recites a combination of symptoms and then asks, "Could it be cancer?"

Often the condition is such that I can surmise that it most certainly is not cancer. Again, the only possible conclusion is that it most likely is cancer.

In still others, perhaps the majority of cases, all I can say is that it might or might not be, but some further facts and tests will give the answer.

The big mystery is this: Why when people have uncomfortable or suspicious symptoms, do they waste time asking, "Could it be cancer?"

If it really is cancer, every day of delay makes things worse and in time the day will come when which marks the dividing line between being able to cure that cancer, and not being able to.

If it isn't cancer, then why hang back and worry and perhaps suffer, instead of getting treatment?

Some of my friends engaged in battling cancer (in the American Cancer Society) estimate that 60,000 more American lives could be saved this year if everybody observed the simple and almost routine steps to discover cancer sooner instead of later.

An annual checkup (including the "Pap test" for women) will disclose hundreds of cases so early that the patient himself will not have noticed any symptoms. Found that early, cancer has a high degree of curability.

If, in addition, everyone would go to his doctor at once (instead of asking, "Could it be cancer?") when a suspicious symptom develops, still other thousands of cures would be possible.

The best chance of cure exists when the cancer is just starting "cancer in situ," it is called. The next best chance is when the cancer, although growing, is still localized — still confined within the organ in which it originated. Hope of cure is still high.

But when it has spread beyond the original organ, and there is what we call "regional involvement," chances are slimmer even though sometimes even then a cure is still possible depending, of course, on the extent of the spread.

Here are some figures on the difference in cure rate between localized cancers and those with regional involvement:

Stomach: 90 percent if localized; 75 after regional involvement.

Breast: 82 percent when localized; 47 after involvement.

Uterus: 81 percent when localized; 46 after involvement.

Colon and rectum: 68 percent when localized; 34 after involvement.

Prostate: 50 percent when localized; 30 after involvement.

Lung: 21 when localized; 5 after involvement.

Can there be any more convincing evidence that waiting, worrying and asking, "Could it be cancer?" is inviting disaster?

Dear Dr. Molner: What can be done to soften lumpity? I have noticed that mine have become very brittle when I cut them, and the nails of the big toes have started to grow inward toward the flesh even though I cut them straight across without curving the corners. Will gelatin be of any help? I soak my feet often in hot water but that doesn't seem to help. — Mrs. J. S.

Gelatin won't help and, in fact, nothing can be done to prevent the natural tendency of nails to become harder with age. The curving of the nails could be a result of narrow-toed or short shoes. I'd have a podiatrist check and treat this.

Strictly Personal

Frequently Less Said The Better

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Nobody can make a judgment on a dispute until he has heard both sides of the story; this is part of our received wisdom. But while it is hard to decide if one person is right without hearing the other, it is often easy to decide one person is wrong without hearing the other.

There are people who convict themselves out of their own mouths. I was sitting in a restaurant not long ago, in a booth next to two young women. One of them was telling the other about the break-up of her marriage and the current divorce proceedings.

The longer she talked, the more she convinced me that she was wrong. And yet everything she said was devoted to proving her husband wrong. She recited all his sins of omission and commission; she justified whatever she had done or not done; she was utterly blameless, in her own eyes.

Her friend listened, at first, sympathetically; then, as the tale was spun in finer detail, I could tell that the friend herself was having a hard time in restraining her comments. She, too could tell that the other woman was distorting and falsifying the picture with great unconscious malice.

At one point, she interjected, "But that seems reasonable to me," in speaking of the husband's conduct. But the other broke off her attention and resumed relating her grievances and criticisms.

A Frenchman once wrote that the things we say about other people reveal more about us, than they do about them. This woman was the embodiment of that observation: without knowing it, she had painted a lurid, and unflattering, portrait of her own character, and she could only feel sorry for the husband.

Seasoned lawyers know that one of the most damaging evidence against a defendant comes from his own lips; that a witness who is allowed to testify late his feelings will do more harm to his own cause than to that of his antagonist. It is hard to prove ourselves right; it is easy to show ourselves wrong.

And especially in the area of personal relationships. Here, we are at our most vulnerable, because under stress we tend to regress to infantile reactions. Our greed or envy or frustration, long buried, return in virulent form to discolor the "true picture" we think we are painting of another person in current conflict with us.

It is when we try to justify ourselves that our conduct seems most unjustifiable; it is when we blame that we seem most blameworthy; it is when we attack in anger and revenge that we disclose our basest motives. If that woman had told

Study Stresses in Ships

Christine Science Monitor

Where are the weak spots, and therefore the vulnerable spots—of a big ship battling its way through a big storm?

After centuries of building ships of both wood and steel, shipbuilders and ship operators still don't fully know. But they are still trying to find out.

And they are trying the answers to these questions will enable them to build stronger, safer, and more profitable and efficient ships.

Such study is being carried out by both United States and Canadian ship operators on the Great Lakes.

Although salt water sailors sniff at the Great Lakes as "small beer," the inland seas are some of the world's busiest waterways. They also have some of the world's most violent storms.

The lakes' fresh water, shallowness, and confined space make operating waterways cause different strains and stresses on ships than ocean going ships undergo.

One of the largest United States flag ships on the lakes has been equipped with scientific apparatus to study the stresses produced on a ship in a storm. The inland Steel Co.'s Edward L. Ryerson, 730 feet long and 78 feet wide and capable of carrying 37,565 tons per trip.

Beginning in April a two-year study will be carried out. It will cost $140,000.

Three big Canadian ships, the Seaway Queen, Argo Bruton Miner of Upper Lakes Shipping Ltd., and the Saguenay of the Canada Steamship Lines, also have been similarly equipped.

The Canadian program is expected to cost double that of the United States research.

The four ships are expected to give the lake shipbuilders and operators a great deal of information. It is hoped that on the basis of this knowledge the shipbuilders will be able to build hundreds of tons off the weight of a new ship thus reducing initial cost and at the same time increasing cargo capacity and thus earnings of the ships.

• • •

The four ships involved do somewhat different types of work on the lakes.

The Ryerson, for example, hauls mainly iron ore from Lake Superior ports to inland Steel's huge steel plants at Indiana Harbor, Ind., at the lower end of Lake Michigan.

The Seaway Queen, 670 feet long and 78 feet wide and carrying nearly 34,000 tons a trip, usually hauls grain from Lake Superior ports through the Welland Canal and St. Lawrence Seaway to St. Lawrence River ports.

It then returns iron ore from lower St. Lawrence ports to the Great Lakes. The Saguenay does a similar job; and the Argo Bruton, Miner, a specially designed 670-footer, does a completely different job.

Its usual cargo is coal and it will cost $140,000.

Three big Canadian ships, the Seaway Queen, Argo Bruton Miner of Upper Lakes Shipping Ltd., and the Saguenay of the Canada Steamship Lines, have been similarly equipped.

Decimal Nine Nonsense

Stratford Beacon-Herald

Nobody ever sells an automobile for $3,000. The price has to be stated, according to the unwritten rules of the game, as $2,980, or $2,975.

A local store is advertising that it has towels on sale yesterday and today. For all practical purposes the prices are two dollars, one dollar, and a half a dollar, for bath towels, hand towels and face cloths, respectively. That's not what the advertising says though. The prices are $1.98, 98 cents, and 49 cents. Few merchants are brave enough to buck the conventional belief that one dollar-and-something sounds like much less than two dollars.

The unwritten law confers some benefit when we buy an automobile. It is good for the buyers to have $5, or $25, in change from three thousand-dollar bills.

In the case of the bath towel, the salvage from a two-dollar bill is of some value. It is enough to soothe the hungry wheeling-dealer for two-fifths of an hour.

We wonder, though, who is being fooled by the gasoline stations advertising, as they regularly do, such prices as 39.9 cents a gallon.

In a recent gasoline price war which flared and died in the Toronto area, each chain of service stations dropped its price suddenly to 31.9.

The system reacted by cutting prices the next day, to 30.9.

After a couple of days of this price-fighting, one chain of stations went back up to 40.9, whereupon the opposition went all the way back up to 41.9.

The thing that entertains us is that neither of the two oil companies could break loose from the fixed mental habit of quoting prices with a decimal nine ending.

Most people are bright enough to figure out for themselves how much money is saved by buying four gallons of gasoline at 39.9, as compared with paying 40 cents a galoln for it. The saving is exactly nothing at all. Four gallons of gasoline at 39.9 cost you $1.60. If you buy 10 gallons in one purchase, you can save the grand total of one cent.

Only a man with a very big automobile and a very empty tank would buy enough at a time to save as much as two cents.

Show Japan Log-rolling

Victoria Times

Their growing number of fans in Greater Victoria will note with satisfaction that the Sooke brothers, Jubilee and Ardiel Wickheim, are being sent to Japan to demonstrate their sport, or art, as it might well be called.

Between them the two have established a sort of monopoly on the world's log birling championship — that merry event in which agile opponents spin a floating log until one is thrown off into the water. The trip has been arranged by the federal department of trade and commerce and will make it possible for visitors to the Canadian Pavilion in the Japanese International Trade Fair to see a sport exclusive to the North American continent.

Once more the federal department has shown imagination in producing a first - class Canadian attraction. Local tourist groups should capitalize on the idea with a campaign to trade fair patrons that they can see it all over again by coming to the annual All - Sooke Day.

Thieves Loot 400 Safety Deposit Boxes

MONTREAL (CP) — Thieves looted 400 safety deposit boxes at a northwest-end bank during the weekend and escaped with what appeared to be a major haul.

Police at the scene told reporters there was no way of estimating the total value of the loot immediately. One unidentified high-ranking officer was quoted as saying:

"It looks like a big one. It could be a $1,000,000 job."

Shah of Iran Escapes Bullets Of Assassin

TEHRAN (AP)—The government is investigating whether an attempt to assassinate Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi was part of a conspiracy. Iran's ruler escaped unhurt.

A soldier, who fired about 50 tommy-gun rounds at the Shah, and two bodyguards who shot back were killed in the attempt Saturday. The one-minute gunfight took place at the entrance to the Marble Palace as the Shah was entering it. He has an office inside.

A high government source said an investigation was under way to determine whether a conspiracy was involved or whether it was a case of a man running amok.

The soldier was a conscript in the Imperial Guard. Reliable sources said he started shooting as the 45-year-old Shah stepped out of his car.

The ruler's bodyguards hurried him into the building. The soldier charged toward the entrance, firing as he went. He fatally wounded the two bodyguards but they shot him down before they died.

Premier Hassan Ali Mansour was assassinated by a Moslem fanatic Jan. 21. The Shah was wounded in a Communist assassination plot in 1947.

race horse was removed safely by a small floating crane and taken ashore.

With two exceptions, injuries suffered by Transatlantic crew were minor.

Raymond Vallee, the river pilot aboard the Transatlantic, said Sunday the Hermes was about 700 feet from the Transatlantic and seemed to be "making a curve" on her downriver voyage when she suddenly turned in toward the side of the Transatlantic.

"In a matter of seconds there seemed to be an explosion as she hit us and then there was fire and smoke everywhere," he said.

Officers of the Hermes were not available for comment.

Vallee said the victims were in their cabins on the port side.

"The third mate must have been wrenched from his cabin because he was found in flames on the forecastle of the Hermes," he said.

The collision triggered a day-long drama and played havoc with normal shipping operations.

After the Transatlantic capsized, traffic was halted completely because the main mast was reported jutting into the main part of the channel. By late Sunday morning, however, the Canadian Coast Guard tender Montmagny had pinpointed the danger area with buoys and operations resumed.

When the ships crashed, doctors and police went to the scene from Trois Rivieres aboard the federal icebreaker Saurel.

Capt. Jean-Paul Michaud of the Saurel said that, as he passed the Transatlantic, "the whole centre of the ship" was in flames.

Planes and helicopters hovered overhead as black and white smoke billowed up from the burning Transatlantic. Small boats could not be launched from the nearest points on shore because ice still extends some distance into the water from the land.

The Hermes stood by the blazing Transatlantic for a time, pouring water on the flames. But gradually the German vessel drifted away and the Hermes took on 16 more injured men and Vallee and headed for Montreal.

Hamburg was the Transatlantic's home port. The freighter left Saint John, N.B., April 6 for Montreal after discharging cargo there and at Halifax.

Sukarno Says Economy in Bad Shape

By ANTOINE YARED

JAKARTA (AP) — President Sukarno told Indonesia Sunday its economy is in bad shape because of corruption and mismanagement in high government circles. He called for drastic reforms.

His speech, broadcast throughout Indonesia, was made to the Peoples Consultative Congress, the nation's highest legislative body, meeting in Bandung, West Java.

For the first time he admitted the government's eight-year plan of development, launched in 1961, is a total failure.

He called on the congress to solve Indonesia's food and clothing problems, to increase production of commodities and to "solve the question of foreign capital so as to make us free in the field of economy."

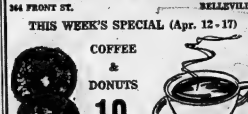
Without identifying anyone, Sukarno said there are men in Indonesia "deliberately corrupt and especially corrupted leaders."

"They pretend to struggle for the people but actually they work for their own friends, their own clique. They are in fact betraying the message of the suffering of the people."

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters) Malaysia's Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman made a direct peace appeal Sunday by radio to Indonesian people.

He said his country was ready to accept Afro-Asian proposition in the dispute, which has developed into an undeclared border war between Malaysia and Indonesia.

In an address marking the Moslem feast of Hari Raya Haji Rahman said that as people of the same race, the same culture and the same religion "we should be working together and not fighting one another."



Malaysia is made up of the former British territories of Malaya, Singapore, Sarawak and Sabah (North Borneo).

Susanna's Family Fare

THERE'S ALWAYS A WAY

Dear Susanna: Stretch pants or slacks are my favorite "at home" costume but I don't care for the look of ankle socks with them. Nor do I enjoy the feel of bare feet in my shoes — and certainly I don't want to wear stockings and girdle.

I took care of the entire situation nicely by cutting off old nylon stockings a few inches above the ankle, folding over the top part to make a cuff, and stitching in a piece of wide elastic so that it fit snugly around my leg. — "Lean Jean"

As long as you're not blue, Jean! — SUSANNA

DIVINE DESIGN

Dear Susanna: A truly elegant gift wrapping can be made by using saran wrap and a little ingenuity.

If a member of your family suddenly presents you with an 11th hour gift to wrap, and you discover that someone has used the last sheet of fancy paper, don't get hysterical, just fish in the kitchen drawer for a clear smooth piece of saran.

Either wrap a little tissue paper around the article of any kind the stores use for packing dresses and coats is fine) or place it in a box. Next, make a design on top such as a circle or star by using paper covered candles, bright birthday candles, plastic flowers or any suitable decorations. Build the design a little higher in the centre if possible and hold the pieces in place with a few dabs of scotch tape or glue. Lay a single layer of saran wrap over the top and fasten it underneath. If you feel a little extravagant, go all out and tie it with a ribbon or add a fluffy bow. — Mrs. Z. Scholtz

We used a striped CAKE box and three candles in rose bud holders with a bow in the middle and it all turned out "swell-eleganly!" — SUSANNA

RNAO Holds Annual Meet At Peterboro

The annual dinner meeting of the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario, District, 6, was held at Roland's Steak House, Peterborough, April 7, 1965. The president, Miss Marion Campbell presided, with over 200 members present.

An interpretation of the proposed Nurses' Collective Bargaining Act was presented by Miss Joan Thorpe, Employment Relations Director of the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario and Miss Audrey Gilmer, assistant executive secretary of the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario.

The speakers were introduced by Mrs. Veronica Duffy, president of Kawartha Chapter. The act was examined and explained clause by clause. The many questions asked by members were answered in a most comprehensive manner. Many non-member registered nurses joined the meeting for this the last of a series of interpretive sessions on collective bargaining held across the province.

ACT PROVISIONS

The Act was presented to Health Minister Matthew B. Dymond by the R.N.A.O. in February and would provide for recognition of the R.N.A.O. as the collective bargaining agent when more than 50 per cent full time registered nurses employed by one employer so request. It provides for written contracts and separate bargaining for managerial and non-managerial nurses. A grievance procedure will be established and the Act provides for final settlement. Salaries and other economic matters will be determined by agreement rather than by the employer alone. Any on-going breaks of communication with employers would be provided by the Act. Nowhere in this Act is any time consumed to support a collective bargaining program. Processes of conciliation and arbitration provide for the settlement of disputes which arise when a contract is being negotiated.

Following the interpretive session a short business meeting was held at which time a resolution concerning proposed personnel policies for Public Health Nurses was presented. The meeting directed the executive to submit this resolution to the Board of Directors of the R.N.A.O.

Ann Landers

It Is Possible for Twins To Have Different Fathers

DEAR ANN LANDERS — As a physician I was interested in your reply to the woman who wrote that she had given birth to twins. Her blood husband decided that the fair-haired twin was his but that the black-haired twin was fathered by someone else.

ANN LANDERS

The distraught woman pleaded with you to tell her husband it is not possible for twins to have different fathers. She said she had searched in the library for proof of her innocence but was unable to understand the medical language.

You said it was indeed possible for twins to be fathered by separate males, but that such occurrences were extraordinarily rare. After having said it was possible — I'm sure your suggestion that her husband "shut his foolish mouth" meant nothing.

I would like to caution you against making statements which have no basis in fact. There is no scientific evidence that a woman who is pregnant can be impregnated. When it comes to matters involving a field about which you know nothing, Ann Landers, why don't you shut your foolish mouth? — RICHMOND, VA. M.D.

DEAR M.D. FROM VA. — Thank you for your letter. If I attempted to rely on my own knowledge for the replies which appear in this column I would not have been writing for nearly ten years. I am in touch with experts in many fields and these experts are inordinately generous in providing me with information.

You are wrong when you say there is no scientific evidence that a woman who is pregnant can be impregnated a second time. Dr. Luigi Gedda published a book in 1961 entitled "Twins in Science and History," which reported the birth of bi-racial twins in 1909. These twins could not possibly have been fathered by the same male. Another case reported in the same book described a twin birth in 1947. The babies were of different blood groups. The woman's husband fathered the female twin and her lover fathered the male twin, by her own admission.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — We have a card club that meets every Tuesday. One woman in the club always serves milk instead of cream with the coffee. Several of us have discussed this and we think it is pretty cheap.

Would you say, "Please pass the cream" or "Please pass the milk?" We'd like to be sure I know she is not putting anything over. Thank you very much. — AWARE.

* * *

DEAR AWARE — Now that's what I call an earth-shattering problem. Maybe the hostess is considerate and not cheap at all. Most women would be better off if they skipped the cream — as well as the fudge cake.

Why don't you dames say, "Please pass the pitcher," and let it go at that?

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — That crybaby complaint from "Outgrown Wife" prompts my first letter to a newspaper. The woman worked to put her husband through college. Now he is an egghead and she is a knucklehead. She feels out of place with his friends and thinks he is ashamed of her. Maybe he is.

I've listened to this jazz from my own sister for years and I'm sick of it. Hasn't "Outgrown Wife" ever heard of extension classes and correspondence courses — not to mention libraries.

Anyone who wants an education can get it. A wife who sits around feeling sorry for herself because her husband is better informed than she would rather complain than do something about it. — SAID IT AND I'M GLAD.

DEAR GLAD — I'm glad, too. That's precisely what I told her. But reading it once more won't hurt her — or anyone else.

SIDNEY JUNIOR FARMERS

The April meeting of Sidney Junior Farmers was held in the form of a bowling party, when Sidney members were hosts to the Rawdon and Madoc clubs.

After an enjoyable game at the Plaza Bowling Lanes, approximately 30 members gathered at Aiken's hall for dancing and a special lunch consisting of spaghetti and meatballs.

Church Groups

PARKDALE L.M.P.F.

The Ladies' Missionary Prayer Fellowship of Parkdale Baptist Church met at the home of Mrs. B. Foster in Canniffon for their April meeting.

Mrs. S. Mulligan read a letter from the Greenslades, missionaries in Peru, in which they told of having received the portable church needed for so long.

It was announced that the May meeting would be in the form of a rally to be held in Parkdale Baptist Church. The ladies from other churches of the Quinte Association of Fellowship Baptist Churches will be gathering with members for this meeting, to be held on May 6th. The special speaker will be Mrs. Johnstone of the World Radio Missionary Fellowship in Ecuador. All interested ladies are invited to attend this meeting.

Miss White and Miss Dougan of the Faith Mission, who have been holding children's meetings in many of the churches of Belleville and this area, were in charge of the devotional. Miss White spoke on the "five smooth stones" David chose when he went out to slay the Philistine giant. Miss Dougan favored with a solo, with Mrs. Foster at the piano.

A time of fellowship with refreshments followed.

DUTCH VEAL CASSEROLE

I got the idea from a Dutch girl - Joanne Van Der Toorn. She edits a news letter for the Information Section of the Royal Netherlands Embassy in Ottawa.

As a recipe for Kalfsgehakt Schotel - Casserole of Veal Patties - given in the March 11th issue I adapted me and I tried it and it lived up to its promise and more - it was wonderful. And if you want a dish for a buffet meat that will give you an undeniable reputation as a good cook, double or triple the following recipe and serve it to 12 or 15 people. For this purpose you could make the veal patties smaller.

On Friday night we served it to four for dinner, but it was adequate for five.

MONDAY
Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

Corned Beef Hash; Hot Chili Sauce; Broccoli; Whole Wheat Rolls; Tossed Cress; Butter Tarts; Cheddar Cheese; Coffee.

DUTCH VEAL PATTIES CASSEROLE (Kalfsgehakt Schotel — thanks to Royal Netherlands Embassy):

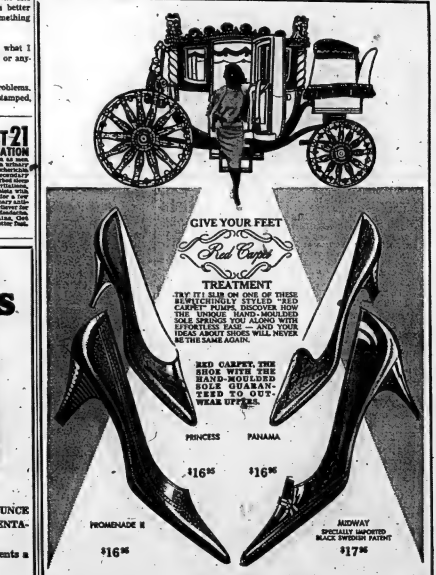
1¼ lbs. ground veal (shank or shoulder); 2 eggs, ½ cup fine bread or cracker crumbs, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, ¼ to ½ lb. mushrooms, 1 large onion, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 can undiluted cream of mushroom soup (or 1½ cups medium white sauce), ½ cup grated Cheddar cheese, ¼ cup Romano (or use ½ cup Dutch Edam-cheese).

Mix together well the veal, eggs, crumbs and seasonings. Shape into 8 or 10 slightly flattened balls. Place in a buttered baking dish which may be covered to the table later. Scrub and slice mushrooms. Peel and slice onion and gently sauté both in a frying pan in the butter until limp but not brown at all. Distribute evenly over meat balls in baking dish. Pour undiluted mushroom soup (or white sauce) all over top, sprinkle mixed grated Cheddar and Romano cheese or grated Dutch Edam cheese over top and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour, when cheese will be melted and looking nice and golden.

Notes: 1) If you want to triple this recipe for buffet party for 12 to 15 people (and I highly recommend this idea) the amounts I would be: 4½ lbs. ground veal, 6 eggs, 1½ cups bread or cracker crumbs, 1½ teaspoons salt, ¾ teaspoon pepper, ¾ teaspoon nutmeg, ¾ to 1 lb. mushrooms, 3 large onions, 9 tablespoons butter, 3 cans undiluted cream of mushroom soup (or 4½ cups medium white sauce), 2¼ cups grated cheese (use some Romano if possible). Prepare and bake as above, using 3 medium-size casseroles. Serve piping hot, but protect your polished dining room table with thick pads or tiles or trivets.

I suggest that you serve thick slices of crusty French bread with this.

Friends Hold Bridal Shower



FRANKFORD — The ladies of Frankford Full Gospel Tabernacle gathered at the home of Mrs. Gerald Curry following C.A. service to honor Miss Carolyn Reichert a bride-to-be in May.

Carolyn was seated-in the guest chair under pink and white streamers and a white wedding bell, when she was presented with many gifts.

Mrs. Charlie Wright placed a box of pompoms, bows and ribbons on the guest and pictures were taken.

Grace was given by Mrs. F. Spring and refreshments were served by hostesses: Mrs. Gerald Curry and Miss Sandra Purvis and assistants. A time of fellowship was enjoyed.

Successful Living

Going With Married Man, Girl, 16, Heads for Trouble

DEAR DORIS — I am 18. Just recently I started going with a man 32. He told me last night he was married. But that he met it when he said he loved me. He told me he had to get married and that he and his wife don't get along and never did. He's got a daughter one year old.

If his wife finds out he's going with me can he lose the baby? And is there any way he could divorce his wife and get custody of the baby? Can my folks get him into trouble for going out with me?

For you see I love him very much and the baby also. — C.C.H.

DORIS CLARE

DEAR C.C.H. — He could lose his baby, his wife, his home and his reputation. Judges are not inclined to award custody to the guilty party in a suit for divorce.

Not only can your folks get him into trouble, but he can get you into trouble — which is more to the point.

DEAR DORIS — Is there any exemption allowed on last illness and funeral expenses of a dependent? This woman of 35 was ill for years and her father spent a great deal on medical treatments for her in the months before she died last year, as well as the cost of her funeral. — A FRIEND.

DEAR FRIEND — Nothing apart from the regular claim for medical expenses for a dependent, which applies for any amount in excess of three percent of the net income. No mention of funeral expenses.

DEAR DORIS — If I am invited to a neighbor's place for dinner should I take a sociable drink or say no? And the same thing goes for me. If anybody comes and visits me should I give them a drink to be sociable? — MRS. M. F.

DEAR MRS. M. F. — Let your conscience — and however your feel about alcoholic beverages — be your guide. If you'd rather not have alcohol, you can still take a sociable drink of lemonade.

About liquor at home, what does the other half say? If you and he decide to serve alcoholic beverages, put your guests at ease by offering a choice: orange juice, or pop, or tomato juice, if they'd prefer it.

Confidential to MARY M. — I will pass on what you have said to "Desperate." I feel we have covered this subject sufficiently in the column.

Canadians May Be Getting Too Much Vitamin D

OTTAWA (CP) — It is possible for Canadians to get too much vitamin D in their food, says a doctor with the federal food and drug directorate.

Dr. A. B. Morrison of the directorate's research laboratories writes in the current edition of the Consumers Association of Canada magazine Canadian Consumer:

"Relatively little excess vitamin D is needed to produce toxic symptoms, particularly in children. Infants and growing children require 400 international units of vitamin D daily.

"It has been reported, however, that approximately 2,000 international units a day may retard growth in infants. A survey taken recently indicated it is quite possible to take in as much as 4,000 international units daily by consuming a variety of foods containing added vitamin D. This obviously is most undesirable."

Dr. Morrison says that although vitamin D is required by infants and children and by women during pregnancy and lactation, "indiscriminate and uncontrolled additions of vitamin D to foods may constitute a hazard to health."

There appeared to be no harm in taking large amounts of the water-soluble vitamins—vitamin C (ascorbic acid) and the B vitamins thiamin, riboflavin, niacin and pyridoxine.

"Toxic symptoms from excess vitamin A have been reported, but the amount necessary to poison an individual is much higher than likely to be found in any foods."

Federal food and drug regulations permit addition of vitamins for nutritional purposes but ban additions that have no nutritional merit.

and corporation profits taxes going into this fund amounted to $953,000,000, exceeding payments of $889,000,000 by $64,000,000.

In 1963-64 the old age security fund operated at a deficit of $58,000,000. The excess of receipts over payments last year reduced the outstanding temporary loans made to the fund by the treasury to $36,000,000 at March 31, 1965.

BALANCED BUDGET NEARS

Combining budgetary income and expenditures with the old age security fund, the budgetary deficit of $83,000,000 was reduced to a nominal figure of $19,000,000. This marked a giant stride towards a balanced budget.

The three big increases in revenues were in the taxes most influenced by economic good times:

—Sales tax revenues rose 28.1 per cent to an estimated $1,193,000,000.

—Corporation tax income climbed 19.9 per cent to $1,510,000,000.

—Personal income taxes, the biggest single revenue producer in federal accounts, went up per cent to $2,108,000,000.

On the expenditure side, defence spending was down 8.2 per cent to $1,581,000,000—still 21.9 per cent of the total spending tab.

Finance department expenditures, which include public debt charges, subsidies to the provinces and the government's contribution to civil service pensions, amounted to $1,574,000,000, up 11.9 per cent for the year. This represented 23.8 per cent of budgetary expenditures.

Health and welfare department outlays—including family and youth allowances and hospital insurance contributions, but not old age pensions—were up 8.1 per cent to $1,301,000,000, representing 18 per cent of the budget.

The youth allowances, $10 a month for 16- and 17-year-olds who remain in school, were started in September and cost the treasury $27,000,000 by the fiscal year-end.

The white paper said the gross debt of Canada at March 31 was $26,648,000,000, including unmatured debt of $18,983,000,000. The net debt was $15,549,000,000, up $479,000,000 for the year.

The average interest rate on the unmatured debt was 4.35 per cent a year ending.

Arlene Monroe, aged 13, of Picton, was winner of Picton Public Schools public speaking contest. Miss Monroe won the trophy, presented by the Home and School Association, over eight other finalists.

Conservation Authority May Be Formed

PICTON (STAFF) — Conservation will likely be discussed at the regular meeting of Prince Edward County Council today. Warden Bernard Hepburn told members of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce board of directors a conservation association would be up for discussion at this session. He said a special survey can be made by the provincial government at no charge and a motion to have such a survey will be placed before county council.

A conservation association for Prince Edward County has been mentioned several times in recent months. Conservation areas have already been established in Ontario, strongly supported by provincial funds. Apart from whatever action may be taken on conservation it is expected to be a quiet session for county council. The mill rate by-law was passed at the March session and there are few outstanding issues.

HOLD BLOOD CLINIC

The Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic will be held in Picton this week on Wednesday April 14th. The clinic this year will be conducted in the Royal Hotel from 2 to 5 in the afternoon and from 6.30 to 8.30 in the evening. Anyone who has not been already contacted and wishing to give blood for this cause is asked to call in during these times on Wednesday.

Two Injured In Separate Accidents

PICTON (Staff) — Two automobile accidents occurred in the Picton area over the weekend. The first involved Robert Brown of Milford on Cherry Valley Road, between that village and Picton, about 7.30 p.m. Saturday evening. The car, a 1956 Ford, left the road and rolled over at least twice and ended up in a field some 50 to 75 feet away from the highway. Brown, who is approximately 30 years of age, was pinned inside the car and had to be freed from the wreck age. He sustained injuries to his leg and was taken to the Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital.

Damage to the car was estimated at approximately $400.

The second accident occurred at approximately 3.00 a.m. on Sunday. A Volkswagen, driven by Alexander Grant, a member of the First Canadian Guards, stationed at Picton, was involved in an accident with a truck on Scoharie road near Highway 14. The driver of the truck, alone at the time of the accident, was Lloyd Goth, of 27 Conway Crescent, Belleville. It is believed Mr. Goth was uninjured.

Guardsman Grant, who was also driving alone at the time of the accident, was pinned in the wreckage of the car and had to be freed. He received a compound fracture of the left arm and other undetermined injuries, and was taken to the Canadian Armed Forces Hospital in Kingston. Damage to Grant's auto was estimated at between $750 and $800. Bond's ambulance of Picton attended both accidents.

9 Veterans of Vimy Ridge Are Honored at Banquet

PICTON (STAFF) — Members of the Picton Branch the Royal Canadian Legion, Friday night held their annual banquet honouring veterans of the battle of Vimy Ridge. There were nine veterans of this historic battle present for the occasion.

Guest speaker at the banquet was Colonel Lance Nethery of the Picton Branch. In addressing the large gathering of members he said, "I sincerely feel that this organization, our legion, is one that fundamentally believes in the continuity of progress without breaking with traditions for everything that is new." We have been accused, he continued, of living in the past - there is no idea abroad that unless anything is brand new or just organized yesterday that it is no good, and should be abandoned because it is old.

What is wrong with thinking of the past, the speaker added, we revere and respect the traditions others have handed down. We will never forget those traditions that have brought us here today.

During the banquet the Toast to her Majesty the Queen was given by Comrade Morley Dunmage. The toast to the fallen comrades was given by Comrade K. McCalpin. Mrs. Morley Dunmage of the Ladies Auxiliary presented the Branch with a cheque for $100.

Body Recovered In Bull Lake

SHARBOT LAKE, Ont. (CP) —Skin divers from Kingston recovered Sunday the body of three-year-old Dwayne Knight, who fell through the ice and was drowned in Bull Lake on Thursday.

The boy's four-year-old sister Yvonne fell through the ice at the same time and also drowned. Her body was recovered the same day.

Dwayne's body was found 100 feet from shore in 30 feet of waters. Divers aided by farmers cut through 18 inches of ice before they could enter the lake, 40 miles northwest of Kingston.

Who Gets Cancer and Why

Editor's Note: A veteran science editor traces the grim pattern of cancer around the world in this sixth article from his important new book.

By PAT McGRADY

Article 7

Cancer probably affects every animal species that walks, crawls, flies, swims or burrows under the earth. But its most tragic victim is man.

Insurance company figures indicate that in hours lost from work and other financial effects cancer costs North Americans each year more than $12 billion.

This is, of course, the least of its costs. The truly extortionate price is in human beings — in mothers, fathers, wives, husbands, sons and daughters.

The American Cancer Society offers these U.S. figures for last year: Stricken by cancer—540,000 people in the United States. Within five years some 360,000 of these will be dead, almost all of them from cancer.

In 1964, some 315,000 North Americans died of cancer — almost 170,000 men, 140,000 women and more than 5,000 children.

Until 1949, more women than men died of cancer. At that point two potent factors reversed the trend: 1. The rocketing rise in lung cancer among men, doubling every decade, and 2. The decreasing death rate in women.

About 2.6 million people die of cancer each year throughout the world. At any given time more than six million have cancer.

Cancer is a "disease of civilization". As a curious sidelight, until 1935 there was very little cancer among the animals in the Philadelphia Zoo. Then, the zoo improved the diet. All walking, crawling and flying creatures which earlier had been dying of malnutrition and related diseases began to live much longer — and the cancer rate in all species promptly started to soar.

U.S. RATE IS AVERAGE

Cancer is most prevalent in areas of good eating, good housing and good medical care, in regions where people die early of malnutrition, infections, warfare, cannibalism, addictions, poor medical attention or filth, the cancer death rate is very low.

The U.S. cancer death rate is only slightly above the average for all modern nations. The World Health Organization calculated these age-standardized statistics showing the cancer fatalities per 100,000 population:

Austria 177, Scotland 178, Finland 171, Switzerland 164, England and Wales 161, West Germany 158, Netherlands 156, Chile 153, United States 141, Northern Ireland 140, France and Canada 139, Israel (Jewish population only) 138, Norway 134, Australia and New Zealand 130, Sweden 127, Italy 121, Japan and Puerto Rico 119, Trinidad and Tobago 102, Guatemala 95, Portugal 85 and Ceylon 29.

Only in the body site it attacks does cancer discriminate between races, nationalities, religions and socioeconomic groups.

One of the more reasonable explanations is for skin cancer. The fairer the skin the more susceptible it is to cancer induced by weather and the rays of the sun.

One of the more marked distinctions is the rarity of cancer of the uterine cervix among Jewish women throughout the world. One study indicates these tumors are nine times as common among non-Jews as among Jews. The reason most often given—and sometimes disputed—is circumcision among Jewish males.

In southern and western parts of Africa, liver cancer comes early in life and is very common. Ninety per cent of all cancer in some Bantu tribes is of the liver (due to inadequate diet.)

Something in poverty (would it be early marriage?) brings cervical cancer to the poor, according to a dozen surveys from Bombay, India, to New York City. And something in riches (could it be late maturity and marriage?) makes breast cancer prevalent among the well-to-do.

Hawaii, a mosaic of ethnic groups, offers a mosaic of cancer patterns. Hawaii's Japanese have a high stomach cancer rate (possibly due to their new socio-economic status and typical Japanese diet.) These are other variables among Hawaii's polyglot people:

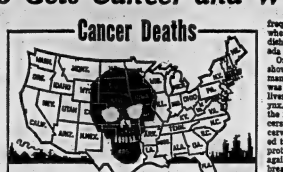
DEATHS ON THE RISE

Liver cancer—high among Filipinos (who subsist on a diet high in carbohydrates, low in Vitamin B12); lung cancer—low among Japanese and Filipino men who are relatively light smokers; breast cancer—five times as low among Japanese women as among other Hawaiian females (Japanese women nurse their infants and have an early menopause); cancer of the large intestine—most frequent among Caucasian women (due possibly to their diet and bowel habits); prostrate cancer—nine times as frequent among Caucasian as Japanese men (attributed by one course to more regularity in sexual intercourse and early mating by the Japanese); nose and throat cancers—high among Chinese who drink often and copiously of hot teas; uterine cervex cancer—most common among Hawaiian and part Hawaiian women who have poor medical care during and after pregnancy.

Such unusual predilections of some cancers raise many questions. For instance: is stomach cancer a dietary affair? This disease is 50 per cent more frequent in Newfoundland, where salt cod is a favorite dish, than in neighboring Canada in general.

One study in Buffalo, N.Y., showed this: The poorer the man, the more susceptible he was to cancers of the stomach, liver, esophagus, lung and larynx. The poorer the woman, the more prone she was to cancers of the stomach, liver and cervix. Indeed, poverty seemed to have only one virtue — it protected to some degree against cancer of the female breast.

Cancer death rates, generally, are on the rise. In one area of the world however, one kind of cancer will relent while the same cancer pursues its upward trend everywhere else.



During the past 30 years, North American and British deaths from cancer of the uterus, liver and stomach have dropped 50 per cent. In the same 30 years, mortality from cancer of the breast has remained remarkably steady, while leukemia and cancer of the pancreas have risen in males and females almost everywhere. Intestinal cancer deaths have risen rapidly in American negroes, slowly in American whites.

Nobody knows why.

(Tomorrow: Failure, timidity and hope on cancer.)

JUNKED IN RIVER

SALMON ARM, B.C. (CP)—Taking a tip from Sweden, old car bodies will be flattened by bulldozers and used in the construction of a dam to prevent silting and divert the Salmon River back into its old channel.

Ordinary.

We took the body off this Volkswagen 1500 to show you.

Let's start at the back.

With the engine.

What's out of the ordinary about it? Everybody knows we're famous for air-cooled engines in the rear.

We made the 1500's engine more powerful. And so flat it fits right into the back of the car and still leaves room for a luggage compartment.

(And that leaves you with two trunks. There's no engine in the front.)

Now notice the chassis. The floor is one solid piece of metal. Covers the bottom of the VW 1500. So nothing hangs down, and gets damaged. By rough weather. Or rough roads.

And even though we made the VW 1500 for families, you don't drive it like an ordinary family car.

Out of the ordinary.

You sit on a comfortable bucket seat and shift through four fully-synchronized gears on the floor.

Take a look at that suspension system up front. Inside that black metal tubing there's a torsion bar connected to each wheel.

And it's the same idea at the back. Every wheel in the VW 1500 is independently suspended. So a pothole for instance, jars only the wheel that goes over it. Not the whole car. And everbody in it.

We even put an anti-sway bar up front. With the result that the 1500 tracks around a bend just about like a Porsche.

Why not visit a VW dealer and discover all the 'out of the ordinary' things about the Volkswagen 1500?

He may not take a car apart for you. But he'll let you drive one.

U.S. Foreign Policy Called Bad Marriage of Economic Assistance, Military Might

By ALLEN SACKMANN

WINNIPEG (CP)—Prof. Mulford Q. Sibley finally gave his lecture here Saturday. He attacked United States foreign policy as an unholy marriage of economic assistance and military might.

Prof. Sibley, a political science instructor at the University of Minnesota, was the centre of a controversy last month when he was barred from Canada by immigration officers.

The decision was reversed by Immigration Minister Jack Nicholson after an investigation. A letter of regret from Prime Minister Pearson was read Saturday at the Voice of Women meeting where the professor spoke.

The letter said: "I very much regret the disturbance and inconvenience to Prof. Sibley caused by this affair. The minister's (Immigration Minister Nicholson's) statement on March 30th removes, I think, as it was intended to remove, any possibility of any slur having been cast on Mr. Sibley."

The 75-minute lecture and question period was interrupted by an announcement that a telephone warning had been received that a bomb had been planted in the building. Police said it was a prank and only two of the audience of 400 were seen leaving the building after the announcement.

Prof. Sibley said economic support of dictatorial governments in the context of military strength antagonizes the people and drives them to other ideologies.

IS LOSING WAR

The United States, he said, had over 30,000 "military advisers" in Viet Nam to aid the 200,000-man South Vietnam army but is losing the war because of its support of dictatorform of government.

"It is only a matter of time," said the pacifist and Quaker, "until the Americans will either voluntarily retire from South Viet Nam or will be forced to do so."

U.S. policies, he said, are increasingly inadequate and if not drastically changed, present a danger to world peace.

He added that other major powers are subject to the same criticisms made of U.S. policies but added he had been asked to lecture on United States policies and its role in international affairs.

Prof. Sibley criticized the U.S. for providing assistance to dictator ships and suggested there is greater hope for democracy in Communist Yugoslavia than in the dictatorship of Portugal.

of Minneapolis-St. Paul, at 6 a.m. today.

Sandbagging and diking along the Minnesota River was the main effort at Chaska as the city tried to keep its sewage plant and new courthouse safe. About half the town was under water, and ripples lapped at the eaves in some sections.

AWAITS HIGH WATER

Savage, about 15 miles downstream from Chaska, was next in line for the Minnesota's big push. Already one grain terminal was surrounded by water and had topped a dike. Another terminal was holding out with sandbag protection.

The Minnesota and Mississippi converge at St. Paul. A state of emergency was declared in the capital city by Mayor George Vavoulis, in anticipation of a crest 13 feet over flood stage. Crews shored up dikes with plywood extensions. The city's Union Depot closed just after midnight and most railways involved transferred their operations to Minneapolis. Vavoulis said there was fear for the city's new $8,000,000 industrial park.

Ice jams in the Mississippi north of Minneapolis caused a rapid rise. Residents of suburban Fridley began evacuating.

CARDINAL MAKES CHANGE

WARSAW (AP)—Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski charged Sunday that public funds are being used to spread atheism among Poland's youth in schools, universities and the army.

"It is monstrous that we Catholics must reject God because there is a group of people, with power and public funds, wishing it," he said in a Palm Sunday sermon.

U. S. Fighter Admitted Lost In Dogfight

By RENNIE AIRTH

SAIGON (Reuters) — A U.S. Navy jet fighter that shot down a Communist MiG in a dogfight April 9 failed to return to its carrier, the United States disclosed today.

A military spokesman said search operations for the plane's two - man crew have been called off. But the commander of the navy air unit denied a Peking radio claim that the F-4 Phantom—the navy's most advanced fighter — was downed by a missile from another U.S. plane.

Meanwhile, a purge of South Viet Nam's powerful armed forces council appeared likely after the removal of two leading military figures from their commands despite strong U.S. objections.

Informed sources said the move indicated a new struggle for power within the council.

The missing American jet was one of a group of Phantoms involved in an air battle with Communist MiGs near the Communist Chinese island of Hainan Thursday.

DIDN'T REPORT HIT

Lieut. Howard Watkins, another navy pilot involved in the same dogfight, said the pilot of the missing Phantom did not at any time indicate his plane was hit.

Watkins said he saw no markings of the Russian-built MiGs, which he said attacked from the direction of China and flew off after the engagement toward Chinese territory.

Brown said the missing jet was the plane which shot down one of the MiGs in the dogfight.

On the political front, changes were expected in the armed forces council after remarks Sunday by Air Marshal Nguyen Cao Ky, the South Vietnamese air commander and one of the council's most influential figures.

Ky told reporters the council will meet soon to consider important developments.

WILL BE 'ELIMINATED'

"On the armed forces council there are good and bad elements," he said. "The bad ones will be eliminated."

He did not elaborate. But observers believed Admiral Chung Tan Cang and Brig.-Gen. Pham Van Dong might be included in a council purge.

They were suspended from their commands pending investigation of charges of corruption against them.

a disaster area. Fifty - three cars of a freight train were derailed by the wind south of Lima.

Michigan's southern section was ripped from Grand Rapids to Hillsdale County. Deaths occurred in widely - scattered places. Five deaths and 100 injured were reported in the Grand Rapids area. Across the state near Hillsdale, five were killed; nine died in Manitou Beach in Lenawee County and two at Hemlock Lake. There were other single deaths.

National Guard units were called to guard property, establish communications and help homeless in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

DAMAGE IN MILLIONS

Illinois counted seven dead in twisters which hit northwest of Chicago. Damage was estimated at $6,000,000.

The windstorms came hours after President Johnson declared 30 Minnesota counties a disaster area in the wake of the state's worst flood in history. Some 20,000 persons fled their homes before spreading flood waters from rivers throughout the state.

The Indiana toll was the worst disaster in the state's history. In 1963 an explosion at an ice show in Indianapolis took 74 lives. For thousands, Palm Sunday was harrowing.

"The house started to shake and tremble, then all hell broke loose," said one survivor in the Lebanon area, one of the score of towns in the path of a twister.

At least 11 persons were killed in the area, and 75 homes battered. The injured jammed hospitals and witnesses saw patients being treated in hallways.

HITS TRAILER CAMP

In nearby Dunlap, a tornado tore through a trailer camp, shredding the tiny homes. Twenty were killed and 91 injured. Most were residents of the camp.

Three tornadoes hit Marion in central Indiana. A shopping centre was shattered and many Sunday bargain hunters were trapped in the debris. Across town, another twister tore off the roof of the veterans hospital. Many elderly patients were treated for shock and moved to other facilities.

The tornadoes swept through Indiana in two violent spurts, separated by only a few hours. Five counties in northern Indiana were hit by the first attack. The twisters then moved to the south.

Many cities were without electricity and debris littered railway tracks for miles, making passage impossible.

The tornadoes, again striking in bursts, moved from Indiana through northern Ohio. At least 56 persons were killed over a wide area.

Most of the deaths were in the Toledo area. Eight died when a bus and an auto were shoved off a highway by high winds. Eleven others were found dead amidst the rubble of buildings.

STRIKE SUBURBS

Two deaths were reported in suburbs of Cleveland and seven at nearby Pittsfield. Officials reported the tiny town nearly flattened.

Another 28 fatalities were reported in rural communities south of Toledo, and farther east.

Bouncing and skipping tornadoes slammed into many areas in southern Michigan and 23 deaths were reported.

Nine persons died at Manitou Beach, where a tornado turned a church into rubble within seconds. Deaths also were reported near Grand Rapids, Hillsdale, Coldwater, Hemlock Lake and Quincy.

National guardsmen were called out to prevent looting in stricken areas.

Twisters claimed seven lives in Illinois after striking along a 100-mile stretch from the Mississippi River to Crystal Lake, a small town 45 miles northwest of Chicago.

Six persons were killed in the Crystal Lake area and an eight-year-old boy died in Chicago after gale-force winds toppled a sign on him. Damage in Illinois was estimated by police officials at nearly $6,000,000.

In southern Wisconsin, high winds sent three tots plunging off highways, resulting in three deaths. Property damage was no severe that Governor Warren Knowles declared three counties disaster areas.

Tornadoes were sighted along a 160-mile path in Wisconsin. Hardest hit was Monroe, a city of about 8,500 near the Illinois line. Officials said nearly 100 homes were smashed and dozens of persons injured.

Red Cross workers rushed rescue operations to cities along the Illinois-Wisconsin border.

In Iowa, where the first tornado of the day touched down, electricity for more than 350,000 residents was cut off.

PRISONERS ARE JAYCEES

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP)—Two dozen prisoners in the B.C. Penitentiary Sunday received their charter as a registered branch of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Warden John Maloney said the group, to be known as the Bridgeview Jaycees, would organize activities to help the men "become part of the community."

SEARCH BEGINS — Residents of this north central Arkansas city began a search for belongings through the shambles a tornado turned their homes into Saturday night. The twister struck two sections of the city, leaving six persons dead and more than 600 homeless. More than 100 persons were injured. (AP Wirephoto)

DEBT LOAD INCREASES — Every Canadian man, woman and child carried a slightly heavier load of the national debt last year. The per capita net debt as of March 31 this year was set at $789.30, it was disclosed today in the government's white paper. The figure was up from $789.10 a year earlier. Graph shows changes in net debt in every fifth year since 1930 and by years since 1960. In the war-ending year of 1945 it stood at $935.91. (CP Newsmap)

Canada's Net Debt at End Of March $15,549,000,000

OTTAWA (CP)—As of March 31, Canada's total net debt amounted to $798.30 for every man, woman and child in the country.

This is based on the latest population estimate of 19,440,000.

The net debt increased by $479,000,000 during the 1964-65 fiscal year to $15,549,000,000 at March 31, it was shown in the pre-budget white paper tabled in the Commons today by Finance Minister Gordon.

This increase was far below the $1,216,000,000 increase in 1963-64. But a large part of the huge increase was a bookkeeping operation to cover an actuarial deficiency in the administration of superannuation accounts. The actual 1963-64 government deficit added $685,000,000 to the net debt.

Based on the population of 19,180,000, the net debt at the end of the 1963-64 fiscal year was $783.30 per capita, or a total of $15,070,000,000. A year earlier it was $739.50 per capita, or a total of $13,919,700,000.

The total interest on the federal debt is estimated at $1,008,000,000 this year, an increase of $53,500,000 over the previous year, But Mr. Gordon said a substantial portion of the debt is invested in productive assets and the income from this should be deducted in calculating the net interest costs.

On this basis, with a $414,000,000 return on investments, the net interest costs this year are estimated at $594,000,000, compared with $588,100,000 in 1964.

This means the net interest cost will be 3.82 per cent of the net debt, compared with 3.90 per cent a year earlier.

Federal Govt. Actually Ended Year With Surplus

OTTAWA (CP) — When Finances Minister Gordon's budgetary accounts for the fiscal year ended March 31 are converted to a system of bookkeeping known as a national accounts basis, he would up the year not with a deficit of $83,000,000 but with a surplus of $322,000,000.

This compares with a deficit on national - account basis of $206,000,000 in the previous year when the deficit was $619,000,000 on the normal budgetary account system.

The national-account basis is regarded as a refinement of the budgetary accounts system and converts figures used by Parliament into figures more in line with the kind of accounting that businessmen use.

Only income and expenditure transactions which have a direct and immediate impact on the flow of income in the economy are included. Intergovernmental financial transactions are taken into account as well as income and expenditure of such funds outside the regular budget as the old age security fund.

ON ANNUAL BASIS

The pre-budget white paper tabled in the Commons today said that on a national-accounts basis for 1964, the sum of taxation and other revenues of the federal government was $8,132,000,000. For the same calendar year, expenditures were $7,804,000,000.

This left a 1964 surplus of $328,000,000 on national-account basis. And when this national accounts calendar year was shifted to the fiscal year ending March 31 the surplus grew to $322,000,000.

The national-accounts system also shows the activity of provincial and municipal governments in the economy as a whole. The white paper said while the federal government was moving towards a surplus on a national-accounts basis, provincial and municipal governments combined were incurring a small deficit.

"In the combined total of all governments' revenue and expenditure, there existed an approximate balance on the national-accounts basis in the last year. . . .

"Transfers from the federal government to provincial and municipal governments reduce the federal government's share of combined tax and non-tax revenues to 47 from 56 per cent of the total revenues, while raising the provincial and municipal governments' combined share to 53 from 44 per cent of the total revenue.

"Provincial governments transfer to municipalities an amount almost equivalent to that which they receive from the federal government."

CONDITIONS IMPROVE

The surplus which developed in the federal government position on the national-accounts basis was attributed in the white paper to business conditions being more expansive than had been anticipated, and revenues reflecting an even stronger rise.

"All major components of revenue were affected by the general improvement in business conditions in 1964," the white paper said.

"Personal direct tax revenue showed a very substantial increase in 1964, partly due to the increase in the old age security tax and to personal income tax, partly due to the built-in responsiveness of the personal income tax to cyclical variations in general activity."

Peterborough Girl Wins Senior Title

TORONTO (CP) — Two girls from Peterborough and London, Ont., were chosen Saturday to represent the province at the Miss Canada pageant in Americas contest at the New York World's Fair in July.

Sonja Alderson, 16, of Peterborough, won the senior title at a contest in which 400 girls competed.

Carolyn Yushida, 12, of London, won the junior title and will also represent Ontario in the baton - twirling championships in New York.

Michelle Darrough, 10, of London, Ont., won the juvenile title at the competition, judged by a panel from New York.

Finance Minister Sees Economy Moving Forward To High Level of Activity

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Gordon says that while the record economic gains of 1964 may not be matched this year, the economy "as a whole should move forward to new and higher levels of activity."

In the pre-budget white paper tabled today in the Commons he estimated an 8.9-per-cent gain during 1964 in the gross national product—the value of all goods and services produced. This is the biggest gain since 1956 and compares with an upswing of six per cent in 1963.

"In terms of economic achievement, the year 1964 was a remarkable one," said the paper. It was even more unusual because the gain was not "unduly inflated by price advances, as has been the case on occasions in the past. . . ."

On the basis of the estimates, it would mean a GNP level of $47,003,000,000 in 1964 compared with $43,180,000,000 in 1963.

Mr. Gordon said the 1964 expansion was broadly balanced and the year - end economy was showing no signs of distortions. Most importantly of all, the level of unemployment was significantly reduced, particularly in the areas where it has been most serious for a number of years. "Such an improvement occurred despite the fact that, mainly for demographic reasons, the Canadian labor force was expanding more rapidly in 1964 than in any year since 1956, for which official statistics are available."

Prices remained relatively stable. The consumer price index rising by 1.8 per cent, the same as in the previous year. Average industrial wages and salaries rose by 3.7 per cent, compared with 3.5 per cent in 1963.

Unemployment during the year averaged 4.7 per cent of the labor force against 5.3 per cent in the previous year, 6.7 per cent in 1962 and 5.5 per cent in 1961. Total employment increased by 3.6 per cent and the overall increase in wages, salaries and supplementary income paid out was 8.7 per cent above 1963.

Mr. Gordon said the economic performance of the year was "the dramatic revision made by the business sector in its capital investment expenditure plans."

Public and private capital expenditure last year totalled $10,-927,000,000 — compared with $9,393,000,000 in 1963 and all sectors of industry contributed to the rise.

The manufacturing industry increased its capital spending by 23.7 per cent, the forestry industry by 21.7 per cent and mining, quarrying and oil wells, by 21.5 per cent. Other sectors had smaller increases for an over-all industrial rise of 15.3 per cent.

WALTER GORDON

Corporation profits, prior to taxes and payment of dividends to non-residents, were 14.6 per cent higher than in 1963.

While farm cash income increased during the year, there was a decline of 14.7 per cent in over-all farm income since "a second successive grain crop of the magnitude of the mammoth 1963 harvest could not be expected."

Looking ahead to 1965, the finance minister said:

—Any decline which may occur in exports of wheat from the a b n o r m a l 1964 level to should be offset by gains in other exports. The increase in exports likely will be smaller.

—An increase of 14 per cent in total public and private investment.

—The expansion of consumer spending to c o n t i n u e although at a somewhat less rapid rate."

—It would be "prudent" to expect some widening of the current account deficit—from the 1964 when the huge wheat sales kept it down.

—The labor force is expected to increase "somewhat more rapidly" than in 1964.

—Productive capacity generally appears adequate to meet probable demands, although there may be some supply difficulties in specific localities and industries "which a high degree of flexibility of both labor and capital would help to relieve."

Cigarette Lung-cancer Scare Hits Federal Pocketbook Hard

OTTAWA (CP) — The cigarette lung-cancer scare has hit Ottawa's pocketbook as well as its tax collection pocket book.

In the government's fiscal year ended March 31, first since publication of the U.S. surgeon-general's report linking lung cancer and cigarette smoking, revenue from various tobacco taxes dropped $1,600,000 from the previous year.

Although the amount seems trivial set against government revenues totalling more than $7,000,000,000, it marked a sharp reversal of the trend in recent years when year-by-year tobacco revenue increases ranged from $24,800,000 in the 1961-62 fiscal year to $9,200,000 in 1963-64.

The figures showing tobacco revenues at $198,000,000 in the last year against $292,600,000 in 1963-64 appear without amplification in the pre-budget white paper Finance Minister Gordon tabled in the Commons today.

The revenues come from excise tax and excise duty on cigarettes, cigars and cigarettes. The white paper offered no breakdown of revenue from these sources.

Excise taxes, down $6,900,000 to $220,000,000 from $226,900,000, more than accounted for the over-all drop. Since this tax is collected from the manufacturer on his sales, in the same way as a sales tax on other commodities, it reflects reduced consumption.

By contrast, excise duties on tobacco products increased by $3,500,000 to $171,600,000 last year from $165,700,000. In turn the latter figure, for 1963-64, represented a decrease of $900,000 from $166,500,000 in 1962-63.

Excise duties are levied on the manufacture of the product and produce revenue a couple of months ahead of excise taxes on sales.

A companion, but minor, source of revenue was in tuned with tobacco. The excise tax take from sale of matches and lighters, down $1,000,000 in 1963-64, dropped by another $1,200,000 last year from $1,300,000 in 1963-64.

Despite the slight setback, smokers once more far outclassed drinkers in producing big money for the government.

Their total bill, including the matches and lighters, ran to $2,388,000,000.

Spirits, beer and wine—each of which is subject to only one tax—produced revenue of $245,100,000, a gain of 9,000,000 from $236,100,000 in the previous year.

The excise duty on spirits yielded 135,000,000 cents of that $106,000,000. Wine is subject to excise tax (but not excise duty) and it produced $1,600,000.

SEARCH SUSPENDED

JUNEAU, Alaska (CP) — A search has been suspended for eight men aboard a 64-foot Canadian halibut boat missing in the Bering Sea, 1,200 miles west of here, the United States Coast Guard announced Sunday night. The Sea Ranger is believed to have been caught in a sudden storm which sent seven companion ships fleeing for safety.

Linda Darnell Dies of Burns In Illinois

GLENVIEW, Ill. (AP) — A private funeral service will be held today in Glenview for actress Linda Darnell, 43, who died Saturday of burns received early Friday in the home of friends.

Miss Darnell's adopted daughter, Charlotte (Lola) Marley, 17, who flew from California to her mother's side shortly before the actress' death, is expected to be present.

The star of many Hollywood films was married and divorced three times — to cameraman Peverell Marley, to Philip Liebmann, a New York brewer, and to Merle Robertson, an airline pilot from whom she obtained a divorce in 1963.

Miss Darnell was the guest of Mrs. Jeanne Curtis of Glenview, former secretary of the actress, and her daughter, Patricia, 16, Mrs. Curtis' husband, Richard, is a businessman, was out of town when the fire developed in the living room of the two-story Curtis home.

The actress, unconscious and with burns over 80 per cent of her body, was found by firemen in the living room where she and the Curtises had watched Miss Darnell's old movies on television a few hours earlier.

Five Charged With Thefts From C.P.R.

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Five persons were charged Sunday in connection with the theft of more than $8,000 worth of merchandise during the last two years from the Canadian Pacific Railway depot here.

Paul Davidson, 27, of Peterborough, was charged with theft. He is a CPR truck driver.

Charged with possession of stolen goods are Robert Hagerbih, 32; Richard Loucks, 28; Joan Hobson, 28, all of Peterborough, and Michael Loucks, 27, Richard's brother, of Toronto.

Fingernail-munching New Sound in Land as Interested People Await Dorion Report

QUEBEC (CP) — There's a new sound in the land — Fingernail - munchint as the government, RCMP and a host of lawyer interested parties await the report of Chief Justice Frederic Dorion.

The public inquiry completed Saturday his government - ordered inquiry into allegations that attempted bribery and interference-peddling against four federal ministerial aides and the handling of such allegations by Justice Minister Favreau and the RCMP.

Justice Dorion's inquiry closed after 42 hearings during which 65 witnesses gave more than 3,000 words of testimony, the judge did not indicate when he will report (6 the subject or that he will say.

The report probably can't be expected before late May.

In ordering the inquiry, Chief Justice Dorion indicated pretty firmly that he intends to read the RCMP for interrogating some French-speaking persons in English during its investigation.

Ross Drouin, Conservative member for Justice Minister Favreau under heavy criticism for deciding Sept. 18, on the advice of the RCMP, that charges should not be laid because no conviction would result.

But Mr. Favreau was upheld by Prime Minister Pearson, Democratic and Creditiste parties on this point and, of course, by himself for the federal government and the RCMP.

The case began June 19 when Lucien Rivard of the Island of Jesus, north of Montreal, was arrested by the RCMP for U.S. authorities on charges naming him as the chief wheel in a Mafia dope smuggling ring.

Montreal lawyer Pierre Lamontagne was retained by the U.S. government to represent it in extradition hearings and to oppose any bail for Rivard.

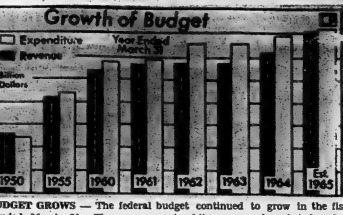
Mr. Lamontagne told the RCMP Aug. 11 he had been offered a $20,000 bribe July 14 by Rivard's brother, Jean-Guy, private assistant to the immigration minister, to drop opposition to bail.

He also maintained that he was subjected to political pressure by Liberal MP Guy Rouleau, then parliamentary secretary to Justice Minister Favreau, and by Guy Lord and Andre Letendre, aides to Mr. Favreau, concerning bail for Rivard.

After an RCMP investigation lasting a little more than a month, Denis was allowed to resign after being refused a request for sick leave by his then boss, Immigration Minister Tremblay, now postmaster-general.

Harry Truman Is Honored By Hometown

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — Harry Truman, who became president 20 years ago today, was honored by his hometown Saturday as "a living example of duty and honor to country."



He listened solemnly as speaker after speaker extolled his virtues then told the crowd gathered in front of the Truman Library:

"You know, I'd like to meet that fellow you're talking about."

It's his favorite rejoinder at ceremonies such as these.

Independence's Truman Appreciation Day was moved up for two days because Truman and Mrs. Truman planned to leave later in the day for New York. Truman is scheduled to address a Freedom's Foundation dinner there Wednesday.

Close associates say it will be a major speech, the first he's made in a long time.

It was April 12, 1945 when Truman, who had been vice president for 82 days, was told of the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt. He served out Roosevelt's fourth term, then was re-elected in 1948 in a major upset.

Truman, who will be 81 years old May 8, said it is too late for anyone to have regrets about his becoming president. "You'll just have to accept it," he said.

Down Houston, Texas way, they don't warble "Don't Fence Me In" any more.

A bunch of the boys headed by a guy named Bob Smith, reputedly wurth—and get this—$200 million, sold a few oil wells and built themselves a baseball butch for $1 million dollars.

They call it the Harris County Domed Stadium, the first all-weather baseball park.

This golden blister is the home of the Houston Astros, formerly the Colt .45's and features a translucent plastic dome which shelters some 46,000 seats.

There's a moral to this story. Don't play poker with a Texan.

The Dodgers Walter O'Malley opened the pot in this multi-million game with an ante of 15 million for the Dodger Stadium in L.A. Houston's Smith who has four trucks bring home his $200,000 weekly pay in silver dollars, raised five million.

Up in New York the Mets' front office called the bet. Houston raised four million and the Mets came back with a million boost. Smith took up a pot collection, raised the bet seven million and won the 31 million pot.

The blister covers over nine acres. Its roof reaches 208 feet above the playing field equivalent to an 18-storey building. A weather computer automatically feeds fresh air at the rate of 250,000 cubic feet into the building.

Television baseball buffs are guaranteed their regular Saturday "Game of the Week." The ABA has signed a $12 million contract with 18 teams in the big leagues to televise each Saturday afternoon for two years.

There's parking room for some 15,000 Texas Cadillacs, but the customers must leave their oil-wells at the box office.

There are 46,000 cushioned seats for the guys who make under $50,000 a week. Some of these are reserved for the longhorns in the middle-salary brackets.

This Taj Mahal of baseball stadia has arranged millionaire settings for the oil kings and others in the six-figure circle.

All they have to do is raid the petty cash box, extract between $75,000 and $90,000 and they've got themselves a posh miniature palace at the top level of the blister.

These peanuts are good for a five-year ownership of the gold-plated apartments, which have all the accoutrements of comfort you would find in the royal suite at the Waldorf-Astoria.

If the lessee wants solid comfort he can lie on a comfortable chesterfield and watch the game golag an down below on a color television screen.

If he prefers seeing the game "live" he can stroll out to his private balcony and watch it over the sea of ten-gallon hats that mushroom the area where the poor people are parked.

He can pitter-patter over wall-to-wall gold filled carpets in his plushies and if he needs an extra blonde or two for the party a private telephone is at his figurative elbow.

There is a her that does everything but select the drinks. It makes the ice while he waits. And if he decides he needs a bath, there is a private bathroom probably with golden faucets.

I do not know how true this is, but I read somewhere that special mirrors have been installed for the near-sighted playboys. They are equipped with prescription glass.

Unknown New World Champion

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Ismael Laguna, relatively unknown outside his native Panama, upset champion Carlos Ortiz Saturday night in a 15-round decision and won the world lightweight boxing championship.

Ortiz, a Puerto Rican-born New Yorker, weighed 134¾ for the fifth defence of the title he won from Joe Brown three years ago while Laguna came in at 135, three pounds under the class limit.

Jersey Joe Walcott, the former heavyweight champion who was the referee, voted for 21-year-old Laguna along with a Panamanian judge. The other judge, Ben Greene of New York, called it a draw.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Wildlife Federation became a 10-province organization Saturday with the announcement that the Newfoundland-Labrador Federation of rod and gun clubs has joined the national body. The CWF now represents affiliated groups with more than 150,000 members. It recently began issuing a quarterly bulletin, Wildlife News, containing information and comment on conservation topics.

Ullmen 3-Goals Hero In Wings' Win

By STERLING TAYLOR

DETROIT (CP)—Norm Ullman has no explanation, and Billy Reay says there's a lot of luck involved, but the slick-skating Detroit centre reserves a special scoring touch for Chicago Black Hawks.

Ullman, a 30-year National Hockey League veteran, scored three goals Sunday night to lead the Red Wings to a 4-2 victory over the Hawks and a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series.

"It's the third three-goal performance for me against Chicago in the last two playoffs," Ullman said after the game.

NORM ULLMAN

Ullman's first two goals, which gave the Wings a 3-2 lead, came within five seconds of each other and set a Stanley Cup playoff record. The previous record of seven seconds was set by Chicago's Billy Reay against Detroit in last season's semi-final.

NHL RECORD STANDS

The NHL record of two goals in four seconds was set in 1931 by Nels Stewart of Montreal Maroons.

"I'd look pretty good too if I flipped two shots from the blue line into the net," Reay, the Chicago coach, said after the game.

"It takes a lot of luck to score like that."

But Ullman's record of 186 goals in nine regular NHL seasons as well as his 15 goals in 61 playoff games rate him a season speak for themselves.

He had 42 goals in regular season play this year and Sunday's performances brought his total in the current series to five, second to Bobby Hull of Chicago, who has seven.

Eric Nesterenko had given Chicago a 1-0 lead in the first period, but 19-year veteran Ted Lindsay matched it to give the Wings a 1-1 tie after the first 20 minutes.

Hull, the muscular left winger, scored the prettiest goal of the game in the second period stepping on the ice after serving a minor penalty. He caught a pass from Doug Mohns behind the Detroit defence and easily outmaneuvered Roger Crozier, the Wings pint-sized goaltender.

It was then that Ullman struck for the two record-making goals.

He caught Chicago netminder Glenn Hall with identical shots from just inside the blue line as two Black Hawk defencemen backed toward their own goal.

"I tried to use the Chicago defence for cover," Ullman said.

Ullman's insurance marker came in the third period when he beat Hall from a scramble just outside the Chicago crease.

Detroit coach Sid Abel credited the win to the Red Wings use of four forward lines.

The Olympia was humid and "it must have been 50 degrees on the ice," Detroit defenceman Bill Gadsby said after the game.

Abel singled out rookie Bob Dillabough as one of the game's standouts.

Dillabough, who joined the Wings last week from Pittsburgh Hornets of the American Hockey League, was elated with his own play.

Leafs' Backs To The Wall

Rousseau Wins Second For Habs

By BILL NEVILLE

MONTREAL (CP)—The official title is Stanley Cup semi-final series 3, but it might well be sub-titled The Return of Robert Rousseau.

It may also add up to Montreal Canadiens' first appearance in a cup final since 1960.

The Habs, with Rousseau again leading the way, took a giant step toward that objective Saturday night by downing Toronto Maple Leafs 3-1 in the fifth game of their best-of-seven series.

The victory gave Canadiens a 3-2 margin and makes Tuesday night's sixth game in Toronto a do-or-die proposition for the defending champion Leafs.

They must win not only Tuesday night's sixth game, but also a seventh to be played here, if necessary, next Thursday in order to qualify for a spot at their fourth consecutive Stanley Cup.

If they're going to do it, one thing is certain: they'll have to stop Rousseau.

The 24-year-old rightwinger was the payoff man again Saturday night with a blistering 50-foot slapshot that broke a 1-1 tie and put Canadiens on their way in the third period.

It was his second winning goal of the series. He also did the trick in the opener—and capped the fifth straight playoff game in which the 190-pounder has been an individual star both offensively and defensively.

All of which is a far cry from the regular National Hockey League season during which Rousseau managed only 12 goals and had many Montreal fans ready to buy him a one-way ticket to nowhere.

Coach Toe Blake, who during the regular season benched Rousseau more than once, admitted after Saturday night's contest that, "without that goal by Rousseau, we may not have made it.

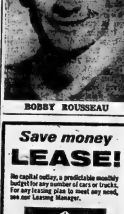
"And here I was yelling at him to pass out the puck and try for a deflection," the Montreal coach added with a grin.

Fortunately for the Canadiens, Rousseau either didn't hear Blake or thought better of it.

Instead of passing as he crossed the Toronto blueline, he faked once to drop Leaf defenceman Kent Douglas to his knees and then let fly a low sizzler that shattered Johnny Bower's goal stick before rattling into the bottom lefthand corner.

Bower said he was screened by Douglas on the play and only had time to try for a stick deflection.

Rookie Yvon Cournoyer, with his first playoff goal, and captain Jean Beliveau, with No. 45 of his playoff career, were the other Montreal scorers. Centre Bob Pulford counted Toronto's lone goal.



Beliveau's marker came with only 44 seconds to play after Toronto coach Punch Imlach had pulled Bower in favor of a sixth attacker. As it did for Blaks in the fourth game, the move promptly backfired.

Pulford's goal came at 3:45 of the second after a scoreless first period. A rather odd effort with the puck bouncing in off Gump Worsley's arm on a sharp-angled shot, it gave the Leafs first blood for the first time in the series.

However, it lasted only eight minutes and 30 seconds until another Toronto nemesis—the Canadiens' power play—struck for the eighth time in the series.

With George Armstrong and Carl Brewer of the Leafs both in the penalty box, the swift-skating Cournoyer streaked in on Bower, arrived there at the same time as Claude Provost's pass from the left boards, and the score was tied 1-1.

Rousseau and Beliveau, each with his third goal of the playoffs, took care of it from there.

Whip Marlboro 6-1

Flyers Take 3-0 Lead

TORONTO (CP)—Jim Gregory, coach of Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, had to think back to 1942 to console himself Sunday.

His team had just finished being whipped 6-1 by Niagara Falls Flyers and they now are behind 3-0 in games in the best-of-seven finals for the league championship.

"There's more satisfaction to come from behind to win a series and I think we'll do it," Gregory said in the dressing room.

He recalled the Stanley Cup finals of 1942, when Toronto Maple Leafs, parent team of the Marlboros, defeated Detroit Red Wings for the trophy after dropping the first three games.

Gregory admitted, however, that his team will have to play better than it did Sunday if it hopes to advances to the semi-final round of Memorial Cup action.

MEET NORTH CHAMPS

The winner of the Toronto-Niagara Falls series will meet Garson - Falconbridge Native Sons, winners of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Jr. A crown, for the right to challenge the western champions for the cup.

Toronto will play the Flyers again Tuesday night in Niagara Falls.

Niagara Falls took a 1-0 lead in the first period of a rough game Sunday and led 4-1 by the end of the second.

Don Marcotte, Bill Goldsworthy, Andre Lajoeunesse, Ted Snell, Jean Pronovost and Derek Sanderson each netted one goal for the Flyers.

Astronomics

By ROBERT E. JOHNSON JR.

HOUSTON (AP)—The Houston domed stadium may turn out to be the most traumatic place in the world for the unfortunate visiting pitcher who throws a home run ball.

Let's reconstruct a scene Saturday in the exhibition game between Baltimore Orioles and Houston Astros.

It's the bottom of the third. Baltimore pitcher Dave McNally has already given up four runs in the first inning. Now there are two on base.

Wham!

Houston's Jim Beauchamp slams a homer into the center-field bleachers. While the three runs cross the plate, nightmarish sounds and sights erupt from the 52,000, 000 scoreboard.

Shoulders slumped, hands on hips, McNally turns to watch.

In colored lights on the scoreboard, the dome blows off the stadium, rockets zip red tracings from end to end, cowboys chase longhorn steers—and, finally, two big silver heads appear, each with a United States flag flying from one horn and the Lone Star flag of Texas from the other, while the loud speakers blare The Eyes of Texas are Upon You.

McNally slowly turns back to the mound. He tugs on his cap, wiggles his shoulders, picks out his chin and fires.

Mike White smacks the ball into deep left field for a double, and McNally is yanked. Is he allowed to make the long, lonely walk in a decent pall of gloom?

No, there's that infernal scoreboard again.

This time on comes an animated picture of a jowly, grim-visaged manager. His mouth opens wide and in giant, black capital letters out float the words: "Pitcher out! To the showers!"

The scene changes to a stump - shouldered dejected pitcher ambling under a shower head. He removes his cap, and spray begins pelting him.

Mercifully, a black curtain rises and cuts off the tragic scene.

That's what happens to unlucky visiting pitchers.

But what happens when somebody belts a homer off an Astro pitcher?

The scoreboard flashes "HR." And the game goes on.

Seven Teams Enter Loop

A seven-team Belleville and District Softball League was all but made official at an entry deadline meeting here yesterday.

And while a three-day extension was granted, those clubs not filing entry yesterday assured the league executive that cheques covering the $35 entry fee would be "in the mail in plenty of time to meet the new Wednesday midnight deadline."

The league will play this season with two Belleville clubs, Ellis Juniors and Trudeau Motors, plus entries from Trenton, Tweed, Bloomfield, Madoc and Stirling.

Stirling was the only team not represented at the meeting. "We are definitely in but we have an important hockey game in Trenton Sunday afternoon and everyone will be there," a Stirling spokesman informed league secretary Cliff Belch by phone.

The sudden expansion of the loop, from four teams during the last two seasons to seven this year, was credited mainly to the fact that Belleville clubs will play night ball, as will all other league entries.

Bloomfield will play home games in Picton on Wednesday and/or Mondays, Tweed Lombanks will play home games in Madoc, on Mondays, Trenton Commercial Printers at Trenton Bay Shore Park, on Wednesdays, Madoc on their own diamond on Thursdays, Ellis Juniors at the Belleville Fairgrounds on Tuesdays and Trudeau Motors at the game field on Thursdays. Stirling also has night ball but no night was given for home games as yet.

Some Saturday games will be played, likely as few as possible since all have vetoed Friday games and asked for as little weekend ball as possible.

The league schedule will commence on Monday, May 17. In the meantime two league schedules, one for 18 games and another for 24, will be drafted and offered to the clubs for approval or changes at the next meeting. The teams will decide then as to which schedule to adopt.

The top four clubs will enter playoffs for the league championship with first and third place teams in one semi-final, second and fourth in the other.

Dealing with general business the teams voted to allow each team to have 18 players signed at one time, rather than the 15 allowed by the OASA. They also passed an amendment which calls for visiting teams to pay $20 for expense, for failing to have enough players for a game. This would be to cover the cost of the field, lights and officials. Protests will be handled in accord with the OASA rule book.

G. Alexander was added to the league's executive committee, joining Harry Rollins, Wally McAfee and Vern Rotsey in that capacity.

President Frank Insley called for the next league meeting, to settle the schedule issue, on Sunday, April 25. It will be at Belleville's Club Canara, at 2.00 p.m.

Mission to Malaya Special On Peace Corps Excellent

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Mission to Malaya, ABC's Saturday night special in its Daring American series, was an inspiring, warmly human and exciting documentary about the life of two young Peace Corps nurses on a jungle island in Malaya.

We saw nurse Rita Franzone ably administering to the sick during the last few days of her two-year assignment. And then Marjorie Benning, her replacement from home—eager but a bit unsure of the language and the people—moved on her first day into a life-or-death situation.

The cameras stayed with her through a perilous mercy mission on a storm-tossed fishing boat as a desperately sick woman was rushed to a distant hospital for emergency surgery.

It was an exceptionally fine program.

Friday night there was ABC's Saga of Western Man, concentrating on the last stand of General Custer and the cavalry in the valley of the Little Big Horn.

The documentary was thoroughly and carefully organized, the research was meticulous and the photography often magnificent.

Robert Mitchum Faces Full Schedule of Publicity Tours

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"Would you like some ketchup?" asked the waitress as she delivered her basted eggs and hamburger patty.

"Honey," replied Robert Mitchum, "I am in no condition to make any decisions."

His hooded eyes at half-mast, the actor was suffering throughthe kind of a as the personal appearance. Some performers consider it a form of exquisite torture; film columnists deem it a necessary adjunct to the merchandising of movies.

Mr. Mum—a film made in Africa with Carroll Baker last year, is the beneficiary of Mitchum's ordeal. It is the first tour he has made in a dozen years.

GIVES HIS VIEW

Mitchum's views of publicity tours?

"The trouble is, you get a different guy to handle you each city," the actor said. "He doesn't realize what you've been through in the previous city, and he books you around the clock. He also wastes a lot of time because he figure I'll be late. When I show up every time five minutes early, he gets shook up.

"Then there's the booze. You see 40 people in a day and each one wants to have a drink with you. That sorta adds up, you know."

His outlook improved minutely as he stabbed at the eggs and thought of home at the end of the fall. Home for the last few years has been a horse-breeding farm on Chesapeake Bay 75 miles from Baltimore.

He claims that he doesn't see enough of the place because he has to keep making films to pay for it this reported salary: $400,000 a film).

WAITS FOR MONEY

"We won't start getting any income until we've been there our first foals will mature," he said. "By that time we'll, probably be back at Greenwood."

Mitchum did have some kind words for Mr. Moses, which he said made the film well despite everything.

They put me on the plane in Nairobi with 72 pages of the wrong script," he said. "I arrived at the location to find there was no script at all. Carroll Baker was all agog and the director, Ronald Neame, was in tears. But we rolled it out, getting new pages of script every day. That's the story of my life."

He sighed deeply, took a drink of milk and prepared to depart for the next string of engagements.

The Tracks

Quick Thought, bought as a yearling at the Keeneland Fall Sales, paid $11, $5.80, $3.40. L'Arriviste was a second and paid $6.20 and $4.80 while Here's Lady Sue paid $10 to show.

Ozzo, with Hugo Dittfach up, won the five-furlong Black Rock Purse over 5½ furlongs in 1:05 2-5 paying $2.70, $2.30 and $2.20. Uncle Blue was second, paying $2.90, $2.40 and Royal Piper third, returning $2.70. Ozzo is owned by Armstrong Brothers of Brampton.

WILL ARRIVE EARLY

MONTREAL (CP)—T'e Canadian Olympic Association has announced that Canadian athletes in the 1968 Olympics at Mexico City will go to the site three weeks early to adapt to the 7,500-foot altitude. A spokesman said in an interview following a Saturday night association meeting athletes are not capable of peak performance at more than 6,000 feet above sea level unless accustomed to the rarified atmosphere. Canadian athletes usually arrive at the Olympic site a week in advance.

TORONTO (CP) — Sonny Creed, a game little gelding who once raced in $3,500 claimers, won the first stakes victory of his career in the sixth race at Greenwood Raceway Saturday — the $3,380 Willowdale Stakes pace.

Driven by Ken Gathwaite, Sonny Creed paid $2.90 and contributed with George Volo for a meagre $6.80 quinella.

The diminutive racer won it races and $71,284 last year and has already banked $3,180 for owner Bruce Smith of Toronto.

NEW YORK (CP)—Tenacle, seldom a visitor to the winner's circle, wore down the pacesetting Thiablo in the home stretch Saturday and won the $25,000 Excelsior Handicap at Aqueduct by 1¼ lengths.

Thiablo, winner of the recent Westchester Handicap, held on for second place, 3½ lengths in front of the stretch - running Quick Duke.

Under 110 pounds, 13 less than packed by top-weighted Mighty Manner, Tenacle was clocked in 1:49 3-5 for his first stakes triumph. He had only two victories in more than 37 previous 1964-65 starts.

The winner, ridden by Bill Mayorga, earned $25,720 and paid $14.60, $4.80 and $3.60 to his backers in the crowd of 23,025. Thiablo, even money choice carrying 118 pounds, returned $2.80 and $2.60 while Quita Dude was $3.30 to show.

At Lexington, Ky., W. Haggin Perry's Tennis and Julia Potrykus' Bright Bauble won their divisions of the $20,000-added Oakland Stakes at Keeneland.

Both three - year - old fillies made it to the wire by only a head over the second-place finishers and there was only a three - quarters of a length difference back to third.

May's Guide finished second behind Terrenia in the first division, with Little Grey Pet third in the race worth $23,015.

Saber Dance was second and Respected third in the second division, which grossed $22,900. Terrenia, timed in 1:10 3-5 for the six furlongs, paid $7.60, $3.80 and $3. May's Guide returned $3.60 and $3.40 and Little Grey Pet was $10.60 to show.

Nicklaus Sets Masters Record

By MURRAY ROSE

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus stands out today as the greatest golfer in the world and Jack's Pack has taken over from Arnie's Army.

Still admittedly on cloud nine after spread-eagling the world's finest field with a record Masters score of 271 for 72 holes, 17 strokes under par, the jovial stroogboy from Columbus, Ohio seemed to be as happy about winning over the galleries as with his fantastic feats on the course.

The 25 - year - old blonde bomber, treated coldly by some fans before, received tremendous ovations from the opening round. His final round Sunday seemed like a triumphal parade with galleries that swelled to more than 25,000 at times.

"It felt great to hear the crowds cheer me and it definitely helped my game," said Nicklaus. "I'm not an outgoing person like Arnie Palmer and Gary Player and I guess some of the fans resented me for winning when I was so young. Maybe it's because I've matured, too."

SHOOTS 64

Nicklaus, who came to the Augusta National Golf Club a weak in advance to make a determined bid for the title he first won in 1963, broke the tournament wide open with a fabulous, record - tying, eight-under-par 64 Saturday.

Palmer, the 1964 champion and a record four-time winner of the Masters, called Nicklaus' four rounds of 67, 71, 64, 69, "the greatest 72 holes of golf ever played. His tremendous putting was the difference."

Palmer and Player, the South African member of golf's formidable Big Three, tied for second at 280 after being deadlocked with Nicklaus for first with 138 at the halfway mark.

Palmer had rounds of 70, 68, 72, 70 for the par 72, 6,980-yard course that was massacred under a birdie barrage Thursday and then held off further nasty assaults. Player had rounds of 68, 73, 70, 73.

"Nicklaus just played fantastic golf," said Player.

COLLECTS $30,000

A non-winner on the winter circuit, Nicklaus collected $20,000 of the record $140,075 Masters purse. This put him in first place on the PGA's official money winning list for the year with $34,000. Player and Palmer each received $10,200.

Mason Rudolph took fourth with 283. Dan Sikes was fifth with 285 and Gene Littler, the 1961 Open champion, and Ramon Sota of Spain tied for sixth with 286. Tommy Bolt and Frank Beard were tied at 287. George Knudson, the Canadian PGA champion from Toronto matched par with 288 and earned $1,800.

Nicklaus' 64 tied the course and Masters record set by Lloyd Mangrum 25 years ago; his 32-hole score of 202 was a record, too, and his 271 was three strokes better than the Masters' mark of 274 established by the famed Ben Hogan in 1953. His nine-stroke victory margin also was the best ever, topping Cary Middlecoff's winning seven-stroke edge in 1953.

MASTERS SOUVENIR — Jack Nicklaus heaves his ball down the fairway after putting out with a 69 in the final round of the Masters Golf Tournament in Augusta, Ga. He fired a 17-under par four rounds to win by nine strokes over Gary Player and Arnold Palmer. (AP Wirephoto)

Eastern Baseball Meeting

A general meeting of the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association here yesterday produced rather disappointing results, according to Kone representative Harold Griffin.

"I think there is still too much hockey going on for the baseball men to really get down to business yet", Griffin said.

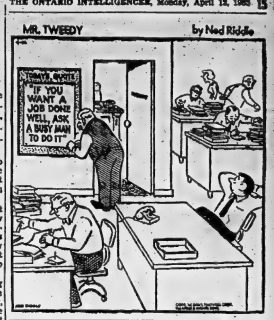
About 15 persons turned out for the meeting but few definite commitments were made in the offering. Several centres called by phone to say they would not be represented at this meeting but expected to have various entries later.

Another E.O.B.A. meeting has been scheduled for one week from today, Monday, April 19. The meeting will be held at the Legion in Port Hope, at 7.30.

Belleville was well represented in the minor divisions according to Griffin, three or four minor teams from this centre are willing to enter play against other cities.

Kingston, Peterborough and Oshawa were not represented.

Very little was heard concerning the senior classifications. Brockville has an entry. None of the other centres, such as Belleville, Oshawa and Peterborough was represented



Cannilton is again expected to enter the intermediate division if an E.O.B.A. entry is forthcoming at all from that village.

The junior situation was much like the senior. A Belleville spokesman said he did not know if enough players were available here for a junior club.

Griffin expressed hope for much more concrete action at next Monday's meeting.

SAYS STANDARDS HIGH

MONTREAL (CP) — Mitchell Sharp, trade and commerce minister, said Sunday more businessmen should enter politics, which he described as an occupation with high moral standards. He was addressing a meeting of the men's club of Beth - el Synagogue and the B'Nai B'Rith Town Lodge in suburban Mount Royal. "The moral standards are higher in politics than any other occupation, including business generally," Mr. Sharp said.

Nicklaus Leads Loot List

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The $20,000 Jack Nicklaus earned Sunday for winning the Masters golf championship shot him to the top of the Professional Golfers Association official money winning list with a total of $34,400 for the year.

Doug Sanders, who tied for 11th to win $1,550, dropped to second place from first with $30,707.78.

The new top 10 after the Masters payoff:

1. Jack Nicklaus $34,400
2. Douglas Sanders $30,707
3. Billy Casper $21,948
4. Bob Charlie $19,706
5. Dan Sikes $17,516
6. Sam Snead $16,100
7. Bruce Devlin $15,995
8. Arnold Palmer $15,740
9. Bert Weaver $15,640
10. Gary Player $15,000

Eyes On Memorial Cup

OTTAWA (CP)—Smiths Falls Bears clicked for two goals in the second period Saturday to take a 2-1 victory over Ottawa Montagnards and win a berth in the Memorial Cup quarter-finals at Sydney, N.S.

It was the deciding game in a best-of-five series for the Ottawa District Hockey Association's Junior A title.

Bears will play off with Sydney Cape Breton Post and Lachine, Que., Maroons in a round-robin event to decide who will enter the Eastern Canada Memorial Cup finals.

Mike Brazeau and Gordie Hamilton scored for Bears after Bob Byrnes had put Montagnards into a 1-0 lead in the first period.

Only seven minor penalties and a misconduct were called. None of the penalties figured in the scoring.

FORT WILLIAM (CP) — Rookie Bill Burns scored at 8:42 of a 10-minute overtime period to give Winnipeg Braves an 8-7 win over Port Arthur North Stars and a 2-1 lead in a best-of-seven Western Canada Memorial Cup hockey semi-final Sunday.

Burns connected with a long, high slapshot to climax Braves' rally.

The fourth game will be played here tonight. The winner meets either Regina Pats or Edmonton Oil Kings in the Western final.

REGINA (CP)—It took little Fran Huck just five seconds of overtime play Saturday to score Regina Pats' winning goal in a 5-2 victory over Edmonton Oil Kings in the Western Canada Memorial Cup semi-final series.

Pats went on to score two more goals in the 10-minute overtime session to take a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series which now shifts to Edmonton for games Monday, Wednesday and, if necessary, Thursday. Pats won the opener Friday 7-5.

Pres. Johnson Sometimes Calls Temporary Home, White House, Lonely Acres

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyndon Johnson says that U.S. presidency offers the best working conditions in the world, good pay, expert help in the fringe benefits that would be the envy of a maharajah.

Johnson once detailed the advantages of being president:

An annual salary of $100,000, plus $50,000 for expenses; free use of an historic mansion; around-the-clock assistance for experts in and out of government; a full staff of maids, cooks, valets and masseurs; a personal physician; use of a private air fleet to go anywhere anytime, and, most important, the personal satisfaction of grappling with the challenges of a job that is never done.

But, just as Harry Truman used to, call the White House "the finest jail in the world," Johnson sometimes refers to his temporary home as Lonely Acres and complains that he is being "locked up behind that big black iron fence."

Still, no one ever was dragged with kicking heels into the presidency, and certainly not Lyndon Johnson.

MOST POWERFUL OFFICE

For many men in public life, the presidency is the treasure at the end of the rainbow. It is one of the most powerful political offices.

The president is chief of state, and head of government. He is commander - in - chief of the armed forces, architect of foreign policy, principal initiator of legislation, leader of his political party and, by custom, elected "leader of the free world."

In a real sense, the presidency is a creature of modern times. And changing times often ignore, even thwart, the best laid plans of presidents.

For example, Herbert Hoover will forever be associated with the "chicken in every pot and car-gag," yet he is remembered as a hard-times president.

Johnson has his slogan: The Great Society. This, too, emphasizes the domestic concerns he knows best and in which, many believe, he operates most successfully. Just as Congress came to grips this year with Johnson's broad array of home front proposals, his attention was diverted to bloodshed in Viet Nam. And the president, for a time at least, had to devote 75 per cent of his attention to his responsibilities as commander - in - chief and architect of foreign policy.

ALWAYS ON MOVE

The driving force that makes Johnson tick impels him to maintain a dog-trot pace that slackens only when he takes his afternoon nap—on those days when he finds time to nap. Even in the swimming pool on the rubdown table or during deceptively rambling hikes around the back yard, Johnson is likely to be talking business.

The fact is that work, for Johnson, often is a mantra: He has brought to the presidency a zest for the job that probably hasn't been matched since the days of FDR.

Johnson insists on making all the big decisions and a multitude of small ones—some so minor few presidents would bother.

For most chief executives, Congress has been a thorn in the side. Kennedy, not long after taking office, remarked, "I used to wonder when I was a member of the house how President Truman got in so much trouble. Now I am beginning to get the idea. It is not difficult."

SENTIMENT SIMILAR

Abraham Lincoln expressed similar impatience with the legislative branch in an exchange with Senator Benjamin Wade of Ohio.

"Mr. President!" said Wade, "This attempted dictation, it is on the way to hell—on the way to hell, sir; it's only a mile from it!"

Lincoln gazed reflectively out his office window and replied, "Yes, Ben, that's the exact distance from here to the Capitol."

In Johnson's lexicon, defeat is something that happens to somebody else.

In pressing legislation, Johnson has an educated feel for just how far Congress can be nudged in any given direction. This sixth sense has been reflected in some startling boom or busts.

This caution has two offshoots:

1. Johnson does not commit himself to any course until the last possible moment.

2. The president carries secrecy to lengths unknown in recent years. He wants little or nothing said about policy-in-the making.

Koufax Tosses Three Innings

Reds Top Critics Loop With 19-9 Mark

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baseball's exhibition season has ended with Cincinnati Reds on top in the Grapefruit-Cactus standings and Sandy Koufax' priceless pitching arm on ice.

Despite an 8-1 loss to Chicago White Sox Sunday, the Reds paced major league clubs with a 19-9 record in pre-season play, which wound up Sunday night with Baltimore Orioles 5-0 victory over Houston at the Astros' $31,600,000 domed stadium. Regular - season races in the American and National Leagues begin today with openers in nine cities.

Koufax, the ailing Los Angeles Dodgers ace, tested his arch-ritic elbow for the first time in two weeks, working three scoreless innings in a 2-1 victory over Washington Senators, and then had the elbow encased in ice.

AWAITS REACTION

Sandy, who struck out the last five Senators he faced, said his arm felt great but added that he didn't know what the reaction would be. "It usually takes 24 hours before any reaction sets in," the 29-year-old southpaw said.

Houston's Nelson Fox set a Texas indoor record for breaking up extra - inning games when he singled home a 10th-inning run that gave the Astros a 3-2 afternoon nod over New York Yankees. Fox beat the Yankees Friday night with a 12th-inning single.

Milwaukee Braves completed a three-game sweep at Atlanta, their 1966 home, by nipping Detroit Tigers 3-2. St. Louis Cardinals edged Kansas City Athletics 6-5 on a three - run eighth-inning rally.

Pittsburgh Pirates whipped Philadelphia Phillies 5-1 on the four-hit pitching of Don Cardwell, Don Schwall and Al McBean. Home runs by Harry Bright, Leo Burke and Don Landrum powered Chicago Cubs past Boston Red Sox 10-3.

Cleveland Indians and Los Angeles Angels dropped their exhibition finales to Pacific Coast League clubs. Portland Beavers topped the Indians 6-5 in 10 innings and Seattle Rainiers nipped the Angels 1-0.

Woodstock Wins Opener

Sherbrooke Ousts Kingston

WOODSTOCK (CP)—Rouge-Noranda Aloueites probably wish right-winger Dino Leggio was still on their side.

Leggio was a standout performer with Noranda last season when they lost to Woodstock in the Ontario Allan Cup finals. This season, Leggio found himself wearing a Woodstock uniform and playing against his old teammates.

Leggio has been a one-man wrecking crew in the opening two games of the best-of-seven Eastern Canada semi - final round. He scored once Saturday night and set up two other goals to spark Woodstock to a 7-4 victory.

The Woodstock win gave the Athletics a 2-0 lead in the series. The next two games are scheduled for Thursday and Friday in Noranda.

Besides Leggio's goal, captain Gerry Riddle scored twice with singles going to Jack McIntyre, Toby Black, Bob Bishop and Art Sullivan.

Larry Paiement with two, Ray Ouimet and Ron Cloutier scored for Noranda.

The contest attracted only 700 fans.

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP)—Sherbrooke Beavers ousted Kingston Aces 10-5 Sunday to win the Allan Cup best-of-five eastern semi - final series in three straight games.

Throughout the series, the Beavers specialized in lopsided scores, winning the first two matches at Kingston by scores of 9-4 and 5-1.

Big gun for the Beavers was Simon Nolet who tallied twice and assisted on three other markers. Other two-goal men for the home team were Claude Cardin, Rejean Richer and Rod Beaudreault. Bob Dupres and Larry Drouin added one each.

Dave Jones was high scorer for the Aces, with two tallies. Other Kingston marksmen were Ron Earl, Dennis Kearns and Peter Robertson.

The Aces scored the first goal of the match at the 12-minute mark of the first period, but less than two minutes later, they were trailing 2-1.

The Ontario team managed to remain within one point of the Beavers at the end of the second period, but in the third frame, the Sherbrooke team caught fire and blasted 17 shots at Kingston goalie Tom Mercer. Five of the shots got by him, while his team was able to put only one past Beaver goalie Serge Aubry.

WINNIPEG (CP)—Warroad, Minn. Lakers crushed Transcona Lions 8-2 here Sunday to sweep their best-of-five Western Canada Allan Cup hockey semi-final.

Warroad won the first two games 5-1 and 7-1.

Former Winnipeg Maroon Ron Farnfield led the Lakers with four goals to bring his series total to seven.

NELSON, B.C. (CP)—Nelson Maple Leafs, led by Mike Laughton's three goals, took a commanding two-game lead in their best-of-five Western Allan Cup semi-final series Saturday night, bumbling Moose Jaw Pla-Mors 9-2.

The win followed their 7-1 victory over the Saskatchewan Senior Hockey League champions Friday. The series shifts to the Prairie city Friday.

Opens On Both Fronts

Baseball Bugles Sound 'Play Ball' Today

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson, Boston Red Sox and Washington Senators — a president and two baseball teams in need of better luck — open the 1965 American League baseball season here today.

Opening day 1965 is a break with tradition. Normally Washington and Cincinnati have it to themselves. Cincinnati getting price of place in the National League because of its status as baseball's official birthplace. This year seven other cities get into the act.

Only Baltimore Orioles and Chicago White Sox, who open Tuesday at Baltimore, remain on the sidelines.

The first-day card includes three night games, one of them first official big - league indoor contest in which Philadelphia Phillies formally inaugurate Houston Astros' new domed stadium.

New York Yankees, perennial American League favorites, open on the road against Minnesota Twins. Johnny Keane, the new Yankee manager, has nominated Jim Bouton to oppose Jim Kaat.

St. Louis Cardinals, the Yankees' World Series conquerors last fall and Keane's former employers, start in Chicago under Hockey Schoendienst. World Series hero Bob Gibson is the Cardinal starter against Larry Jackson of the Cubs, whose 24 victories topped the majors last season.

Co-favored with the Cards in the National League, Cincinnati Reds send Jim O'Toole against Tony Cloninger in their home debut against Milwaukee Braves. New York Mets entertain Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants visit Pittsburgh Pirates in the other National League openers.

In the AL, the Boston-Washington and New York-Minnesota inaugural share billing with Kansas City, where Detroit Tigers face the Athletics in a night game, and Los Angeles, where Cleveland Indians provide the opposition for the Angels.

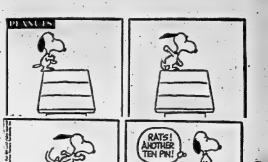
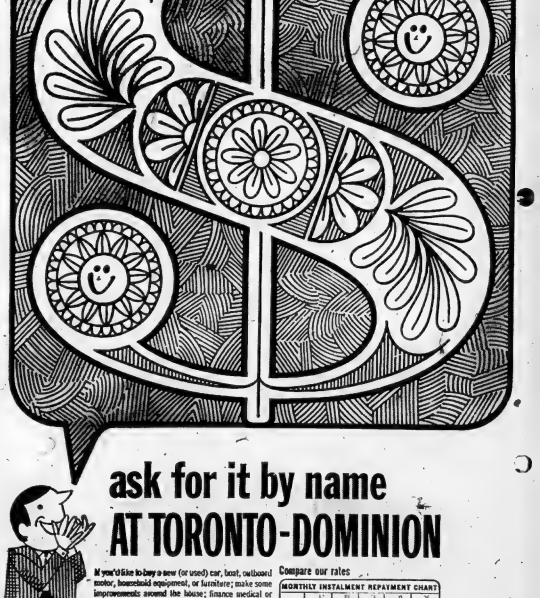
City Elks Midgets Lose To Kingston



In an exhibition midget hockey game over the weekend, Belleville and Kingston Elk teams tangled with Kingston grabbing an 8-1 victory.

Elk Black Hawks were midget division champions in Belleville. Kingston led 2-0 half way through the game and outscored Belleville 6-1 in the second half.

D. McCormack scored the lone Belleville goal and the fine netminding of Terry Burns helped prevent a higher score for the winners.



M. Babcock, L. Veeley and R. Smith scored two goals each for Kingston Elks, M. Douglas and S. Nicholson adding the others.

This was the first year for the Elks' sponsorship in Belleville but they report plans are already under way to participate in next season's minor hockey, "a most worthwhile community project."

Reporters Get a Peek At Industrial Russia

By JOHN BEST

DONETSK, Ukraine (CP)—You get a strong whiff of industrial power here in the Donbass.

The area helped mightily to shoulder the Soviet Union into a position of economic strength at two well-defined points in her history.

And though eclipsed now to some extent by the more remote and less vulnerable Urals, it still bulks large in the calculations of Soviet state planners.

It is called the Donbass because it is in the basin of the Don River.

It is also a great coal basin. Anatoly Zaharov, deputy chairman of the regional economic council, says output now is 167,500,000 tons a year. The production curve still points upward.

Centre of the region is Donetsk, a city of 850,000 about 800 miles south of Moscow, or one hour and 35 minutes by jet-prop airliner.

Though only about 100 miles from the Crimea, Donetsk is no stranger to a deep freeze. When the wind whips in from the steppe, accompanied by chill gusts of snow, the place is as wintry as the U.S.S.R.'s northern wilderness.

CURTAIN LIFTED A BIT

People on spacious Artcoma Street—the main thoroughfare, named after a revolutionary figure—don't tarry at such times. They scurry.

Soviet authorities have been traditionally super - sensitive about allowing foreigners to visit Soviet industrial areas.

Recently, for the first time since 1958, a group of Moscow-based foreign correspondents was taken on an organized visit to the Donbass. They got little more than a peek, however.

The correspondents were shown two mines, two medium-size machine-building plants, a chemical plant and an industrial-design institute.

The tour was confined to Donetsk itself and nearby mining towns. It did not include Zhdanov, 50 miles south of here on the Sea of Azov, home of a big metallurgical industry based on Donbass coal.

There is reported to be a steel mill at Zhdanov employing 35,000 persons.

Zaharov, a 400-ruble-a-month former miner, told a press conference here that in addition to mining and heavy industry the Donbass has a wide assortment of light industries including food processing, shoe manufacturing, textile and textile paint factories, nylon and plastic manufactures.

Many, including the last two, derive from coal or its by-products.

MOST TARGETS ACHIEVED

Zaharov pointed to an electric wall map. White bulbs indicated enterprises that had not fulfilled their 1964 production plans, red lights those that did not fulfill them.

At the flick of a switch, the map lit up into a blur of red lights. Before the few glimmerings of white could be counted by reporters, the map was switched off again.

Donbass coal deposits were first developed on a significant scale in the 1870s and 1880s, largely with the use of foreign capital.

That was at the start of a long period of intense industrialization in Russia. It continued until the First World War and was fuelled to a crucial extent by Donbass coal.

In the late 1920s and 1930s, Donbass resources played a key role in the implementation of the first Soviet five-year plans.

This young city, just 100 years old, has the unmistakable look of a high-wage centre, much the same as many industrial centres in North America. The people appear to have a fair amount of ready cash to spend, by Soviet standards.

PAY IS GOOD

Miners here make up to 340 rubles a month including bonuses and overtime, an exceptionally high wage in a country where 100 rubles is considered pretty good.

A ruble is worth $1.20 Canadian at the official Soviet exchange rate but its buying power is actually far less than that of the Canadian dollar.

When Zaharov, the economic council deputy chairman, states proudly that there are 25,000 private cars among the miners, he is quoting another unusual statistic.

This means one car for about every 20 miners—there are 495,000 in the Donbass altogether. Yet this is a far better ratio than in most regions of the Soviet Union.

In bustling Tashkent, for example, there is one motor vehicle for every 36 people, and almost all the vehicles are state-owned trucks.

The Donetsk area is liberally sprinkled with so-called "palaces of culture," combined recreation and reading-indoctrination centres for off-duty workers.

DANCE THE TWIST

But while playing chess or reading dissertations on Marxism and Leninism may be some miners' cup of tea, others have decidedly different tastes in leisure-time activity.

One of their favorite haunts is the new Ugolek restaurant, a spacious and brightly-lit place whose name, loosely translated, means "little piece of coal."

Here, after a hard day's work underground, they can eat good food and drink vodka, dance to a hot seven-piece orchestra with a weakness for twist numbers, and generally let off steam.

There are rumpuses, near-fights and the occasional belting match. Several policemen are always on hand in the lobby, ready for trouble.

The Ugolek is perhaps best characterized by the remark of a taxi driver who drove a small group of us away from it one night after it had closed.

"You don't look as though you've been to that restaurant," he remarked, rather puzzled, looking around at each of us in turn. "You're not drunk enough."

COAL CENTRE — Donetsk, a city of 850,000 about 500 miles south of Moscow, is the centre of a great industrial region known as the Donbass — the basin of the Don River. Foreign correspondents recently were allowed into the area for the first time since 1958. Picture shows apartment blocks where Donetsk industrial workers live. In the background is an omnipresent slag heap, typical of the area's industrial might. (CP Photo)

Police Chief Asked to Resign

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Police Chief Guy Chauncey of Mersea Township has been asked to resign.

Police Committee Chairman Leonard Campbell said at Leamington, 35 miles southeast of here, that the resignation is to take effect in mid-May and that a replacement will not be announced until after further consultations have been held with the Ontario Police Commission.

Chief Constable Chauncey has been asked to submit his resignation April 15. He assumed his duties more than a year ago.

Chief Chauncey said Saturday he would reserve comment on the committee's action, but that he would also take up the matter of his resignation with the Ontario Police Commission.

Still Counting Tornadoes' Toll; 5,000 Injured

Many People Missing In 6 Mid-West States

CHICAGO (AP) — The mid-western United States was still counting its dead today as the Palm Sunday tornadoes claimed their 248th victim. Many more are missing in the stricken six-state area.

"The Red Cross said at least 5,000 persons were injured. Incomplete estimates listed damage at $237,000,000.

Officials in Indiana, where 141 persons were battered to death by a series of twisters, carefully combed through debris in fields, homes and businesses in a hunt for more victims.

"I think we'll find more bodies," predicted Sheriff Woody Salon of Elkhart County, Ind. The tornadoes claimed 63 victims in the Elkhart area alone.

Similar searches, coupled with vast cleanup operations, took place in Ohio and Michigan, where the grim Sunday twisters caused 33 and 44 deaths, respectively.

Seven persons were killed in Illinois and three in Wisconsin. A tornado seriously injured an Kansas farmer but no deaths were reported there.

The cleanup operations were hampered by power shortages, damaged communications systems, highways strewn with debris and, in many places, heavy fog.

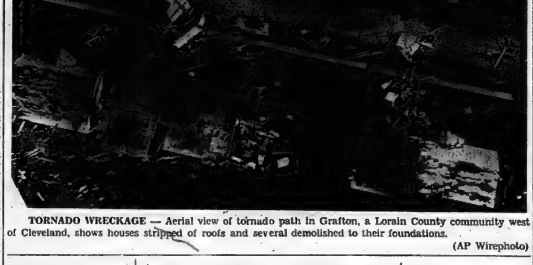
Hospitals and families were plagued by the possibility of water shortages and health perils. Many pumping systems failed to operate.

The tornadoes Sunday first were sighted in Iowa and then moved to the east, increasing with intensity with every strike. Destruction was so great in some areas that officials said it was impossible to estimate damage.

Elkhart, Ind., officials placed the tornado cost at $100,000,000 to $150,000,000. Ohio estimated damage at $50,000,000, Michigan at $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 at $12-000,000 and Wisconsin at $5,000-000.

The barrage of tornadoes was the worst disaster in Indiana history.

Two towns, Russiaville and Alto, were wiped off the map.



Some highways remained blocked by debris. Traffic elsewhere does ripped three wide swaths through the central and northern sections of Indiana.

Battered bodies, many in shredded clothing, packed morgues set up in high school gymnasiums and stores.

"It's as close to hell as I care to be," said one weary reporter who toured the disaster area.

North Viet Nam Also Refuses To Talk To Envoy

Walker Will Still Go On Tour of Far East

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — Britain's special peace envoy, Patrick Gordon Walker, today expressed deep disappointment with the refusal of China and North Viet Nam to allow him into their countries to discuss possible solutions to the South Viet Nam crisis.

But he intimated a belief that this refusal may buckle under the pressure of the 11 non-aligned countries.

On the eve of his two-week fact-finding trip to the Far East, Gordon Walker, a former foreign secretary, told a press conference it is no use in interest to fight a major war and that in the end "an honorable compromise" must be found.

Dismissing any suggestion that his scheduled trip, starting Wednesday, has been made futile by the refusal of Hanoi and Peking to discuss the Viet Nam issue with him, Gordon Walker said he still is going, hoping that the Chinese and the North Vietnamese will change their minds before his trip 8 over.

REPLIES 'DISCOURAGING'

Gordon Walker said that although he had received "discouraging replies" from Peking and Hanoi, "nonetheless I am leaving time in my itinerary for visits to both these capitals, and I hope to visit them either now or later."

"I do not believe that this can be their last word and that they will continue to refuse even to discuss the possibilities of peace."

Gordon Walker was named to survey the situation in South-East Asia as a special representative of Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart. He leaves Wednesday for Malaysia. From there he will visit Thailand, South Viet Nam, Laos, Burma and Japan.

Peking radio, in announcing Monday that Gordon Walker was not welcome, said:

"As a co-chairman of the 1954 Geneva conference, the British government has not only failed to just stand by condemning and trying to stop this naked aggression on the part of the United States—has been shipping each step taken by the United States in expanding its war of aggression. . ."

The British government, in a court note to Peking, said its reply was "in terms which are as unconstructive as they are unacceptable."

"Her Majesty's government sincerely hope that, in the interests of a settlement, this attitude will be reconsidered," the British note said.

From AP-Reuters

SAIGON (CP) — U.S. and South Vietnamese planes bombed North Viet Nam again a few hours after terrorist mortar fire killed 32 persons in attacks near the northern border.

A U.S. spokesman released a report that Joseph B. Grainger, a 39-year-old official with the U.S. economic assistance mission in Pin Yen province, 230 miles northwest of Saigon, was shot and killed by his Communist captors last Jan. 31 after he escaped for seven days.

Grainger was captured last Aug. 8 in an ambush with a Filipino assistant and the South Vietnamese manager of a sugar experiment station.

The U.S. spokesman said informed eyewitnesses had reported his death.

In the air war, seven Vietnamese Air Force Skyraiders bombed and destroyed the Thanh Yen bridge in North Viet Nam 70 miles north of the South Vietnamese border today, a South Vietnamese spokesman announced.

U.S. PLANES ATTACK

The spokesman said the anti-aircraft fire was "relatively heavy" but no planes were downed.

U.S. marine F-4 Phantom jet planes went into action for the first time in South Viet Nam and hit two concentrations of Viet Cong guerrillas north of the Da Nang air base.

U.S. Navy planes from 7th Fleet carriers in the South China Sea also were reported in action.

Earlier in the day, Viet Cong mortars had hit three targets in Quang Tri, 70 miles south of the North Vietnamese border. The mortar fire killed 32 South Vietnamese civilians and two soldiers and wounded 18 others, including three Americans.

One of the targets was the headquarters of the U.S. military assistance command. Three of 25 rounds fired fell inside the compound, wounding the three Americans and a South Vietnamese interpreter, a U.S. spokesman said.

The civilians were killed when the guerrillas fired about 100 mortar shells into the housing area of a command post of the 11th Vietnamese Army artillery battalion. The post is at Le Vang, near Quang Tri.

The guerrillas also fired 20

Safety Box Looting Skilled Job

MONTREAL (CP) — Police officers investigating the skilled looting of 400 safety boxes a day from a bank in northwest Montreal say it will take some time to determine the exact amount but that it is expected to be more than $1,000,000.

Well-equipped thieves broke into a store adjoining the Royal Bank branch at the Van Horne shopping centre and crawled along the space between the roof and the ceiling until they were above the bank vault.

Using torches and drills—with six diamond bits valued at $300 each—the thieves cut a hole through the roof of the vault and started opening the boxes. They left the equipment behind, as well as chocolate bar wrappers.

An investigating officer said there was no alarm system in the concrete wall of the vault or in the walls themselves.

A bank spokesman said there was no insurance on the safety deposit boxes "because we don't know what's in them."

WILL TAKE TIME

The unknown contents of the boxes mean it will take some time "to piece together what has happened," Robert Morrell, a supervisor for the Royal Bank's Montreal branches, said.

In similar holdups, police said some owners of the boxes were reluctant to come forward to describe their losses. Investigators indicated the wealth may not have been declared for income tax purposes.

After looting the boxes, the thieves escaped by the roof of the adjoining store. The theft could have taken place any time between 6 p.m. Sunday and Monday morning.

Before they left, the thieves jammed the locks of the bank's main door and the burglar alarm system. A locksmith was needed to open the door and the burglar alarm system belatedly rang for more than an hour when police finally got it working.

Worried depositors were kept out of the bank the whole day by investigators.

Members Work For Recess

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP)—With a final flurry, the Commons today set out to ignore meal breaks and the clock in an effort to wrap up the throne speech debate and take a 12-day Easter recess.

And providing the government is not defeated in the final confidence motion of the debate tonight—an event considered highly unlikely—the House will resume April 26 to hear Finance Minister Gordon bring down his budget. Then, barring an election call, it will be on to the monumental legislative program outlined in the throne speech.

As the Commons continued to churn through the debate Monday, the minority Liberal government easily turned back another non-confidence motion and heard enough suggestions to fill another throne speech.

The non-confidence motion came from Lucien Plourde (Gaudellas—Quebec West) who sought to censure the government because it did not raise personal income tax exemptions to $5,000 for married taxpayers and $2,500 for single persons.

The 78 Liberals on hand to oppose the motion drew support from 32 Conservatives, 12 New Democrats, three Social Credit members and one independent.

Votes for the motion came from 11 Creditistes, 20 Conservatives and one Social Credit member.

Mississippi Ice Jams Give, Minnesota Floods Deepen

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—Ice jams on tributaries and on the Mississippi River north of the twin cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis began crumbling today, releasing threatened waters on flooded sections of southern Minnesota.

The Minnesota flooding, which has made more than 20,000 homeless and caused more than $20,000,000 damage, was expected to become more widespread.

There were six known dead in Minnesota, all by drowning. However, a young worker on a dike at south St. Paul was believed to have been swept away by the flooding Mississippi Monday and still is missing.

Rain was forecast later in the day for southern Minnesota.

At St. Paul, where the Mississippi has been harnessed between dikes that reach 28 feet, the river started to rise sharply late Monday when ice jams 50 to 60 miles northward began breaking up.

The river stood at 22.75 feet early today and civil defence officials estimated it would rise to 25 feet by noon today at St. Paul. It is expected to crest at 27 to 27.5 feet Friday, just under the top of the dike.

Heavy damage was reported as water seeped through the bank of sandbags surrounding much of the city.

Thousands of volunteers joined with national guardsmen and city workers to staunch floodwalls.

The Crow River flooded Monday at St. Cloud, north of the Twin Cities and an ice jam at Coon Rapids on the Mississippi broke up with tremendous force late in the day.

Governor Karl Rolvaag, who Saturday asked that 39 Minnesota counties be designated disaster areas, added five counties to this group Monday because rivers in the western and northwestern portions of the state had begun flooding and causing evacuation.

At Chaska, southwest of the Twin Cities, the Minnesota River had flooded nearly the entire town of 2,500 persons. The water level here yesterday at 34 feet 3ins. The predicted crest was 34.5 feet.

Downstream, the Mississippi was causing only little flooding mostly because dike work was well advanced when the river began to rise last week.

Across the Mississippi River in Wisconsin, La Crosse expected a flood crest of 18 feet by Sunday. If that happens, officials said as much as four feet of water would swamp nearby areas.

Nearly four feet of water already has spilled into the main street of Schofield, in central Wisconsin.

Residents were evacuated and scores of businesses flooded. State highways were shut down because of the water.

Charge Quickly Denied

TORONTO (CP) — NDP Leader Donald C. MacDonald charged Monday that a contribution to Conservative party funds is a requirement for an Ontario liquor licence, but drew a quick denial from a cabinet minister.

Mr. MacDonald said that Rudi Bergauer, a Port Arthur restaurant operator, was denied a liquor licence because he refused to contribute to the Conservative party, and introduced a letter from Mines Minister George Wardrope in support of the charge.

Mr. Wardrope, who represents Port Arthur in the legislature, later issued a statement denying that he or anyone connected with the Conservative party had ever approached Mr. Bergauer for a contribution, claiming Mr. MacDonald had made "typically unwarranted allegations. . ."

He acknowledged that he wrote to Mr. Bergauer Dec. 2, 1963, and told him the liquor licence board expected to have approved his application by Dec. 15. Mr. Wardrope told reporters his information came from H. J. Browne, the board registrar.

But on Jan. 9, Mr. Bergauer received a letter from Mr. Browne saying his application for a licence had been turned down. It was Mr. Bergauer's second refusal.

Mines Minister G. Wardrope Defends His Windfall Role

TORONTO (CP)—Mines Minister George Wardrope of Ontario said Monday his actions in connection with the stock market activity of Windfall Oils and Mines Limited last July were taken with a view to "seeing everything that properly can be done to encourage the development of the province."

"Lacking specific knowledge to the contrary," he told a royal commission, "there seemed to be good reason to hope that Windfall, because of its proximity to the Texas Gulf discovery, might develop into a producing mine."

The commission is investigating the climb of Windfall stock to $5.20 from 56 cents and its subsequent collapse to 80 cents between July 3 and July 31 last year.

The rise started on rumors Windfall had found ore on its property 4½ miles from the $2,000,000,000 strike made by Texas Gulf Sulphur Company at Timmins.

On Friday, July 10, the Toronto Stock Exchange threatened to suspend Windfall shares unless the company made a statement justifying the stock's activity.

Mr. Wardrope said that the next day he received a call from John Campbell, then director of the Ontario Securities Commission, who was suspended in August for what was described as a possible conflict of interest.

Mr. Wardrope said Mr. Campbell requested a meeting the following day to discuss the Windfall situation.

He said that at the meeting Mr. Campbell showed him a statement which the exchange had rejected as inadequate. He said Mr. Campbell told him he could not find out what additional information the exchange required.

He said that at Mr. Campbell's suggestion he called Lt.-Gen. Howard Graham, president of the exchange, to find out.

He said Gen. Graham told him that all the exchange wanted was to discover whether an assay had been done on the Windfall drill core, what was in

Highly Intelligent Civilization Unknown to Earth Man May Exist

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Soviet astronomers attired scientists around the world Monday by suggesting that mysterious radio signals from outer space are evidence that there a highly intelligent civilization exists unknown to earth man.

Many scientists in other countries, although cautious, refuse to rule out the possibility.

The Soviet news agency Tass said some scientists at Moscow's Sternberg Astronomy Institute believe the throbbing signals may be "the first evidence that we are not alone in the universe."

One Soviet astronomer, Nikolai Kardashev, asserted "a new super-civilization has been discovered." A colleague, Iosef Shklovsky, gave a more cautious assessment, stating that "to say the least, an absolutely new, still unknown type of cosmic object has been dejected in the galaxy."

The Russian astronomers and their supporters elsewhere based their claim of the possibility of life in outer space on fluctuating radio signals first heard by Canadian radio telescopes in 1960. They come from an invisible spot in space, too distant to be seen by even the most advanced optical telescopes.

Two such invisible sources of radio signals have been catalogued by the California Institute of Technology as CTA-21 and CTA-102. What they are is still unknown, but two years ago an American-British team of astronomers deemed them worthy of special study.

Now the Russians say CTA-102's signals fluctuate regularly in strength, with the variations

Red China Steps up Foreign Aid In Bid to Reduce U. S. Influence

NEW DELHI (AP)—The Chinese have been busy with a big smile and a fistful of cash. He is embraced, garlanded and ushered up into a shiny limousine.

This is a familiar sight in many Asian capitals as Peking steps up its economic diplomacy.

The Chinese have sizable aid programs under way in several countries important to Peking's plans for the future.

Though Peking's cash outlay is small compared to the West's, the Chinese obviously are straining to compete with the United States, West Germany and Britain in carefully selected and controlled projects.

Premier Chou En-lai and Peking's No. 2 salesman, Chen Yi, have been criss-crossing Pakistan, Afghanistan and Nepal. Other Chinese officials have visited Burma, Indonesia and Ceylon.

Central goals of their activity are the reduction of U.S. influence and the isolation of India from Asian politics, except for Ceylon, the Chinese seem to be succeeding.

The price the Chinese pay for this success is difficult to pin down. Aid programs often are hidden in manipulated loan and trade agreements. But in the last two months, the Chinese have spent at least $88,000,000 in Afghanistan and Pakistan, in addition to promising Nepal an increase in aid, now totalling almost $42,000,000.

This fits a pattern of increased Chinese spending in underdeveloped Asian and African nations. Statistics compiled in Tokyo indicate Peking spent more than $300,000,000 on aid in 1964—a six-fold increase over 1963.

Pakistan has 20 years to repay a $80,000,000 loan. There is no interest charged and the principal can be paid off in Pakistani goods exported to China.

China has become the largest buyer of Ceylon's rice crop, the largest supplier of Ceylon's cloth. Peking pays Nepal an export subsidy for rice to China, a hard foreign exchange—a tremendous sum in Nepal—to buy rice for Chinese in Tibet.

Often, on the surface at least, the only payment the Chinese ask is a vague joint communique condemning "colonialism and imperialism" and calling for Asian-African solidarity.

How China spares the cash for all this is something of a mystery.

Boys Need Parents Too, Children's Aid Supervisor Has 'Surplus' for Adoption

"Boys need parents too" says Mrs. Janette Thompson, adoption supervisor of the Children's Aid Society, commenting on the recent attendance at an adoption placement conference in Toronto. There she met with representatives of thirty other Children's Aid Societies from across Ontario. The purpose of the meeting was to find homes for those children for whom local homes were not available and for those children who because of their identity, should be placed away from their home area.

"On the whole the conferences was disappointing. Many agencies, including our own, had a number of normal, healthy boys from infancy to 12 years of age who needed adopting parents. Few homes were offered for these boys. On the other hand unless a little girl had a particular handicap or a mixed racial background there were at least half a dozen homes suggested. Surely little boys are just as rewarding for people who want to be parents."

Mrs. Thompson also says that for the first time in many years the local Children's Aid Society now finds that it has more Protestant infants available for adoption than there are applicants. She felt that there must be many couples in Hastings County who would be interested in adoption. Perhaps they have been discouraged by false reports that it takes years to adopt and that there is a lot of red tape involved. Some people incorrectly believe that it is necessary to have a large income and own their own home.

She mentioned one project presently being undertaken by the society is an attempt to contact parents who have previously adopted two children and might now be interested in a third child. As recently as two years ago third placements were considered unusual because of the shortage of infants available for adoption. People were encouraged to consider two children their complete family. Now the Children's Aid is asking these people in reconsider and would be pleased to hear from any of them who feel they have room for one more.

Mrs. Thompson would welcome written inquiries from any interested in Hastings County interested in knowing more about adoption.

Traffic Lights For Coleman And Moira Sts.

Tenders for the supply of traffic lights for installation at the corner of Coleman and Moira Streets have been accepted to be called in the near future according to city engineer William Perrault.

Actual installation of the lights, however, is still about two months away with this not expected to get underway until some time in June.

Also planned for this accident prone intersection is the construction of concrete islanding to channel turning traffic.

Traffic lights at the corner of North Front and College Streets are also to be changed as part of the rebuilding program of this artery to get underway this summer.

Because of the heavy volume of traffic now entering this intersection, the present traffic actuated light will be taken out and replaced by conventional timed units such as are at downtown intersections. Also high-type traffic light heads will be installed.

It is expected that the surplus equipment can be utilized in some other location in the city for which traffic lights are required.

HELMETS BASHED

LONDON (CP) — The famous tall helmet worn by more than 50,000 Britain's policemen "has about as much protective power as the average bowler hat," says the British Safety Council. The council says it is time "this old-fashioned, quite useless helmet was thrown away in favor of some new headgear which could prevent injury."

Council Wants Y to pay Taxes 'Forgiven' Years Ago

A matter of back taxes owed by the Belleville YMCA prompted the city council yesterday to delay passing a by - law exempting the "Y" from payment of its 1965 general tax rate.

The "Y" amount in question is something in the order of $4,500, representing three years taxes which were "forgiven" then or more years ago on the understanding that it would be paid by the "Y" if the Campbell Street building was sold.

The old YMCA has been sold to the city and is being renovated as a police headquarters and council feels the "Y" should live up to its agreement.

Yesterday council was told that YMCA directors were giving consideration to the matter back taxes but city manager J. R. Reynolds said he had received no word following a March meeting of the board, when it was to be discussed.

Each year council passes a by - law exempting the "Y" from payment of its general tax rate, but local improvement and school taxes still must be paid. In addition to forgiving the "Y" its general rate taxes, the city makes an annual grant to the YMCA.

Twp. Motion Turned Down By Council

City council doesn't want the province of Ontario to contribute directly towards the cost of its municipal police force and has turned down a resolution from Sidney township calling for such special grants.

The Sallflect resolution was one of several considered by council at its regular session yesterday. The Sallflect resolution was turned down at the suggestion of Mayor J. R. Ellis who said it was a direct contravention to the policy adopted by the Ontario Mayors and Reeves.

He said that the Mayors and Reeves felt that special grants towards police forces would mean the loss of local autonomy.

Included among resolutions approved by council was one from the city of London requesting the federal government to make funds available for the construction of all educational buildings, and also one from the town of Riverside asking that a further exemption of income tax be allowed persons over 65 as a relief from the requirement of paying of school property taxes.

Council turned down a New Toronto resolution requesting the Ontario government to enact legislation permitting municipalities to reduce the speed limit to 15 miles per hour on streets passing schools.

Council Gives Moral Support To Flying Club

Belleville city council will give its moral support to the Prince Edward Flying Club in its efforts to acquire full-time civilian use of the runways at the Mountain View air port now still in use by the RCAF.

In making the request for the city's support, Picton Flying Club officials said that in their opinion Mountain View would present for the Quinte district an airport centrally located and suitable for the accommodation of all present and future aircraft used by modern industry.

"We see too many communities burdened by inadequate airfields that will not even accommodate even today's business aircraft," the request said.

The Prince Edward Flying Club hopes to take over and is negotiating for full time use of the Mountain View air field when it becomes surplus to military needs.

It now has privileges at the field on summer weekends and on holidays.

Housewives on Elmer St. Getting Bogus Phone Calls, Deliveries of Many Articles

A prankster with a morbid tinge to a twisted sense of humor today is being sought by Belleville police after 24 hours of havoc along the city's Elmer Street.

Housewives along the street have been turning away a stream of food deliveries, police cruisers and foot traffic, requested by bogus phone calls.

One of the calls brought a sudden panic to at least one resident.

An airman, living on Elmer Street, returned home from the Trenton airbase last evening to see a hearse parked in his driveway. The shock was compounded by the fact his five-year-old son suffers leukemia.

The victims have been ordered to remain anonymous, perhaps fearing their complaints might encourage the prankster to further encourage is mgchidity.

The stream of calls started with police being called in to the house of the same airman mentioned above. Before the day was out they had been called a second time. In between, the airman's wife hurried away from her door a trucker hasting call, a cab driver with an order of fried chicken and an ambulance.

She also received an unidentified phone call from a man asking for "what inscription you'd like on your tombstone."

NEIGHBORS CALLED

"I don't think it's anybody with a grudge, the way they are just selecting people," said the airman's wife.

However, she confessed to being quite upset over the hearse and ambulance incidents, because of her son's condition.

This morning however, brought her relief.

There were no more calls at her home — but neighbors on both sides were now under fire from the prankster.

By noon, one woman had answered the door to a TV repairman, a cleaners' deliveryman, and a fuel oil serviceman.

"I don't know what's coming next," she said.

Also failing victims to the bogus barrage were the businesses answering the phoney calls. The nuisance for them also runs into money.

"Whoever it is, young or old," said one businessman, "they must be pretty useless. Useless—and sick."

Woman Fined $25 for Theft Of Paper

Theft of a ten-cent morning newspaper today brought a $25 fine for a Belleville woman—her fingers and hand stetched from newspaper street boxes was becoming frequent in the city.

Victim of the thefts is Hugh Watson, who holds the franchise for distributing the Globe and Mail in the area.

Mr. Watson, after discovering only 22 cents paid for five papers been watch on his North Front St. stand.

Detective Inspector Harold Reid said the accused woman, who pleaded guilty, was seen taking a paper for which she had deposited a penny.

Inspector Reid said Mr. Watson has had considerable trouble at the spot of his paper boxes—but more so at this corner."

Crown Attorney John Pringle said the corner boxes were for the convenience and theft from them was "barefaced."

"I'm not asking for any jail sentence, but I think the paper should be made corresponding-ly expensive."

repeating themselves every 100 days in a manner unlike any other heavenly body.

The Russians, as well as other scientists, have suggested the radio signals may actually be the work of highly intelligent beings attempting to communicate from far out in space. If so, they probably would be thousands or even millions of light years away.

In Washington, astronomers said the signals will need a lot more study before they can be accepted as proof of the existence of life elsewhere. But they did not reject the possibility that there may be many planets in the universe with intelligent beings and some are trying to communicate with the earth.

At Britain's Jodrell Bank Observatory, a spokesman said it had not detected any variation in signal strength of CTA-102.

Fred Haddock, a radio astronomer at the University of Michigan, said "if they indeed have signals of regularly varying intensity, that's indeed be something new in the field."

He described the two Russians—Kardashev and Shklovskiy—as respected men in their fields, but added:

"... just the first exclude all possible natural causes before accepting the hypothesis of a 'new super-civilization.'"

Three Injured In Collision Near Frankford

A traffic crash southeast of Frankford yesterday sent the occupants of two cars to hospital with minor injuries.

Mrs. Ross Fleming, R.R. 2, Frankford, received a broken arm; her husband and Lorraine Bate, R.R. 1 Wooler, were treated for cuts and bruises at Trenton Memorial Hospital.

They were injured when cars driven by Miss Bate and Mr. Fleming collided on the River Road, a mile southwest of Frankford.

Cost of Study Will Be $1,200 Council Told

The much talked of and long proposed College East side bridge was again up for discussion at city council yesterday as council was asked to approve the engineering services agreement between the city and Damas and Smith, who have been retained to do a pre-engineering study for the bridge.

Cost of the engineering study for the bridge, one of three phases in the overall project, will be $1,200. The second and third phases would be studies for approaches and other aspects.

The recommendation calling for approval of the engineering agreement made no mention of the cost of a pre-engineering study.

On question from Ald. Don Joss, council was told by Ald. J. Deacon the cost of the initial phase of the study would be $1,200. He was unable to say what the cost would be for the second and third phases of the study.

Council some weeks ago approved of having the pre-engineering study but when the bridge will be proceeded with has not been decided.

Parents Are Not Satisfied With Division of Zones

TRENTON — V. P. Carswell, the supervising principal of Trenton's public schools, is finding that "you can't please all of the people all of the time," said that indeed, you can't "please some of the people any of the time."

Beset with an exploding school population, the members of the Trenton Board of Education this year are building a new eight-room school on Reid Street in northeast Trenton, (the school is to be named the V. P. Carswell Elementary School). The school is being built to relieve crowding conditions in two other east Trenton schools, College Street and Queen Elizabeth.

At the request of the board, Mr. Carswell last month put a great deal of effort into "drawing" east Trenton into three zones. Children living on certain streets and all of that are to attend the Reid Street School. South of this boundary line, they will go to College or Queen Elizabeth.

Some of the parents whose offsprings have been allocated either to College or Queen Elizabeth, have complained their children would be better off at whichever school their children had not been allocated for.

At a school board meeting last night, Mr. Carswell and the board members were told by an Edwards Street delegation, headed by Orval Lisk, that in the "interests of the safety of the children," all children living south of the CPR tracks, (which are south of the site of the Reid Street School), should be allowed to attend Queen Elizabeth School.

Mr. Lisk said children living south of the tracks would have to walk to the Queen's site which has no sidewalk and either cross the tracks or pass through the underpass which also has no walkway and in wet weather is inundated with water.

CROSS TRACKS FOR YEARS

Mr. Carswell explained that if he re-allocated the 31 children concerned in Mr. Lisk's request to Queen Elizabeth, the students at this school would again lose the use of the gymnatorium, which would have to be used as a classroom. Furthermore, under this arrangement, one room at the new school would be lost.

Mr. Lisk said that he thought "the safety of the children should be the major factor of consideration than the population of a school."

Mr. Carswell pointed out that children living on the north side of the tracks had been crossing over the tracks to attend the other two schools for many years.

Mr. Lisk and several other members of his delegation countered this argument by saying that the parents of these children had known of the existing conditions before buying or building north of the tracks, whereas the parents living on Edwards Street and northward to the tracks were having the new zoning "thrust upon them," (in effect).

Board chairman T. S. Ketcheson then promised to explore the possibilities" of the town building a sidewalk on Sidney Street and under the subway.

"But I don't know what is in the public works' budget for a sidewalk on Sidney Street," he warned.

Mr. Ketcheson will take a suggestion advanced by yet another delegation to last night's meeting to the traffic committee, of which he is a member. Frederick Thurott, heading the delegation, asked that the speed limit be reduced to 25 mph from 30 mph on Sidney Street used by children started to the Reid Street school.

Board member Louis Aziz said 15 mph. in a school zone seemed more realistic.

WANT MORE GUARDS

Mr. Ketcheson and the other board members will also recommend to council that an additional school guard be placed in the Wilson Crescent-Gould St. area of Sidney Street in the fall.

Meanwhile, the board has voted to hire Arno Hall as principal of the V.P. Carswell School. Mr. Hall, a B.A., comes highly recommended, from the principalship of a school near Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

The board has had another school problem placed in its lap, that of supplying space in Prince Charles School for "potential" students from the proposed new sub-division on Dufferin Ave., besides the school, the housing development, (25 houses) is being contemplated by the Downs-Coulter interests. Some of the children from the new area would probably attend St. Peter's School, and some the high school.

mortar rounds at the district headquarters of Hai Lang, killing two Vietnamese soldiers and wounding six civil police men and nine civilians.

Quang Tri is the capital of South Viet Nam's northernmost province. It's about 25 miles from the coastal city of Hue, recently reinforced with U.S. marines to protect American installations there.

MARINES ARRIVE

The latest guerrilla action came as more U.S. marines landed to bolster the defences of the U.S. strategic air base at Da Nang with jets and heavy artillery amid suspicions the Viet Cong were massing artillery in the area and preparing for a major offensive.

But Da Nang air base, a U.S. marine mortar crew accidentally killed a South Vietnamese peasant Monday, arousing fear the Communists would use the mishap to stir up demonstrations a gainst the 7,500 Americans in the area.

Meanwhile, several U.S. Air Force Warning Star radar equipped aircraft arrived for what was believed an attempt to prevent Communist MIG fighters from surprising U.S. jets flying over North Viet Nam and the South China Sea.

Addition Will Cost $10,323 More to Build

TRENTON — The members of the Trenton Board of Education learned last night that the $95,000 addition to North Trenton Public School will cost another $10,323.05, because of an error in establishing site levels.

Whose fault this is is rather up in the air but it has been established that it isn't the fault of the general contractor, the Miron-Wiggers Trenton firm.

The extra cost is made up of additional excavating and additional fill, and additional work on the blockwork.

Board member Douglas Whitley asked that in the future, the general contractor be required to guarantee that the levels are satisfactory to him, before a contract with the board is signed.

Nineteen New Teachers Will be Required

TRENTON — Trenton's public school teachers are "on the move" more this year than any other year for the past 13 years, according to V. P. Carswell, supervising principal for public schools.

Mr. Carswell told the school board meeting last night he had to look for 19 teachers for the fall. All resignations, said Mr. Carswell, have been "amicable," and for such good reasons as "moving," or "the stork?"

Nine teachers have been hired. The changes in management. E. M. Parker Jr., said that he didn't foresee any trouble in making up the missing ten.

A new high school salary schedule will come into effect in September. Teachers in Category 1 will run from $6,500 to $8,300; Category II, from $5,200 to $8,900; Category III, from $5,800 to $9,600; Category IV, from $6,200 to $10,200, with department heads getting an extra $500.

Several of the present teachers have been placed on permanent contract. Ald. Harold Post, the principal at Dufferin Ave. public school has also been placed under permanent contract.

School board members, meeting with public school principals, recently, considered the possibility of adding more opportunity classes "when economically possible and space available;" hiring a primary supervisor for Grades 1 and 3 to supervise remedical reading classes and hiring vice-principals, (or elevating teachers) for police - principals for the public schools, with a view to "keeping good teachers in Trenton."

GROMYKO MEETS QUEEN

LONDON (CP) — During Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's recent visit to England, he met Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother by accident. Both went with separate parties to see the National Theatre's production of Othello on the same night, and were introduced to each other during the interval.

'Problem' Children Seen Concern of School Board

TRENTON — The members of the Trenton Board of Education will explore the possibility of engaging a board doctor, with psychiatric experience, to advise the board about "problem" children.

At last night's meeting of the board, members Louis Aziz, Douglas Whitley and E. M. Parker Jr., came out strongly in favor of looking into this suggestion very closely. The original suggestion came out of a recent meeting of principals, which was attended by Mr. Aziz and Mr. Whitley.

V. P. Carswell, supervising principal of public schools, said in looking back over the records of problem children, there seemed to be a definite place where the trouble started. Teachers and principals had tried to handle the problem, but they were not trained for this work, and more often than not, the child concerned was "lost."

Mr. Parker referred several instances where professional help had been indicated. Specifically, he spoke of one juvenile, who had committed a first offence and been dealt with by the law, without the knowledge of the board knowing about the case. He said the child concerned had never been in trouble before and in his opinion, could have benefitted by professional help.

Last year, Dr. G. W. Telfer was arranged by the board to make physical examinations of candidates for the town's opportunity classes. Dr. Telfer has had experience with psychiatric work, and his opinion on the need for such help being available to "problem" students, will be sought.

Two Soldiers Given Terms in County Jail

AWOL from their army station at Camp Borden when they stole a car in Belleville, two teenage soldiers today were sentenced to two months by Magistrate T. Y. Wits.

Arthur Leopold Hudson, 17, and Walter Eugene McVicar, 18, had plans to reach McVicar's home "province of New Brunswick when they were caught.

Detective Inspector Harold Reid said the pair had scored little success hitchhiking from Camp Borden and stole the car, owned by a Mimico man, from a Station Street residence. They planned returning to Hudson's hometown, Oakville, for money to further finance their flight.

The plan was flawed when provincial police spotted the car on Highway 401 at Cobourg, gave chase and halted it near Port Hope.

Both youths had served with the army less than six months.

Council Authorizes $5,000 Plan For Future Zwick's Isle Work

It is going to cost the city upwards of $5,000 to hire a landscape architect to draw up a development plan for Zwick's Island, part of which will be adopted as the city's centennial project.

City council yesterday voted to hire the firm of Proctor, Redfern, Bousfield and Bacon to prepare plans and costs of estimates for the development of the island as a parks and recreational area.

The portion of the over-all plan to be adopted as a centennial project is limited to a cost of $100,000.

Ald. Thomas Lally, chairman of a special committee formed to recommend a landscape artist for the Island plan said the landscape architect's fee would be between $3,000 and $4,000, while a scale model, if desired, would cost another $1,000.

Ald. Lally said the over - all plan would not be limited to a centennial project, but would take in both the Island and the land fill area both east and west of the Bay Bridge Road.

First phase of the development would be the west side of Zwick's Island, the alderman said.

Mayor J. R. Ellis said the firm proposed to prepare the plan for Zwick's Island were doing a large scale land development extending from Oshawa to Niagara Falls.

The plan for Zwick's Island would incorporate all facets of recreation, he said.

An Error Which Enlightens

It is the obvious which is easy to overlook.

THE other day Fern Guindon, Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario Legislature from Stormont, was speaking about the present turmoil in Quebec.

Separatists and advocates of a separate state do not speak with any authority for the more than a million Canadians of French ancestry residing outside Quebec, he said.

This is comforting news, if true, and Mr. Guindon's name and the location of the riding he represents gives us reason to hope that he speaks from an intimate knowledge of the feelings of these Canadians.

Then, however, he made a statement which is so precisely the reverse of the truth that it illuminates the key point in the current controversy.

"Any change in the relationship between Canadians of French ancestry and those of English ancestry across Canada, including Quebec, cannot be binding until all have agreed to a common goal."

Would that this were true. We should then be assured that Canada would remain intact until, at some future time, we could agree on this goal. But it is just the growing doubt that any common goal can be discovered which gives to the existing controversy its dangerous overtones.

That changes which are made without common consent of all the parties involved can be as final and binding as those reached by common agreement is self-evident from even the most superficial study of history. Indeed, it is often those changes which arise from an agreement which are most amenable to change, because they are born into an environment of good-will, which makes later reconsideration much easier. It is precisely because there was such an atmosphere of consent between the French and English in Canada at the time the British North America Act was drafted that we can now preserve some hopes of the two races once again being able to work out an acceptable compromise.

But to suggest that no change can come until there is an agreement on its nature is to ignore the lessons of history in similar situations, lessons which have been particularly abundant during the past couple of decades.

What a Question!

Mrs. Abraham Lieff of Calgary is a lawyer.

Which makes it all the more surprising that she could ask a question like this: "What good is freedom of speech if it is not used because it is unfashionable, or people are too timid or too uninformed, particularly uninformed?"

That is what she is reported to have said in addressing a conference sponsored by the Federation of Jewish Women's Organizations in Toronto.

Good heavens! Is Mrs. Lieff suggesting that all people worry about what is fashionable before they express an opinion, that all people are too timid to express ideas which are unpopular, that all people are uninformed?

The silence of the fashionable, the timid and the uninformed is not something to be deplored but, when it occurs, to be accepted with gratitude. Some people rarely have anything worth saying, anyway.

Despite Mrs. Lieff's doubts, freedom of speech is invaluable precisely because it permits those who are not afraid to be unfashionable, those who have courage and those who are informed to speak their mind without fear of organized persecution or imprisonment.

It is no protection against harassment by the fashionable, the ferocious timidity of the mob and the tirades of the ignorant. But it was never meant to be. These things have always had to be endured by those with the intelligence to conceive a new idea and the courage to express it.

Mrs. Lief, we feel sure, knows this and was really deploring the prevalence of slavery to fashion, of timidity and of ignorance. She wants to see more people who are not bound by the chains of orthodoxy, who are not timid, who are not uninformed. But this has nothing to do with the value of freedom of speech.

Life is not a static thing. The only people who do not change their minds are incompetents in asylums, who can't, and those in cemeteries. —Sen. Everett M. Dirksen.

Why don't pronouncing handbooks for radio and television announcers write it large and plain that:

The fact is that Canada can afford today is an economic quarrel with the United States. We'll need all the capital we can get to attain the economic growth rate of 5.5 per cent per year set as our target until 1970 by the Economic Council of Canada. ECC has foreseen that we may require as much as U.S. $2 billion annually to hit this prob-producing investment pace even if Canadians go their best lick with their own money.

To Your Good Health
Moderate Treatment Usually Will Curb Diverticulosis

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can diverticulosis be operated on? Is it advisable? I am a 67-year-old man and in good health otherwise. Would surgery eliminate need for the diet I am on?

Enclosed is 25 cents in coin and an unstamped, self-addressed envelope for your booklet, "Don't Let Diverticulosis Throw You." — H. M.

The booklet will answer your questions in detail, but to give you (and others) a quick explanation:

Diverticulosis is extremely common. It means that a tiny bulge, or outpouching, has developed — this can be in other places, but for practical purposes we use the term for such a condition occurring in the intestinal tract, and generally in the colon.

Millions of people have diverticulosis. Majority either don't know it, or don't have any trouble resulting from it.

Moderate treatment usually is sufficient to subdue the problem.

A non-irritating diet is one of the best means of keeping this pouched area calm and quiet. And the diet isn't difficult or obnoxious. Various medications are used, too. And, of course, a vast number of cases require neither diet nor medication.

Occasionally one of these pouched areas becomes irritated, inflamed, infected. Even then, conservative treatment usually succeeds in restoring it to comfortable status.

Thus surgery isn't often needed. Removal of the diseased portion of the colon would be warranted only if serious complications developed, such as severe bleeding, perforation of the colon and the formation of abcess, or stricture (narrowing) of the colon as a result of repeated attacks and hence formation of scar tissue.

In such cases as do necessitate surgery, it is impossible to say in advance that a bland, non-irritating diet will be mandatory afterward, but in general I would have to say yes, such a diet would be wise. You will be rid of the pouched section, but you will have the scar where the operation and rejoining of the colon was performed, and it is only sensible to follow a diet which will give reasonable promise of not irritating that area.

Dear Dr. Molner: My last child was partly strangled because the cord got wrapped around her neck. She has brain damage. I want another child badly, but friends say I am apt to have another this same way. What are my chances compared to normal women? — Mrs. J. P.

Please don't feel that way — as though you are different from "normal women." Such an accident with the cord getting tangled around that way can happen to any woman.

Yes, it is an unfortunate accident, but it isn't something that happens to certain kinds of women. It can happen just as readily to the cretephangers who are telling you not to have another baby. After all, you had healthy children without this trouble before.

• • •

Dear Doctor: What is impetigo, and how does a child get it? — H. C.

It is a highly contagious skin infection caused by the staphylococcus or "staph" germ. Children usually get it from contact with other children (or from others) who may be harboring the germ yet may not have had it break out into an infection.

Because it is highly contagious treatment should begin as quickly as possible and you should carefully follow your doctor's instructions on how to avoid being harmed by the germ yourself, or permitting anyone else to get it.

Ottawa Offbeat
Newsman Says Hees Has Great Leadership Qualities

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Now that former Federal Justice Minister E. Davie Fulton has turned his back on the British Columbia Provincial Conservative leadership and his eyes on Ottawa and his party's national leadership, what of his chief rival?

Not any one of the three Provincial Premiers, Duff Roblin of Manitoba, Robert Stanfield of Nova Scotia, or John Roberts of Ontario, nor even former New Brunswick Attorney General and now Conservative MP for Royal, the gifted Gordon Fairweather — although each would be an able astronomer — but George Harris Hees, the only one of the contenders who was a Cabinet colleague of Davie Fulton.

Look at him for a fascinating moment through a new pair of eyes and catch the glittering focus on him taken by Rene MacColl, famed glob - trotting chief foreign correspondent of Sir Max Aitken's classmate circulation London Daily Express.

MacColl's bone fides to observe and comment sagaciously on the Canadian scene are immaculate.

For more than 20 years he was Lord Beaverbrook's special assignment Man — meaning he knows this country and its people as well as you do the back of your own hand.

Rene MacColl it was, tall, elegant, and lelly calm, who last October at Quebec City enraged, leaped to the platform at a Separatist rally the night before Queen Elizabeth arrived for what turned out to be her disgraceful booing, and tore great blazing world strips off the rowdy Quebecois.

THOUGHTS OF HOME

It may well be what set him roughed up by a Separatist strong-arm squad.

It did get him a massive flying - wedge police escort out of the hall and back to the sanctuary of the Chateau Frontenac.

But best of all it got him a hearty "well done, old chap," cable from wartime Fleet Street and now Express publisher, Sir Max, with the warming assurance that "all Britain is with you."

This time, on a global tour, the Daily Express sent Rene MacColl to find out what, precisely, Britain must do to close its calamitous trade gap and rectify its disastrous balance of payments position.

So who, in Canada, better to see than CNR President Donald Gordon, Air Canada boss Gerald McGregor, Liberal Trade and Minister Mitchell Sharp and former Conservative trade Ministers Senator Wallace Malcolm McCutcheon and George H. Hees.

Fabulous, he said of Hees, writing:

"He is one of the handsomest politicians to be found anywhere in the world.

"He is 55 and looks a well-preserved 40. He used to play a form of Rugby called Canadian Football. He still skis avidly and slashes off 50 non-stop pool lengths at a plunge.

"He sports a dark suntan — and the niftiest sort of tailoring imaginable, double - breasted waistcoats and whatnot.

"His eyebrows are charcoal black, but the immaculately clipped mustache is sugar white.

A DREAMBOAT COMBO

"He is engaging, slender and a war hero, wounded in Holland while serving with a Canadian anti-tank unit.

"Visually he is a dreamboat combo of the late Owen Nares, Ivor Novello and Gerald du Maurier (in their day, great British matinee idols) in one supremely glorious package.

"He is also titanically rich." That gives you the George Hees image as reflected by British's greatest living foreign correspondent.

Then he gets down to the meat of the despatch to The Daily Express.

"I listened to him making a speech to one of those huge Canadian gatherings and to which the inhabitants of North America are so prone (it was an Ontario Regional Rotary rally at Toronto's Royal York).

"Gazing about him with a dazzlingly heart-breaking smile, Hees said: 'Ah, I see that many of the delegates to this convention have brought their wives with them.

"And what absolutely charming and delightfully beautiful ladies they are.

"But of course, it has been said that to take one's wife to a convention is like going hunting with the game warden.

"Screams of delight from the ladies.

"Hees has scored again."

Apart from the charm and magnetism, the "great thing to remember about George Hees," counselled Rene MacColl, "is that if and when John Diefenbaker relinquishes the leadership of the Tory Party, he will be in there with a good shot at the succession — and if he got that, he might very well one day be Canada's Prime Minister.

"A leading Canadian business man [Donald Gordon or Gordon McGregor] told me today "Hees isn't afraid to try anything, the party leadership or the Prime Minister's office. He tackles any problem from every angle and only after having doesn't work for scraps it and comes back directly on another front."

Plainly, George Harris Hees has impact.

Deplores Treatment Given Old Dwellings

* * * *

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

There seems to be a sort of poetic justice in the fact that it is a letter from New Jersey that is involved. Have you ever approached New York through New Jersey and winced at the appalling drabness along the way? And is Bridge Street to be treated so?

I refer to the item under March 29 Construction Round-Up that says that the Yeomans house on Bridge St. West has been sold and that four six-plexes will be put on on the site by a local firm on behalf of a landlady from New Jersey.

This house, I take it (and I hope the report is erroneous), is the one affectionately known as the 'River Boat', on the south side of West Bridge just as you go up the hill. It attracted me the first day I ever came to Belleville, for the ornate charm of the shadowy verandah and for its gracious situation, with its end to the street, looking out into a pleasant garden.

There a builder acquired the land and built some apartment houses overlooking the garden from the back. The garden was not at all spoiled, and the new buildings grouped well with the old, and one could only approve.

But is there no end to the blindness of realtors and builders? Blind because they cannot see an excellent thing when they have it, and will, in their ignorance, destroy a thing of value to others and so, indirectly, to themselves.

This owner put up another apartment building that filled the garden itself. And now the house, shorn of the property that lent it scale, is of even less account than at first, and must go, too.

And the people of Belleville, the Beautiful City, will presumably say nay weakly (if they choose to say anything at all), 'Yes, what a pity; but I suppose that is progress.' And they will say, more stubbornly, if they happen to deal in real estate, 'You can't prevent a man from doing what he likes with his land.'

I do not propose a law to regulate these matters. How excessively difficult it would be to frame a law regulating the design of new buildings or the treatment of old ones that are of aesthetic value!

How owners would resent having any committee, or especially any individual, sitting in judgment on the design of their buildings or landscaping, with regard to its attractiveness or its suitability in the neighborhood.

After all, the citizens who have passed by their gardens in the springtime and the fall, perhaps for generations, or feasted their eyes on the curve of a window or marked their course by the lift of a tower or a chimney - these people have no rights in the property. How very much better to take advantage of the market. If a building is in a prime location, tear it down and put in a carwash or a filling station or a six-plex or a clinic. No one actually lives in Belleville, the Beautiful City, any more: they merely drive through at speed, and will not notice the difference.

A law will hardly do. But if the owners could inform themselves of what they have that is good and satisfactory, and what is shoddy and lacking in distinction.

The new Bell Telephone building is undoubtedly notable and presumably will figure in the future as one of the historic buildings to be preserved. But the company did not have to have drawn a distinguished building to build it; they could have erected whole blocks of undistinguished property nearby.

The Belleville Towers is undeniably striking, and high-rise apartments are the homes of the future, but the unnecessary loss of the interesting house that was on the site, when there are quantities of less-than-interesting houses in the vicinity.

A law would hardly tell owners how to treat houses like people, sympathetically, with humor, according to their character. Every building has its strong points or its weak ones, and its eccentricities.

How well certain owners on Bridge Street have done, and what a painful botch some others have made of the job. Mrs. G. Jenkins, at Ann St., has brought marvelous dignity to

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO
April 12th, 1945

Public Utilities was the subject of an interesting talk by the superintendent of Belleville Public Utilities at the Rotary Club in Picton. The speaker was introduced by Commissioner Morley Duff.

In speaking of the agitation for uniform hydro rates for the province, the superintendent stated that he believed this could not be done without taking authority away from local Utilities Commissions and centralizing complete authority in the Provincial Commission.

Consideration must be given to treatment of sewage in sewage disposal plants it was stated. Only by this method of handling it is possible to give domestic users of water the qualities which they will consider desirable. He referred to water as the most important of the utilities, since it is a product depended upon in daily life, as well as for fire protection.

30 YEARS AGO
April 13th, 1935

Mr. B. C. Sisler, manager of the local Dominion Bank, gave a very interesting and informative address on the history of banking in Canada at the meeting of the Y's Men's Club last evening. Mr. Sisler was introduced by Newton Thompson, and the thanks of the members were expressed by Jack Wilson. Dan Wilbur gave several enjoyable vocal solos.

Mr. Thaine Reddick spent the weekend with friends in Oshawa.

Mrs. Arthur Booth has returned home from Toronto where she visited friends.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Freeman and Mrs. E. H. Walters are spending today in Toronto.

District Inspector F. Gardner of the Ontario Provincial Police, has returned to the city after spending a week at Kirkland Lake.

40 YEARS AGO
April 12th, 1925

It is estimated that about two inches of snow fell here following the rain, and the snow at an early hour in the morning was an ideal winter one, with the trees, telephone, telegraph and electric wires laden with snow. The heavy storm sun later in the day caused the snow to vanish very quickly.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowen of this city, spent Easter with Mr. and Mrs. George Bowen in Windsor.

Mr. George Aldred, treasurer of the town of Sidney, is spending a few days in Belleville with friends.

Mrs. Charles A. Mott, and son Douglas, are visiting the former's mother, Mrs. Alex McLaughlin in Peterboro.

Mr. Clarke Diamond is home from the College of Pharmacy, Toronto, to spend the week-ends with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Diamond, Foster Ave.

50 YEARS AGO
April 13th, 1915

A number of Grand Trunk Railway employees living in Brockville will come here shortly to reside.

Adj. James Duckworth, chairman of market and city property, is now receiving tenders for the market tolls.

It does seem good to see Mill Street cleared of dust and mud. The people in that section and citizens who have occasion to drive the street greatly appreciate the improvement.

Mr. John Griffin of the Grift-Brown Co. has severed his connection with the E.M.K. Stewart, barrister, of Madoc, was in town today.

An undistinguished, though well-situated, square house. Dr. R. Scott, at John St., has accented the dreary aspect of his with a touch of pink.

What would not one give to see the Bleecker and the Faulkner house treated with the sympathy they deserve. How distressing the treatment the sewing machine man gave his house on Highland Avenue, shearing off its porch and painting it the wrong color and then moving quickly away.

The undertakers could have given more thought on their tall house at the top of Bridge St. West, a truly accented landmark that might have been humored a little.

No, a law could hardly tell Belleville's owners what to do. Can't they all open their eyes and look about them? Or is money from New Jersey more important?

Take Action To Preserve Elm Trees

The city will investiagte the possibility of using a newly developed chemical to help control Dutch elm disease which is killing many of the stately elms in the city and district.

Alderman Enos David asked council to provide a nominal amount for purchase of the new chemical which he said was still in short supply.

Mayor J. R. Ellis said he would have the city manager make the necessary enquiries regarding the chemical.

Flag to Fly Every Day Over City Hall

Instead of being flown only on special occasions and on holidays, the flag atop Belleville's city hall in the future will be flown 24 hours a day.

That's the decision at city hall following complaints from citizens about the bare flag pole atop the city hall clock tower.

The complaints have been more frequent since Canada adopted its new Maple Leaf flag, but the reason for the city not flying its flag apparently has been a financial one.

It is 100 feet to the top of the city hall clock tower and that is a lot of climbing for the person whose responsibility it is to raise and lower the flag each day. To have a man do this job morning and evening, the city hall maintenance contractor quoted a price of $4.00 per day.

So flag raising costs have been weighed against flag replacement and city hall officials have decided it would cost less to leave the flag up and purchase a new one when necessary.

Charge

leader. He charged that a contribution to the Conservative party is the toll gate through which a liquor licence is obtained in Ontario.

Mr. MacDonald questioned Judge W. T. Robb, chairman of the liquor licence board, on the reasons for the refusal of Mr. Bergauer's application. Then he produced the correspondence from Mr. Wardrope.

Mr. MacDonald contended that Mr. Bergauer had been refused because of his refusal to contribute to the Conservative party.

Mr. Wardrope learned of the allegations late in the day when he returned to his office after testifying before the Windfall royal commission inquiry. He summoned reporters to his office and there gave a statement in which he said he had "obviously misinterpreted what the board told me."

He said he had sent a letter of reference to the board on Mr. Bergauer's behalf, but washed his hands of the restaurant operator after receiving a letter from him, which said in part:

"If I can get help and I have a better income I would be able to support the party . . . with donations. . . ."

HE'S DISGUSTED

Mr. Wardrope said the letter disgusted him and he never bothered to reply to it. "I was rather insulted that he would suggest that to me."

He also said he phoned the former president of the Port Arthur Conservative Association, Arthur Shewchuk, to learn whether Mr. Bergauer had ever been approached on behalf of the party for a donation. Mr. Shewchuk said he had not.

Mr. Wardrope accused Mr. MacDonald of making some "typically unwarranted allegations . . . concerning this matter."

Mr. MacDonald said he did not believe the "toll gate" operated at the level of the liquor licence board itself.

Judge Robb interjected "it certainly doesn't."

"It operates at arms' length," Mr. MacDonald added.

Mr. Bergauer first applied for a licence on March 1, 1963, but was turned down. He made a second application Oct. 21, 1963, and Mr. Wardrope sent the letter of reference to the board.

On Dec. 2, 1963, Mr. Bergauer received a letter from Mr. Wardrope which said in part:

". . . I called the board today and was advised they expect to have your licence O.K.'d before the 12th of December. As soon as this is done we will be advised accordingly.

"Please do not advertise this yet, but the minute I hear that it is through I will telephone you."

Judge Robb said Mr. Wardrope never received that information from the liquor licence board. However, he had no explanation for the contents of the letter.

GIVES REASONS

"On Jan. 9, 1964, Mr. Bergauer's application was turned down. A letter to his solicitor from the board said in part: "The decision to refuse the application was reached after a perusal of the information received concerning your character, background and ability to operate a licensed establishment catering to the general public."

Mr. MacDonald said the reasons given for the refusal were vague.

He added that the government should offer some explanation for Mr. Wardrope's letter indicating that assurance had been given him by the board that the licence would be granted.

Vern Singer (L—Downsview) said Mr. MacDonald had made some serious charges. If he believed they were true he should be prepared to give names so that charges could be laid.

Ross Whicher (L — Bruce) said Mr. MacDonald had a duty not to just throw out the name of Mr. Wardrope and fail to name the Conservative official who sought the contribution.

SHOULD WITHDRAW

If the person was not named, he said, Mr. MacDonald should withdraw his whole statement.

Mr. Whicher said he was "absolutely 100 per cent convinced" there is no toll gate as far as the board is concerned."

Judge Robb said that if there was any toll gate, "I as a member of the board know nothing about it."

He said Mr. Bergauer was allowed to make a third application for a licence last Oct. 19 just to give him one more chance.

Mr. Bergauer had never received a reply from the board concerning his last application because the board understood he had vacated his restaurant premises, the chairman said.

Mr. MacDonald said Mr. Bergauer's landlord was attempting to break a five-year lease. The matter was before the courts.

Two Given Prison Terms On Theft Counts

Two Belleville men, charged with burglary of a Trenton electronics firm today were sent to the Ontario Reformatory for 18 months definite.

They were charged with a break-in March 20 at Quinte Electronics and possesion of stolen goods.

photographer for the Elthart (Ind.) Truth, and his wife were driving near Dunlap when a tornado dipped into a trailer camp and killed 45 persons.

"After the canals passed (my car) at freight-train speed, the silence was shocking," Huff, man said. "I thought there must be thousands killed. The extent of damage was unbelievable. Of 32 trailers, only three were destroyed. About a dozen were upended.

"The trailers were ripped from their frames, whirled about in the air and sent crashing to the ground."

In northern Ohio, where more than 350 persons were killed and injured by the deadly twisters, the toll in Toledo alone was 13 dead, 178 injured and 90 in hospital.

ONLY MONUMENT LEFT

The town of Pittsfield, Ohio, counted nine dead. The town had a population of 90. The only thing left standing was an American Civil War monument.

In Illinois, five persons were killed and 63 persons injured at Crystal Lake.

Fifty thievery added to the problems of officials. Two persons were arrested in Crystal Lake, Ill. Looters swarmed to the panorama shopping centre in Marion, Ind., after the building was crushed by a tornado. They cleaned out at least $70,000 from cash registers before police chased them off with police dogs.

Hospital for Sick Children Subject of Rotary Talk

The requirements of the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto are expanding so rapidly that a total of $29,226,498 must be found to meet them.

Of this amount it is anticipated $15,336,496 will come from federal, provincial and municipal grants, leaving $13,900,000 to be raised by public appeal.

This appeal is now under way. On its success will depend the hospital's maintenance as one of the world's major centres of pediatric care, teaching and research. More and more difficult cases are being referred to Toronto by other hospitals all over the continent.

Belleville Rotarians were given details of the hospital's expansion plans yesterday by Dr. Harry Ebbs, a distinguished member of the medical staff.

Dr. Ebbs, senior physician and director of post graduate education, said the hospital cared for children from not only Toronto — a growing metropolitan area — but from all over Canada. The increasing demand for health services at the hospital has grown so it was throughout the world.

MORE SEEKING CARE

"Medical knowledge accumulated during the last 10 years equals all the knowledge that existed before that time" he said. "There is too, a new understanding of a number of health problems and the ability to do something about them."

"More and more people are seeking hospital help for their health problems and contrary to what you may read in the newspapers a great deal of it is successful. Specialty in things we previously had little knowledge of."

Dr. Ebbs said when the move was made to the new building in Toronto's University Avenue "we thought we had an institution that would last 25 to 50 years."

"We scoured the world for ideas to make sure we were not missing anything that would crop up in future. But changes have taken place and children are now in infant cots in bathrooms and down the corridors."

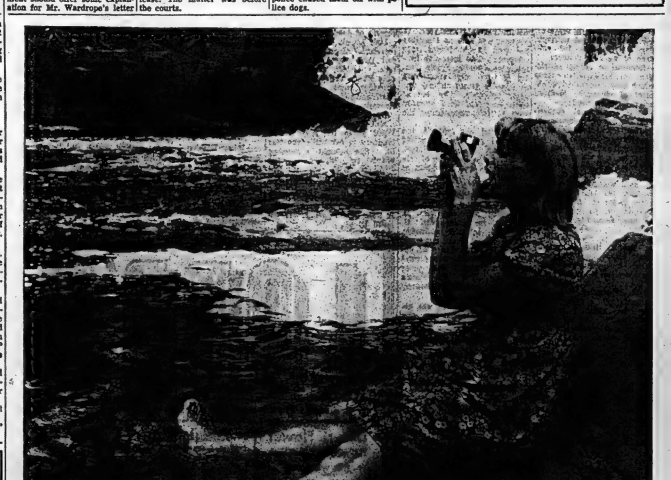
Also needed are additional staff and space for research.

The speaker said that the number of operations and emergency treatments had increased tremendously. "The children are coming in day and night and there is a very large increase at weekends when children seem to get into more serious and frequent trouble."

In every sphere it's the same. New techniques, new methods of diagnosis, new equipment, all demand more space and staff to cope with them.

For example, an operating room that once housed five persons was now inadequate. "It now takes as many as 12 people in some operations and some are not even in the room, but in other rooms," said Dr. Ebbs.

He said the hospital had been caught up in automation, particularly in the field of electronics. Equipment used to help a struggling child in its fight for life included four electronic devices. These and other needs meant extra space and financial outlay.



Dr. Harold Williamson introduced the speaker and he was thanked by Joe Demeza.

President Stan Reston presided.

IT TAKES A LITTLE TIME

Dear Susanna: Having been married a year, we planned our first big friend-and-family-get together to celebrate the occasion. Of course it meant borrowing dishes right and left to accommodate everyone, until my mother-in-law suggested using the paper anniversary theme in our complete decor for the party.

This was a tremendous idea and not only did I use paper plates and cups, but I covered large circles of heavy card board, cut out from cartons, with foil wrap and made sandwich and cake platters out of them (the foil was re-usable so it wasn't wasted).

I also made the apple blossom centrepiece that you suggested in your column a while back (using bare branches, pink and green tissue paper and play dough). A few of the girls who helped me produce pink and white carnations for the men, made from facial tissues.

These pretty boutonniere make quite a nice project for a young people's group to tie a ribbon bouquet or other affair. I am enclosing the instructions, Susanna, in case anyone inquires about them. — Mrs. Bernice Kelly

Thank you, Bernice. Now I know why they make us wait 25 years to celebrate a silver anniversary. It takes that long to accumulate enough silverware to accommodate all the party guests! — SUSANNA

COME BACK!

Dear Susanna: I'm sure you have probably had trouble as I have, with the mixing bowl sliding away from you across the counter top or table when you are stirring something up with your wooden spoon or electric hand beaters.

Place the bowl on a pot holder and you will be amazed at how securely it stays in place . . . particularly useful when mixing a batter of rather thick consistency. — Mrs. K. Ringer

Try to Change Attitudes Toward Working Mothers

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP)—The phrase "a woman's place is in the home" still causes many employers to discriminate against the 1,003,000 Canadian married women who work, says the director of the federal labor department women's bureau.

Marion V. Moore makes the statement in her introduction to a 38-page report issued by the bureau as it includes far-reaching recommendations to improve working conditions of married women with children and to change public attitudes toward working mothers.

Among the recommendations:

—Enactment by the federal government of legislation governing no maternity leave.

—Provision of more adequate day-care facilities for children of working mothers.

—Removal of zoning restrictions in metropolitan areas which now prevent establishment of child-care facilities where they are needed.

—Better vocational counselling services for young women in high school and university encouraging them to look beyond marriage and plan for education and training.

—Similarly, provision of more vocational guidance for middle-aged women who want to re-enter the labor force, or enter it for the first time.

Despite the growing number of married women working—the number has almost doubled in the last five years—Miss Royce says social attitudes remain "highly ambivalent."

"On the assumption that women's place is exclusively in the home, there are often subject to discrimination in employment."

However, along with their responsibilities in the labor force, women continued to fill an indispensable role in the home.

In the light of this, Miss Royce said, "to ensure their position in employment, as well as to safeguard the health and welfare of themselves and their families, policies and services are needed to assist them in combining the two roles."

Phony Letter Writers Get Treatment They Deserve

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Please don't consider me crazy for asking this but I need help badly and you are my only hope.

My mother is bald. My father has a very heavy head of hair. My older brother is rapidly losing his hair and will soon be bald — like my mother.

I am a circus acrobat. Hanging by my hair is part of my act. My hair seems to be the same heavy type that father has, but at times I become depressed worrying about the possibility that perhaps my hair will fall out like my mother's.

Should I change professions before it is too late? Thank you for your kind consideration.— WORRIED.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR WORRIED — Don't be a coward and change professions, even if you should detect signs of baldness. Stick with it. Bill yourself as the world's only balding acrobat who hangs by his hair. And please — don't chicken out and use a net. I'd like to get rid of you characters who write phony letters — and the sooner the better.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Easter will soon be here and I would like to express my views on something that has been bothering me since last year when I attended an Easter Sunday brunch at the home of friends.

These friends have three children under six years of age. As an Easter gift the parents gave the youngsters some baby chicks dyed shades of pink, blue and green. The children were squeezing, choking and torturing the baby chicks without realizing what they were doing.

The two-year-old threw the little pink chick against the wall as if it were a rubber ball. The mother picked the chick up and said quietly, "You mustn't do that, dear." She gave the chick back to the child who proceeded to choke it. I could not bear to watch any longer so I left.

Please, Ann, say something in your column about giving very young children live pets to play with. — S.O.S.

DEAR S.O.S. — Dyeing and selling baby chicks is illegal in some states. (Illinois for one.) The penalty, however, is not stiff enough to deter a pet shop owner who wants to engage in the practice. The law reads: "fine of not less than $25 and not more than $200, and confiscation of the chicks."

The Anti-Cruelty Society would like to discourage the sale of chicks as toys. Aside from the fact that most youngsters unwittingly abuse them, chicks need warmth (about 90 degrees temperature) and most homes are too cold for their survival.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My uncle was buried last Thursday. When I tell you we have at least 100 relatives in this town I am not exaggerating.

This uncle was a nice person and everyone liked him. His wife is a living, breathing chunk of lee who could hold a convention of all her friends in a telephone booth.

After the funeral my husband and I went to the cemetery and then home. We learned the next day the whole crowd was invited to my aunt's house for dinner. We were the only ones who weren't there. I am very put out. Why would she do this? Even in her grief she managed to insult me. Please comment. — PUT OUT.

DEAR OUT — Relatives and close friends customarily gather at the home of the bereaved after a funeral. It is not a party. Nobody gets invited. They just go.

Relatives, friends and neighbors usually assume the responsibility of bringing, preparing and serving the food. Your letter is a good example of how people sometimes blame others when the fault lies with themselves.

Operation of Rheumatic Unit Outlined at C. A. R. S. Meet

Miss Hilda V. Lake, B. Sc.N., of The Queen's Rheumatic Disease Unit, Kingston, addressed an interested audience at Education Hall, Belleville General Hospital.

Miss Lake gave a detailed explanation of the organization of such a unit and the part it is playing in research and treatment of arthritic and rheumatic patients in the area.

The Queen's Rheumatic Disease Unit was opened June 1, 1964, and was the third such unit to be opened in Ontario. In 1961 the Toronto University Rheumatic Disease Unit opened at Queen Elizabeth Hospital and at present is housed at Sunnybrook Hospital till the new wing at the Wellesley Hospital is completed. The second unit was opened in Hamilton on January 15, 1964.

FOCAL POINT

These centres provide a focal point for clinical research, professional education and a milieu for long term evaluation and treatment of cases presenting difficulties of diagnosis and handling.

Miss Lake said that since the unit first opened in June 1964, that 2,000 patients had been registered at the unit either at the out-patients' clinic or admitted to hospital. These patients had all been referred by their family doctor.

Following Miss Lake's address there was a lengthy question period.

Mr. George Brown, president of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society was chairman of the meeting, and for the benefit of those present who might not be aware of the services given in the community by the society over the past ten years, he gave a short history of the local branch and work since the branch was first organized in 1955. He also stated that the treatment centre at the Belleville General Hospital two evenings each week, Tuesday and Thursday, and staffed by a capable physiotherapist, Mrs. Katherine Brown, is proving quite successful with a full case load at the present time.

Mr. K. Chatland expressed the appreciation of those present to the speaker for her informative address.

The Women's Auxiliary of the local branch is under the convenership of Mrs. A. A. Gemmell and Mrs. D. A. McKinney. Coffee and refreshments were served at the Chatland meeting.

The Belleville branch of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society is a participating agency of the Belleville United Appeal.

Dandy Desserts

Satisfy that craving for something sweet at the end of the meal and at the same time provide extra food value with tasty milk desserts. Whether you use those home-cooked mixes or "start from scratch", keep a few little tricks up your sleeve for adding instant glamor.

Perfect Parfaits

Instant puddings are a delight to behold when they're layered in pretty parfait glasses alternately with whipped cream and/or wafer crumbs. Try butterscotch pudding, adding 4 teaspoons powdered instant coffee before beating in the milk as directed. Chocolate wafer crumbs and whipped cream make a wonderful flavor combination for these layers in this perfect parfait.

Instant Variety

Seems there's no end to the ways you can vary instant pudding. The children will love the rippled effect made by swirling a spoonful of melted semi-sweet chocolate through each serving. Now and then throw in an almond extract and fold in well-drained canned pineapple for a refreshing fruit flavor. Don't forget too, that ½ cup of whipped cream folded into any pudding makes it extra creamy.

Nutritionally Tops

When you're tallying up the family's daily milk quota be sure to count the milk used in these desserts as well as in all your other cooking. It supplies the same good food value as the milk you drink . . . very important since no one ever outgrows the need for milk!

Party Time Treat

Next time you're entertaining young ones, make it a special event with Circus Custards. Prepare your favorite baked custard—either chocolate or plain—in individual dishes. At dessert time decorate each serving with a dollop of whipped cream, an animal cracker or two and a little paper pennant.

Company Classic

Take fresh maple syrup . . . add the extra goodness of cream cheese and milk and you've the ingredients for a very special springtime dessert. Start by beating an 8-ounce package of cream cheese until smooth and soft. Then gradually blend in 1 cup each of maple syrup and milk. Add a teaspoon of vanilla for extra flavor and freeze until firm.

In Love With Her Boss But Unsure How He Feels

DEAR DORIS — I am not the youngest any more (33) but that did not prevent me from falling in love with my boss. I work for him as a bookkeeper. He is not married.

DORIS CLARK

At first I was quite indifferent to him (I suppose because of his insignificant appearance), but he was so kind and understanding that I soon learned to know his inner value and after fighting it off as much as I could I finally realized that I love him.

For Christmas he gave me a pair of gloves, which I thought was rather odd. Sometimes I think he comes to my office more than he needs to and again other times seems to avoid me.

I try to act cool to cover my feelings. I almost feel like a silly teen-ager. Yet I don't want to leave and risk his thinking I don't care, in case he does love me. — COVERING UP.

DEAR COVERING — Often it's the day-to-day situation which reveals the solid gold personality under a cloak of insignificance. At such times "tall, dark and handsome" loses out.

Your dilemma may indeed be one-sided. Or he may have fair-and-warmer feelings about you without knowing it. If the present climate is too unbearable, you may find you simply have to leave or find out how things stand. Or both.

DEAR DORIS — Am hoping you will be able to identify a small plant which I saw today in the home of one of my friends. She thinks it is related to the begonia family. She said someone called it "youth and old age." The green leaves are small and the white flowers on it look like a calla lily in miniature. It is a very pretty little plant indeed. — PLANT-LOVER.

* * *

Can't say we've been introduced. Could a reader help? I might suggest that you write your enquiry to the Horticulture Division, Experimental Farms Service, Canada, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Since you are a plant lover, you'll enjoy their colorful publication of 87 pages entitled "Living with House Plants," to be had for $1.20 plus 15 cents for mailing, from same Horticulture Division. Or you may well find it in your nearest public library.

DEAR DORIS — Friends gave me your article about "How does a family best the budget?" I have to make a speech about the theme in our church group. Do you have some more budget-hints available and could you send me some? — SPEAKER.

* * *

DEAR SPEAKER — My page of budget hints are hints, and that's all. The general principles are the important part.

For one thing a budget should be seen as a way to get what a family wants most — instead of a sad self-denial.

Budgets are personal things. One family wants a house first, one a car; a third needs further training for the breadwinner before all else. Unless the family commits together something is going to miss out. Most banks have helpful materials on money-planning.

DEAR DORIS — I have been going steady for nine months and I'm in love with my steady. But there is someone I just met lately that cares a lot for me, and I do like him, but I'm going steady and I know deep inside, I love this guy that is my steady.

But I have got a strong feeling for this other guy, and seeing him every day doesn't help me at all. I know I need someone to tell me what to do. I cry very much, and I've tried walking, alone, but it doesn't help one bit.

They say that breaking up is hard to do, and I don't ever want to find out it's true. — CRAZY MIXED-UP KID.

DEAR CRAZY — Crying, "strong feelings" for one, "love" for another, being mixed up — these are sure symptoms of indecision.

In plain English, you are not in love. Breaking up is hard, but holding on could be tragic. Give yourself the freedom of two boy friends — and more.

* * *

Confidential to NOT TEEN-AGERS — With five children between you, I wouldn't favor the splash of a large reception, nor a bride with a white gown and veil. It's good taste and good sense to have a quiet ceremony, with just a few close relatives and friends.

Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary Enjoys O. S. D. Tour

Last Thursday evening members of the Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary met at the junior school auditorium of the Ontario School for the Deaf. They were met by the school superintendent Mr. J. G. Demeza and taken on a tour through the various buildings.

Upon completion of a most enjoyable and interesting tour the members were addressed by Mr. Demeza who gave an outline of school work and the general routine of each school day. The first year of a child's life at the school is mainly spent in building up his vocabulary. A piano is used to teach the children a sense of rythmn; also drums are used for this purpose. There are 18 classes in the Junior school. The boys and girls begin vocational training about the age of 12.

The speaker noted that the sign language that one sees deaf children use is not taught at the school but the children soon learn to pick it up from each other.

Mrs. Robert Freestone, vice-president of the Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary expressed thanks to Mr. Demeza for a most informative talk and a most enjoyable tour of the school; also to all those who donated desserts at the recent dessert bridge party.

Upon members' return to the Kiwanis Centre a short business session followed. Mrs. Robert Brain introduced a guest, Renee Deliterres, a teacher of French at B.C.I.

Mrs. E. Fairman and her group served lunch at the close of the meeting.

Birth Control Pills Make Women More Masculine Says Noted Psychiatrist

By WILLIAM NEVILLE

MONTREAL (CP)—A Montreal psychiatrist says he is convinced birth control pills have a "deep psychological impact" on many women.

"It's a start," says Dr. Victorin Voyer, "the pills make women more masculine."

Dr. Voyer, medical director of the Ambar Schools for Retarded Children as well as a private practising psychiatrist, said in an interview he reached this conclusion after studying more than 300 cases.

"These women, all of whom had been taking the pills for a year or more, came to me complaining they did not feel like 'the same woman.' They said they were no longer interested in their homes, in their children, even in their husbands.

"Many of them seemed almost to be in a state of unreality, like they were intoxicated, almost as if they were alcoholics.

"I'm convinced it's because of the pills. When you eliminate ovulation, you eliminate the stimulus that makes a woman feminine. It makes her less interested in being a mother and a wife."

Dr. Voyer said he is not certain at this stage whether there are emotional characteristics common to women apparently suffering psychological problems from birth control pills.

"This is the big problem and the one I'm studying at the moment. I have yet to find out, for example, whether there is a certain type of woman, emotionally speaking, who could take the pills over an extended period without suffering these effects."

MOTHERS LESS AFFECTED

He said his studies to date have shown, however, that the pills' emotional effects become apparent "within one year" of beginning to take the new contraceptive devices. Women taking the pills for a shorter duration had, in Dr. Voyer's experience, shown some physical problems, but no psychological disturbance.

He said he also found the effects more pronounced in younger women.

"A woman who already has had several children and raised a home and a family" seems less affected. The change of character is much more pronounced in younger women just starting their married life.

"A young woman of what I would call a very feminine type —one who really is interested in her home and family—can't bear emotionally to take the pills."

Dr. Voyer, in a recent speech to a Roman Catholic church group here, linked his theories to current indications that the church might approve use of birth control pills in some circumstances.

"I'm surprised the church seems so weak in the face of these pills and yet has always been so outspoken against mechanical means of contraception. It seems to me the church would be more interested in a method of birth control which does not threaten the psychological makeup of a woman."

Dr. Voyer said he had discussed his findings with several fellow psychiatrists and found a number of them had a similar experience.

"The problem is that most doctors seem a bit reluctant to publish their findings. As soon as I have recorded further experiences, however, I hope to offer a professional judgment on the subject."

Woman Helps Deaf Mutes Learn Trade

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lynn Milton, whose husband is a deaf-mute schoolmaker, is helping the Vancouver Vocational Institute make yet another trade available to handicapped persons.

Mrs. Milton is acting as an interpreter to help instructors put across the techniques of beauty culture to deaf-mutes Arnette Benner, 25, and Doug Eldridge, 22.

The students are doing well and enjoying the challenge. When they make their way into hairdressing salons they expect to communicate with patrons by using a pad and pencil.

The rapid finger, hand and arm movements that form the language of the deaf were grasped quickly by Mrs. Milton after she met her future husband. The pert, intelligent young woman, who has no handicaps herself, also picked up the technical terms for the beauty course in jig time. She sits in front of the students so they can see both instructor and her.

Principal Sydney Clarke says this is the first attempt by the institute to teach deaf persons a trade in which they will have contact with the public.

"But once a person works up a clientele and knows how each individual customer wants her hair done it can work out quite well," he says.

Miss Benner is from Seechelt, 30 miles northwest of Vancouver, and Mr. Eldridge is from Trail, B.C.

The institute has taught two totally blind persons to handle a typewriter and transcription machine for stenography work and one partially blind young man completed a food trades course for work in a kitchen.

ficers was held with Gordon Pound being elected president, Edward Lazier as vice-president, Steve Martin as secretary and Harold Pascoe as press reporter.

It was decided that the next meeting was to be held on

EGGS IN EASTER SALAD

Two years ago about this time I boastfully gave you a recipe for a hard-cooked egg ring. In the list of ingredients was included one tablespoon dried lavender flowers. This ingredient put off some of the cooks in our audience. I was taking too much for granted. I thought you would decide simply to leave them out if you could not find them. What happened was that some girls decided not to make the Hard-Cooked Egg Ring at all.

Now this Egg Ring is a wonderful recipe that you should have and use and I'm repeating it but omitting the lavender flowers and substituting chopped parsley and green onions. Make it to have ready for guests or a quick meal on Good Friday. Lovely on a buffet table.

TUESDAY Dinner Menu by Mary Moore

Chilled Blended Vegetable Juices; Boiled Cured Ox Tongue; Mustard Sauce; Glazed Sweet Potatoes; Brussels Sprouts; Cherry Cobbler; Tea.

HARD-COOKED EGG RING:

10 hard-cooked eggs, sliced or put through coarse knife of grinder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon dry mustard, ¾ cup mayonnaise, 2 tablespoons (2 envelopes) gelatine, ¾ cup cold water, 1/3 cup vinegar, ½ cup finely chopped parsley, ¼ cup finely chopped green onions, including tops, 1 cup 32% cream, watercress.

1. Using top of double boiler soak the gelatine in the cold water for 5 minutes. Add the vinegar. Place over boiling water and heat until gelatine is dissolved. Remove from heat and cool to room temperature. Add mayonnaise, salt, sugar, pepper and mustard. Stir well. Add prepared hard-cooked eggs and parsley and onions. Whip cream and fold in. Turn into oiled 8-cup ring mould (or other fancy-shaped mould). Chill until set. Warm bottom of mould in hot water for 10 seconds and turn out on large serving plate on which you have a generous bed of watercress. Highly recommended for its beauty and flavor, especially for a buffet table.

EASTER EGG SALAD (sometimes called "lily" or "daffodil"):

On each individual salad plate on a bed of lettuce, place a little nest of watercress or parsley. Have one hard-cooked egg ready for each person to be served. Remove shell. Make a long cut through one side of white and slip out yolk. Place it in centre of cress or parsley nest (see note below). Cut white into—four "petals" and arrange around yolk to look like a "lily". Garnish inner side of petals with sleedry strips of pimiento or green onion tops. Serve with mayonnaise into which you have mixed dried green onion flakes.

NOTE:

If desired, all of the yolks from the eggs you hard-cook may be pressed through a sieve to "frizz" them and a little mound of them carefully spooned up and transferred to centre of each salad plate.

The Rural Scene

PICTON—All those who are interested in joining the Prince Edward Boys' 4-H Swine Club are advised to be at the Organization Meeting at Baxter's Hall in Bloomfield on Wednesday April 14 at 8 p.m. Club members will be required to feed and care for one weanling sow to be kept for breeding purposes and one pig, either sow or barrow for market purpose. The Prince Edward County Hog Producers' Association will pay up to one third of the cost of pigs for first year Swine Club members up to a maximum of $15 per members. The pigs will be purchased as a group and the member must complete the club to qualify. Ten applications must be received before a Swine Club will be organized.

4-H TOMATO CLUB

There is a possibility that a 4-H Tomato Club will be in operation in Prince Edward County. The formation of such a club, the first time for a number of years, will depend on the amount of interest shown among rural young people. As with other 4-H Clubs 10 members are necessary before a club can be formed.

In Prince Edward County this year 11 types of 4-H Clubs are being offered. The organizational meeting for all of the clubs is being held in Baxter's Hall, Bloomfield, on Wednesday evening, April 14th, at 8 p.m.

In a 4-H Tomato Club boys and girls will have a chance to learn about the culture of tomatoes through monthly meetings. Further to this, club members will take on the responsibility of looking after their own tomato plants and keeping records on them.

All those interested in joining the 4-H Tomato Club or wanting to know more about it should turn out to the meeting on Wednesday night or contact the Agricultural office in Picton.

QUESTION ANSWERED.

Why establish a basic herd? This question is answered in an article written by T. H. France, Instructor in Farm Management at the Kemptville Agricultural School. Mr. France writes as follows:

Every year farmers give hundreds of dollars to government in the form of taxes which they need not have paid. Setting up a Basic Herd would keep a lot of money at home but many farmers seem to prefer paying income tax when the herd is sold.

Hardly a winter month goes by without the newspapers reporting a barn fire. Often the report includes a note that the loss was fully covered by insurance. The report never says how much income tax was paid by the farmer on livestock lost in the fire and paid out of the insurance.

Farmers filing income tax returns on a cash basis could find themselves paying a high rate of tax in one year on compensation from disease or fire, proceeds from a dispersal sale, the value of gifts (or bequests in will), or any other large reduction of the breeding herd. The establishment of a Basic Herd will not eliminate all income tax payable, but will reduce the amount paid by spreading the taxable income over more years.

A Basic Herd can be set up for mature breeding animals in either or all of sheep, hogs, beef and dairy cattle. One farm can have several Basic Herds. The important thing is to get a Basic Herd started and then keep adding to it as the farm grows.

Farmers who have been in business since January 1, 1947, should apply to have their Basic Herds set up for that date. The Health of Animals Branch, Canada Department of Agriculture, is a useful source for proving ownership of animals but this branch only keeps records for the last ten years. Breed Societies and Veterinary offices are other useful sources.

For those who have started farming since 1947, the same sources of proof of ownership can be used when applying for a Basic Herd.

Young men starting farming today can establish a Basic Herd if they start on their own or with their fathers. Even where a partnership is established between father and son, the son can and should start a Basic Herd of his own.

It is easy to get started on a Basic Herd providing you have been filing your income tax. Just write or call the District Taxation Office and ask for form T2019, the Basic Herd Application Form. Why not ask for some T2019A forms —application to increase Basic Herd—at the same time.

Further help in getting started on the road to a Basic Herd can be got in contacting the local Agricultural Representative and requesting some farm management assistance. Many farmers prefer to wait and pay the higher income taxes. Why not keep that money at home by setting up a Basic Herd now?

Wattam and Frizell Named To Fill Council Vacancies

PICTON (Staff) — Electors of North Marysburgh voted Monday to elect David Wattam and Arthur Frizzell as their new councillors to replace the vacancy caused by the resignation of Wattam and Harrison. Wattam led the polls with 325 votes, Frizzell 311, George Rose 233, Howard Bellwood 234. The council now consists of Mrs. D. Barron, D. Wattam, A. Frizzell, W. Kenington and Reeve Kenneth Hicks.

A total of twelve persons were nominated for the two vacancies created by the resignations. Mr. Wattam resigned when challenged for non payment of business tax and Harrison when challenged in connection with the operation of a school bus. Wattam, paid the back tax and qualified to run in the election. Harrison chose not to run as he felt the threat of his eligibility would still remain open for question. Mr. M. Hicks remains in the position of Clerk Treasurer for the council. Though the weather was bad, 70% of the electors turned out to vote.

Ice Breaker Opens Channel In Bay

PICTON (Staff) — After a number of unsuccessful attempts to open a channel into Picton harbor the government ice breaker and coast guard ship the "Simcoe" Sunday cleared a channel to Lake Ontario Cement Co. here. The first cement carrier to enter Picton Bay is expected in Tuesday according to a cement company spokesman. A tug towing a large dredge and headed for the site of the new "Green Point" bridge has had difficulty in progressing against high winds and ice near Cressy Point at the entrance to the Bay.

Association Will Likely Be Formed

PICTON (STAFF) — A formal motion to form an Association for retarded children in Picton was unanimously carried last night. The meeting, held in Queen Elizabeth School, was well attended by interested citizens, who heard Mr. Peter Gomery, of the Association for retarded children. Mr. Gomery, of Toronto, was introduced by Dr. C. D. Doodale of Belleville. Mr. Gomery, in his address, explained the history and progress of the Ontario Association for Retarded Children. He also outlined the steps in forming an Association and getting a school. "In Canada and the United States," he said, "it is generally accepted estimate that three per cent of the population is mentally retarded to some degree." Some studies estimate the percentage as high as seven and eight at the elementary school level.

An interesting highlight of the meeting was the appearance of the 21st Belleville Cub Pack, of the Belleville retarded school, who demonstrated how a cub pack meeting was conducted. They opened with a "grand howl" and were inspected by the Akela and her assistant. Following their inspection they had a camp fire and sing-song and played two games. Their demonstration ended with a prayer. At the conclusion of their portion of the program they were visited by cubs and leaders of the 2nd Picton pack. Chairman for the meeting was Carl P. Reid, supervising principal of Picton Public Schools.

Judging from the number of people who were noticed signing as charter members of the proposed new Association the meeting was a success. A further meeting has been proposed for 8 p.m. Tuesday May 18 at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Picton.

Helps Public To Understand Painting Art

MONTREAL (CP) — Joyce Taff, owner of the Galerie Jasse-Taff in the heart of old Montreal, has come up with an idea to help those baffled by abstract painting.

Mrs. Taff has recorded an interview with Montreal artist Mitchel Savoie and plays it while spectators view his paintings.

"In the interview I tried to ask the sort of questions that the general public would ask when they first see these abstract landscapes," Mrs. Taff said. "I am trying to establish a closer rapport between the artist and his audience."

During the five-minute bilingual interview, Mrs. Taff asks the artist why he uses such vibrant color, and why it's impossible to see a tree or a bush or a stream in his landscape. She also asks him to explain his idea of self-expression.

This is the first time Mrs. Taff, herself a painter, has employed tape to supplement art, but she hopes to record a discussion among the artist, a French critic and an English critic about the work on display in a future show.

"The more art is discussed, the more people become interested and the more they understand," Mrs. Taff said.

the assay and anything else that would help clear up the situation.

MET MacMILLAN

Mr. Wardrope said that George MacMillan, Wind fall president, and his wife Viola, Toronto were also at the meeting with Mr. Campbell, said "we haven't had an opportunity to correlate the value of (the) core."

Mr. Wardrope said that the next day, Monday, July 13, he called Gen. Graham at the exchanges to see if a satisfactory statement had been received from Windfall.

Gen. Graham told him no statement had been received, so he said he then called Mr. Campbell.

"I was told by Mr. Campbell that Windfall's secretary, Tom Cole, had to approve the statement, but he was at his cottage and the statement would be sent to the exchange as soon as Mr. Cole saw it.

"I called Gen. Graham and told him the statement would be coming later."

DESCRIBES SESSION

Marshal Stearns, chairman of the Toronto Stock Exchange board of governors, described a meeting Tuesday, July 14, between the MacMillans, exchange officials and Ontario Securities Commission officials.

He said Mrs. MacMillan told the meeting no assays of the core had been taken and she resisted a suggestion that assays be taken within 10 days.

Hans Frohberg, geologist for the exchange and for the OSC, was asked what conclusion he had drawn from the meeting.

He said he was skeptical as to whether there were any values in the core."

the motion itself—the first time this has happened in the throne speech debate — and division bells rang as soon as Mr. Plourde put his amendment before the House. The House leaders had met earlier and decided to conclude the debate tonight, two days before the eight-day limit expires.

But even the shortened debate will give the government more suggestions than it could hope to implement in the foreseeable future.

One of the biggest proposals came Monday from Reid Scott (NDP—Toronto Danforth), who asked that all the stops be pulled in a massive assault on the "education crisis of the first magnitude."

LISTS NEEDS

Piecemeal efforts won't do, he said. This was needed:

—Creation of a federal secretariat of education to coordinate all activities, including the labor market and student and teacher exchanges. It would be done by agreement so provincial jurisdiction would be maintained.

—Federal grants governing 75 per cent of university construction costs.

—Increasing existing per-capita grants to universities to $3 from $2, with the ultimate aim of eliminating tuition fees.

—A special grant of $1,000,000 annually to be split among the universities of the Maritimes.

—Scholarships and bursaries for university students.

—Grants to cover the full cost of university research programs and 75 per cent of technical and vocation training.

—Exempting universities from federal sales tax, and treating all donations to universities as tax deductible.

COULD OPT OUT

If any province objected, said Mr. Scott, an opting-out formula could be worked out.

A suggestion of help for Maritimes universities was also raised by George Nowlan (PC — Digby-Annapolis-Kings). About 40 per cent of the university students in Nova Scotia were from other provinces and this meant that the grants worked out at $183.19 a student in Nova Scotia and $281 in Ontario.

On national unity, there were also similar views from different parties.

Paul Martineau (PC—Pontiac - Temiscamingue) said a "broad national policy is required to weld together the "mosaic" of different regions, economies and cultures in the country. What contribution could Canada make to the world if she failed to solve her own problems?

UNDERSTANDING NEEDED

The former Conservative mines minister said there must be understanding within his own party for Quebec's aspirations instead of "grudging recognition." And the departure of former Quebec leader Leon Balcer from the party he said: "If there is no room for such a man in the party, what kind of a man from Quebec . . . can it accommodate?"

Jean Rochon (L—Laval) won applause from both sides of the House with his plea for mutual understanding.

"If we could only forget our differences . . . how great a nation we could build."

ASKS WATER PROGRAM

As the debate ranged far and wide over the political horizons, David G. Hahn (L—Toronto Broadview) asked that the federal and Ontario governments prepare a joint program against water pollution.

Erik Nielsen (PC — Yukon), whose allegations of attempted bribery and political interference last November led to the Dorion judicial inquiry, criticized Prime Minister Pearson for not "cleaning house" in his cabinet.

He said Mr. Pearson has adopted the attitude that a man must be on his way to court before police can be taken of a minister's behavior.

It was clear there would be no cabinet changes until the PC Liberals were turned out of office.

Mr. Nielsen said the present cabinet has "more holes in it than any ship of state in this century" and its problems are compounded by the fact that the "old guard" is in control.

SAYS SAUVE READY

He said Forestry Minister Sauve is ready, willing and able to clean up the party in Quebec but is being "smothered" by Justice Minister Favreau, Postmaster - General Tremblay, State Secretary Lamontagne and the prime minister.

Robert Temple (L—Hastings South) urged members to consider criticism of U.S. action in South Viet Nam in relation to what had happened in eastern Europe after the Second World War.

He wondered if those advocating a U.S. withdrawal from the Southeast Asian nation to allow the people to decide their own future thought that people in Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia were allowed the right of self-determination.

The Liberal back - bencher said he was happy the government had decided in favor of a free vote on capital punishment.

"I'm for abolition," he said.

Caouette Collapses in His Office

OTTAWA (CP) — Creditiste Leader Real Caouette collapsed in his parliamentary office late Monday afternoon and was taken to hospital in nearby Hull, Que., by ambulance. A doctor there said his condition was not serious but he was "a very tired man."

The 47-year-old MP for Villeneuve, who has had diabetes for some years, was admitted to hospital overnight for observation.

Dr. Paul A. Mellieur, who examined Mr. Caouette on arrival at hospital, said he would be in a better position today to know what caused the collapse.

Fernand Bourret, executive assistant in the Creditiste leader's office, said Mr. Caouette was unconscious for a short time and the staff feared it might have been heart trouble.

Dr. Stanley Haldane, Liberal MP for Toronto Parkdale, was called to the office and advised Mr. Caouette to go to hospital immediately for tests.

The collapse occurred just before the Commons began voting on a non-confidence motion presented by the Creditiste group.

THE SAVAGE CELL

Failure, Timidity and Hope in Cancer War

ARTICLE 8
By PAT McGRADY

In 1963, Dr. Sidney Farber and Dr. Alfred B. Handler of the Children's Cancer Research Foundation in Boston reported a strange phenomenon:

When they injected the blood of cancer patients or cancerous animals into fertilized chicken eggs, the embryos died, or the chicks hatched with striking deformities. Normal blood did not produce these effects.

The scientists carefully refrained from calling this a blood test for cancer—nothing, not even the claim of a new cancer cure, is as explosive within science as the suggestion of a new cancer test. Scores of scientists have felt the merciless lash of their peers for proposing a cancer detection procedure. The harshest critics disregarded the clearly stated limitations of the tests, and some of them grossly exaggerated the discoverers' claims. To be sure most of the tests were utterly useless.

Scientists are sensitive about cancer blood tests because, of all the rewards of research, few would be so rich in humor and in satisfaction as the finding of a simple and reliable test for cancer's presence. If early cancers could be detected easily relatively few would reach the incurable stage.

At this writing, the Farber-Handler technique has been applied to several hundred patients.

If the results hold up under further testing, and if others can reproduce them, a milestone in cancer control will have been achieved.

A VACCINE TESTED

In December, 1961, Dr. Bertil Bjorklund of the Caroline Institute and Immunology Research Laboratory, Stockholm, injected himself and 120 healthy volunteers between 60 and 70 years old with a vaccine. He wanted to know if people could produce antibodies against cancers.

By late 1963 he found that some of the people did show anti-cancer antibodies. None of the subjects has had any untoward effects, and none has developed cancer—although statistically, a few should have.

On the face of it, the vaccine prepared from extracts of killed human cancer cells was harmless.

For decades, scientists had talked about a cancer vaccine. Only a few felt that a vaccine for many or all kinds of cancer is conceivable. Here and now was, a vaccine which actually was being tested for its possible prophylactic effect in cancer —human cancer— all kinds of human cancer.

His peers did not take kindly to Dr. Bjorklund's experiments. He was accused of being premature, of conducting potentially harmful experiments on people, of producing an ineffective preparation based upon the untenable postulate that human cancer cells contain a common antigen.

The proof of the merit or folly of this approach will be apparent eventually, if Dr. Bjorklund is permitted to carry on his work. The U.S. Public Health Service, his principal supporter, found technical reasons for withdrawing its aid when the controversy reached it peak. This was followed by efforts to oust him from his laboratory and sever his academic and scientific affiliations. Under attack from all sides, he now has isolated his cancer antigen and has demonstrated effective antibodies to it.

The hostility was not surprising. Almost every notable advance in medical science—and, to be sure, many pseudo-advances as well — had met with similar cynicism, skepticism and opposition. Nevertheless, this case served to remind science that the application of basic research to medical problems can save lives—the sooner it is applied, the more lives saved.

EARLY DETECTION STRESSED

Excluding skin cancer, which is highly curable for the most part, 90.9 percent of all patients with early cancer survive one year, according to a recent Texas survey, 54.6 percent five years, 47.3 percent ten years, and 42.7 percent fifteen years. Comparable figures for those reporting advanced symptoms are 35.1 percent one year, 11.7 percent five years, 8.0 percent ten years, and 4.1 percent fifteen years.

As in most other diseases, women with cancer are more durable than men—about 15-25 percent longer - lived on the average.

One of several reasons for their ability to beat cancer is the fact that women are more inclined than men to report early symptoms to doctors.

Several studies show that the better educated people, with some awareness of the need to nip cancer early, and the better-off people, with the means to finance proper treatment, are more successful in combating cancer than are the poor and uneducated. Whether male or female or with early or advanced cancer, the better off are between 30 and 50 percent more successful in surviving than are poorer people with comparable cancers. The moral appears to be that early detection and good medical care pay off.

OVERDIAGNOSIS

A standard guide for the pathology of tumors is the fascicles of the Atlas of Tumor Pathology, published by the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology. The percentage of deviations in general practice from this diagnostic yardstick has not been computed, but a few studies indicate that it probably is substantial. In fact, there are no completely reliable estimates of cancer misdiagnoses; at least, none has been published. One recent review of 7,946 so-called cancer deaths for the Province of Saskatchewan has given a rough idea, however. In this case, confirmed and unconfirmed causes of death, as cited on the meager evidence of death certificates, and failure to certify cancers recorded with the provincial Cancer Commission were used as the basis of calculations. Overdiagnoses of cancer were estimated at 11.4 percent and underdiagnoses at 14 percent. It is a sobering thought that more than one in ten patients are subject to unnecessary mutilation or may be deprived of the possibility of cure by the doctor who diagnosed cancer where, in fact, there was none. In these findings, the most commonly overdiagnosed cancers were of the stomach (256.5), bronchus, trachea, and lung (134.6), pancreas (120.3) and large intestine (117.6). Most commonly underdiagnosed were cancers of the skin (125.6) mouth (117.6) prostate (107.4) and breast (91.6). From these findings, the investigators from the Allan Blair Memorial Clinic of Regina and the National Cancer Institute of Canada concluded that "death certificate diagnoses are insufficiently accurate to permit their use as a reliable indication of the incidence of cancer." Deaths the basis for official estimates of cancer in the United States.

Memorial Cancer Centre, in New York, has made several certificate data, nevertheless, a studies of delay in detecting advanced cancer. In 1948, investigators found that in only 32.5 percent of the advanced cases entering Memorial has there been no element of delay; in these the disease had been hopelessly advanced by the time anyone could suspect its presence.

THOROUGH CHECK

In the rest, patients were at fault for deadly delays in 31.2 percent of the cases, physicians in 23.4 percent and both in 12.9 percent. Delay has diminished and operability has increased since 1948 as public education programs have made people increasingly cancer conscious.

The Memorial study showed that patients refrained from going to the doctor for several reasons. Some reasons were emotional. The patients feared ridicule, or treatment, or just bad news.

Some remained away for economic reasons— they felt they would be unable to pay for treatment. They couldn't stand the double burden of at least temporary joblessness and medical bills; they dreaded the prospect of being a burden.

And some felt they had cancer and that it was incurable.

The doctors' faults also were varied. Some, unable to diagnose the case, failed to refer it to others who could. Some gave up when there was no immediate response to the right treatment; some gave no advice and no treatment; and some misadvising the case, gave the wrong advice and the wrong treatment.

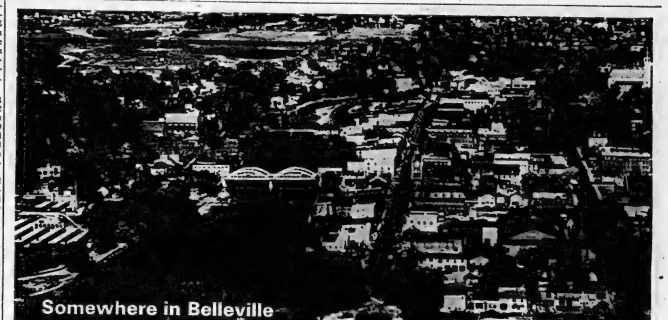
About 80 percent of the commonest cancers can be detected by a first-class examination in the doctor's office. Not all of them, however, will be curable —some lung cancers grow for 30 or 40 years before symptoms reveal their presence, and ocean breast and other cancers no larger than the head of a pin have spread widely when first found.

The basic diagnosis of cancer involves examining suspect tissue under the microscope.

Beyond this, probably no detection technique has proved as successful as the Pap test. In 1923, a Greek immigrant, Dr. George N. Papanicolaou (Pap for short) found remarkable changes in the cells shed into the vaginal fluids of women undergoing periodic changes and a variety of disorders. The most striking changes were seen when uterine cancer was present.

The late Dr. George N. Papanicolaou whose smear test for uterine cancer has saved thousands of lives, could save millions.

For years after he reported, his method was ignored. When a women's magazine discussed it, there was an immediate popular demand for the test. Physicians who had told patients they didn't know anything about the test or that the accounts were erroneous began using it and found it simple, cheap and effective. Now top scientists say its regular use by women above 20 would literally reduce deaths from cervical cancer to zero.



By the time Dr. Pap died in 1962, his cell-study technique had been applied to cancer detection in the lung, stomach, heart, bowel, kidney, bladder, breast, prostate and brain.

Announcements of new blood and other tests for cancer are not as frequent as they used to be. Most of these who introduced tests in the past have taken their licking and retired from this phase of investigation. Those who now feel they may have something of cancerous value in detecting cancer remain silent. Health agencies are not aggressively seeking a test.

Though no universal chemical test for cancer has yet emerged, numerous sensitive new methods have been developed for the determination of enzyme, antisen antibody, and other molecules, and it is thoroughly conceivable that someday some of them will detect cancer patterns.

They will do this, however, only if scientists have a test in mind and will perfect it over the opposition of the inevitable critics and cynics.

is a man who has everything it takes to make a successful life insurance underwriter.

Trouble is, he doesn't know it yet.

We want to train that man to become "the Man from Manufacturers." Maybe you can help us find him.

WE'RE LOOKING FOR MEN

Belleville is a rapidly growing community. And Manufacturers Life business here is growing apace. There are many Manufacturers Life policyowners in Belleville. They believe in our product. And so do we. We believe that the kind of service Manufacturers Life delivers better provides the financial security of the families and business es of Belleville. We need able men to help provide that service. That is why we're out at it takes to become "the Man from Manufacturers."

WHAT KIND OF MAN?

The man we're looking for has probably never considered life insurance underwriting as a career. He might just be graduating from school. Or he may already be successful in business but starting to feel that there isn't much further he can go in his field. There's no limit to how far he can go with Manufacturers Life. The man we select will be walking into a promising sales situation. And a promising career. What kind of man will he be?

IT TAKES ALL KINDS

To tell you the truth, we don't know. Yet. Present Manufacturers Life underwriters don't fit a mold. They aren't "types." Some are married and some are single. Some have a university education and some are completely self-educated.

They do have a capacity for inner discipline when it comes to work habits. (They have to. The Manufacturers Life underwriter enjoys the same freedom and independence he would if he were in business for himself.)

And they do like people.

PEOPLE ARE PART OF THE JOB

Many Manufacturers Life policyowners look upon their agent as an advisor who'll give them help in planning their financial security. Manufacturers Life underwriters welcome those problems. And do their best to solve them.

V/HAT ARE THE REWARDS?

If we could find a man who is willing to work hard for his clients as well as himself, we'll train him as a Manufacturers Life underwriter. Here's what we can offer him:

1. An adequate income while he is learning plus the chance to earn substantial bonuses. Successful men who set their sights high can attain a five figure income early in their careers.
2. Permanence of markets for his services. Life insurance fills a need no other financial instrument can meet and the market is constantly widening.
3. A retirement pension as early as age 60 (minimum of 20 years service). Major medical expense coverage for his family at a nominal rate.
4. Opportunities for development in sales management. Most of our 100 branch managers were Life Underwriters. Our current expansion brings many new opportunities each year.

WHY MANUFACTURERS LIFE THEN?

A career in life underwriting offers many substantial rewards. But why choose Manufacturers Life? Here are some of the reasons:

1. Our method of selecting new men. (A man is offered a contract with Manufacturers Life only after we've mutually agreed that he has a high potential for success. We have an obligation both to the man himself and to our policyowners to select only representatives who will continue in the business and thrive in it.)
2. More to sell (Manufacturers Life offers a complete range of life insurance and annuity plans which can be custom tailored to the needs of individuals and business and industry.)
3. Rates are competitive. (The Manufacturers Life agent's ratebook is constantly revised to supply benefits at the most favourable costs.)
4. Expert training in what to say, what to do and what to know. Advanced courses that range all the way from Business Insurance and Employee Benefit Plans to Estate Planning. As the Manufacturers Life underwriter increases his knowledge of insurance and planning techniques his ability to earn increases accordingly.
5. More prospects are insurable (Manufacturers Life is a pioneer in the insuring of special cases including diabetics and coronaries.)

CAN YOU HELP?

Perhaps there's someone you know who would be interested in becoming a Life Underwriter. It's a challenging career and a rewarding one. Perhaps you are interested yourself. Govt. Policies Alone Will Not Help Canada Achieve Growth Says N. E. Head

By MICHAEL BLAIR

MONTREAL (CP)—Comfortable belief that government policies alone will help Canada achieve an average growth in exports of 5.3 per cent annually is erroneous, V. O. Marquez, executive vice - president of Northern Electric Co., said Monday.

Speaking to a group of businessmen during a review of the Economic Council of Canada's first annual report, which set business goals to be achieved by 1970, he said many who read the report regarded the word "policies" to mean government policies. Then he added:

"This blinkered approach to the review leads to the comfortable but erroneous conclusion that Canada's success or failure in reaching our export goals will depend substantially on the development of suitable government policies . . . nothing could be further from the truth."

Mr. Marquez was commenting on the report at a review sponsored by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

EFFORT NEEDED

He said a common denominator running through much of Canadian business is the need for effort," and termed the lack of any export drive by some concerns as "paralysis by analysis," by which Canadian firms had derided the export field was too tough for them even before trying to enter it.

Mr. Marquez said industry should keep government tariff negotiators informed as to "our areas of weakness and as to where we are likely to obtain maximum benefits from removal of trade obstacles."

W. J. Bennett, a member of the ECC and vice-president of Iron Ore Co. of Canada, backed up Mr. Marquez's call for action and said Canadian exporters must "improve on the historical pattern."

With the discussions came a warning from A. J. Little, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, that if business doesn't do its own planning the government might.

SEES BOTTLENECKS

Dr. John Deutsch, chairman of the economic council, said Canada could face some damaging bottlenecks, particularly in the field of skilled manpower, if its economy keeps growing at the present rate.

COMMENTS ON GNP

He was commenting on a federal government announcement that the Canadian economy showed a rise in the gross national product of 8.9 per cent in 1964.

"If we keep moving at this rate, we may reach some of our goals before 1970," he said. "This announcement of the increase in production during the year was even higher than the experts had predicted."

Dr. Deutsch said the growth emphasized his previous recommendation for a Canadian manpower policy.

"We should improve training and manpower policy greatly or run into price and cost increases which may be damaging," he said.

Govt. Seeking To Plug Drain On Reserves

LONDON (CP)—The government has called on British industry to shelve or eliminate foreign investment projects which do not produce a quick and substantial profit and to bring home all funds not immediately required overseas.

Seeking to plug the drain on Britain's diminishing gold and dollar reserves, Economic Minister George Brown has written some 300 leading companies urging them to push exports, reduce reliance on imports and curb the outward flow of capital "to the full extent that they are able."

In a copy of the letters, made public Monday, Brown said the companies could also make their contribution to Britain's balance - of - payments struggle "by careful scrutinizing of overseas investment projects and by reducing postponing or eliminating those which will not yield quick and substantial returns to the balance of payments."

He urged the companies also to remit to Britain "more of your earnings from any overseas subsidiaries or branches" and to ensure "that all funds that are not immediately required abroad are brought back to this country even on a temporary basis."

Brown's letter, dated April 8, followed action in the government's April 6 budget, curbing the use of official reserves for overseas investment in Canada, United States and other dollar area countries to reduce the outflow of long-term capital by at least $100,000,000 ($300,000,000) a year.

Liquor Laws Are Criticized By Members

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's liquor laws came in for another round of criticism Monday from members of the legislature's standing committee on government commissions.

Albert Walker (PC—Oshawa) said he has a difficult time explaining to people why clubs in "dry" areas are allowed to obtain banquet permits that permit them to give away drinks but not to sell them.

Mr. Walker said he knew of a small golf club which held a Saturday evening dances to help defray the costs of operation. The club was being forced to break the law by finding round-about methods to make members pay for their drinks, he said.

Mr. Walker said surely drunkenness was more likely to result from drinks given away than from drinks which patrons had to pay for. From the drunkenness standpoint the law regarding banquet permits in dry areas was not accomplishing anything.

BOUND BY LAW

Judge W. T. Robb, chairman of the liquor licence board, said the board was bound by the law which states that liquor cannot be sold in "dry" local option areas.

James Trotter (L — Toronto Parkdale) said one of the most ridiculous things about the province's liquor laws was that they don't allow restaurants to sell even a glass of sherry with meals on Sundays.

As for the closing of bars at 11:30 p.m. Saturday, he said many persons don't even go out Saturday night until about 10 o'clock.

Judge Robb said the last time he had been asked about the Sunday sale of liquor he had made the comment that he thought it would come about. He did not amplify on this.

In reply to Arthur Reaume (L—Essex North), Judge Robb also said the closing of beer parlors between 6:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. will "probably" be abolished.

Provincial Secretary John Yaremko said a committee of the cabinet has been studying Ontario's liquor laws for two years. He did not indicate when any changes were likely.

Ricky Meagher, 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Meagher, 26 North Park, recently distinguished himself in Cub Scout work by earning 14 badges. He is a member of the 13th Belleville Holy Rosary Pack, where Mr. H. Lyons is Akela.

Aside from his Cub activities, Ricky also plays centre for Belleville Pee Wee Minor Hockey team that won the "B" championship in the Shrine tournament; and has an Ontario Intelligencer paper route.

Principals Oppose Listing Exam Results

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's high school principals want to stop the publishing of end-of-term results in newspapers.

In a letter to the York Township board of education here the Ontario Secondary School Headmasters Association said a conference of headmasters last summer agreed that the examination results published in the press were not in the best interest of students.

"Such information is of a personal nature, and the concern of school authorities, parents and citizens only. Being of such a nature it should not be released to the public," the association stated.

Federal Budget Deficit Cut by Whopping 87 P. C. In White Paper Presented

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Last spring's federal budget deficit of $619,000,000 was cut by a whopping 87 per cent to $83,000,000 in the 1964-65 fiscal year, Finance Minister Gordon reported Monday.

After tabling his pre-budget white paper in the Commons, he told reporters: "It was a very good year in all industries, in all economic components, and in all parts of the country."

He told reporters he had under-estimated the growth of the economy and buoyancy of federal government revenues last year. This is the kind of underestimation he does not find embarrassing, he said.

The deficit for the year ended March 31 was the lowest since a $39,000,000 deficit in 1957-58, and came after a string of six running as high as $791,000,000 in 1961-62. In his budget last spring Mr. Gordon had forecast a deficit of $455,000,000.

But he would make no prediction Monday about the size of the deficit—or surplus—he expects at the end of the current fiscal year next March 31. That forecast will be in his budget speech.

"I am optimistic about the months ahead and the years ahead, as well as the long-term future of Canada," he told reporters.

What does the white paper mean to the man in the street, he was asked.

"It means the finances of the federal government are under control once again and the business of the country is being pretty well managed."

The economy last year surged forward to a much greater extent than the government anticipated.

The gross national product for the calendar year 1964—a measure of the value of all goods and services produced—rose 8.9 per cent over 1963 to $47,003,000,000. It was the biggest gain since 1956.

Other features of the white paper

—Personal income taxes, the biggest single revenue producer in federal accounts, yielded $2,108,000,000, up 13 per cent from 1963-64.

—Corporation tax income climbed 19.9 per cent to $1,310,000,000.

—Sales tax revenues rose 26.1 per cent to $1,132,000,000.

—Defence spending was down 8.2 per cent to $1,581,000,000 and represented 21.9 per cent of budgetary spending.

—The gross debt of Canada at March 31, was $26,648,000,000, including unmatured debt of $18,883,000,000. The net debt was $15,549,000,000, up $479,000,000 for the year.

Tax Cuts to Create Jobs, Keep the Economy Growing Are Predicted in Budget

OTTAWA (CP)—Federal tax cuts to create jobs and keep the economy growing are being widely forecast for the April 26 budget Finance Minister Gordon is believed to be considering.

The finance minister announced the budget date Monday as he tabled a pre-budget white paper that contained some encouraging figures — a deficit of only $83,000,000 for the 1964-65 fiscal year compared with an original forecast last year of $619,000,000. The fiscal year ended March 31.

It was the lowest deficit since 1958 and the 1957-58 fiscal year.

Alternatives of producing a near-balanced budget in the 1965-66 fiscal year, or running another deficit in order to help keep the economy growing.

Mr. Gordon's budget is a secret for another 12 days, but outside the Commons Monday he said:

"At times when there is still . . . an appreciable amount of unemployment and we know that large numbers of people will be coming into the labor force in the next few years, I think these are not the times to balance the budget on an exact balance."

WANT CUTS

The finance minister would have broad support for a cut in taxes. Both the Canadian Labor Congress and the Canadian Chamber of Commerce believe in such a step.

The Economic Council of Canada said recently the gross national product must increase by at least 5½ per cent annually until 1970 if the economy is to absorb the growth in the labor force.

Many economists doubt this goal can be achieved without extra incentives, despite the fact the GNP increased 8.9 per cent last year.

Lower taxes for corporations and consumers would pump more money into the economy and create expansion and jobs. Corporation tax benefits, like cuts would be politically advantageous if the government is faced with a general election this year.

MORE BRITONS BORN

The birth-rate in Britain has gone up for the fourth straight year. In 1964 873,890 young Britons were born and 534,560 died.

Loyalty Talk Turned Down By Gathering

TORONTO (CP)—Erik Nielsen, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for the Yukon and a staunch supporter of Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, made a speech for party unity Monday night.

Then he watched as a call for a standing declaration of loyalty to Mr. Diefenbaker brought only a minority showing at a meeting of the Humber Valley Progressive Conservative Men's Club. There was no contrary vote.

Then he watched a motion endorsing loyalty in Mr. Diefenbaker go down in defeat at a meeting of the Humber Valley Progressive Conservative Men's Club.

Just minutes before the vote, Mr. Nielsen received a standing ovation for a speech lopping the Liberals and calling for Conservatives to get behind their leader and develop positive policies.

Charles King, past president of the New York West Conservative Association, called—for those supporting Mr. Diefenbaker to stand.

About a quarter of the 150 in the audience got to their feet.

BECOME MORE ALIKE

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP)— Programs of political parties are becoming more alike as traditions give way to a new trend of professionalism in Canadian politics, Douglas Fisher, NDP member of Parliament for Port Arthur, said Monday night. "We are arguing less about goals and many more about relative sincerity of parties in achieving these goals," Mr. Fisher told the Men's Canadian Club.

Wilson to Get First-hand Information on Viet Nam

By BORIS MISKEW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prime Minister Wilson bends President Johnson a sympathetic ear Thursday with the hope of learning first - hand future American plans for the war in Viet Nam, and the possibility of a peaceful solution.

The prime minister is scheduled to leave London early to meet with Secretary-General U Thant of the United Nations, address the Economic Club of New York and talks with both the president in Washington before returning to Britain.

Vietnamese conflict will most likely be at the top of the discussion between Johnson and Wilson although talks also are expected in touch on the North Atlantic Alliance and on Britain's financial picture.

Wilson's mission to the U.S. coincides with British plans to send foreign secretary Patrick Gordon Walker in a number of Asian capitals to study the possibility of international peace negotiations on the South Vietnamese war.

ARENA FOR TALKS

Gordon Walker had hoped to include Hanoi, the capital of North Viet Nam, and Peking on his agenda but Wilson's unquestioning support of U.S. policy in Viet Nam apparently had poured cold water on the idea.

Diplomatic sources said Monday in London that both China and North Viet Nam have told Britain they see little point in Gordon Walker's visit to their capitals when he sets off to Asia next week.

Wilson's support of U.S. action against the North Vietnamese has aroused outcries from a sizable number of British Labor members of Parliament as well as from other quarters of the country.

His unflinching backing of the American policy in Viet Nam obviously is going against the grain of many Labor party members, who had been critical of U.S. policy on many issues while they were in opposition. Wilson therefore will have to bring back logical arguments as to why Britain should continue to support the U.S. in Viet Nam.

His success will largely depend on whether Johnson can convince him that American plans in Southeast Asia are genuinely aimed at bringing peace to South Viet Nam and that the time of the crisis is blossoming into a full - scale war are remote.

Wilson has shown willingness to bend backwards in his efforts to avoid U.S. - British friction since the election of his Labor party by a slim majority last October.

NEEDS U.S. SUPPORT

He needs U.S. support in his efforts to restore to an optimistic level Britain's shaky economic structure that his government had inherited from the conservative Tory administration.

Furthermore, British opposition to U.S. policy in Viet Nam would likely have little effect on determining whether to oust the rebel Viet Cong from South Viet Nam and could stand as an obstacle in future British-American discussion on other matters.

The prime minister also is aware of a certain similarity between the position in which the Americans find themselves in Viet Nam and Britain's position in Malaysia.

The touchy relations between Indonesia and the British-backed Malaysian Federation could turn into another South Viet Nam should Indonesian-trained guerrillas resume their assaults on Malaysian territory.

Indonesia explained such assaults last fall simply as efforts by volunteer groups to aid rebellious factions hostile to the Malaysian government.

If these National Hockey League Stanley Cup playoffs stay true to form and the homeclowners come through tonight the chase for the pewterware will be tied up tighter than a haggis on St. Andrew's Day.

The home town fans in all four playoffs centres have no complaints except when the clubs are cavorting on "foreign pastures."

Power plays and hometown crowds seem to be the success ingredients for the Red Wings and Canadiens. Wins tonight in the hostile haciendas will vault them in the Fort Knox series.

In this jungle expert opinion the Wings-Hawks game Sunday night was the best jousting yet in this tournament of the golden galliders. Could it be that the image of the lettuce has affected all four clubs to date. Each of them has shown a tendency to "fold" at one time or another.

Tonight's tilts should bring out the best—and probably the "beast" is the going gets rough—in each of the contenders.

The Hawks and the Leafs have their backs to the wall with the task of taking two in a row facing them. As our man Mushmouth says: "Hope grows internal in the humanic chest. The Leafs will defuselage the Canadiens' powere pranks while the Hawks will demogilize the Wings."

And here's a tip to the Black Hawks: Be sure that my friend Jim Coleman, one of the best sports columnists extant and observer extraordinary doesn't make any predictions over the air.

Sunday night Jim was in the broadcasting serie and opined that Chicago looked the better team on the play to that point.

Jim had scarcely taken the first puff on his umpteenth cigar of the evening when Norm Ullman cut loose. Whamı went home the second goal of the night. Dave Coleman left in weni the third for the eitscher and a new scoring record.

But don't give up the ship, men. It could happen in reverse. If the senior citizens of the Leafs can defuse the Montreal power plays and the Hawks reach earlier heights the stake horses can go to the post for the big one in a semi-finals dead heat.

Almost anything can happen. The Detroit backbenchers came to the rescue Sunday night and powered the stars and super-stars in an effort that was topped by the brilliant performance of Norm Ullman.

The Hawks played the hockey they are capable of in the first two periods and looked like they were going to take it until Ullman sprayed the defence with his two quickies and that seemed to take the steam out of them.

King Clancy, of all people, picks the Hawks to take Detroit and naturally his Leafs to meet Chicago for the silverware. Clancy maintains his Leafs have not reached their potential with the remark: "If 12 of our fellows were playing the way they can play we wouldn't have a worry in the world."

Clancy said the Red Wings should go down with their big guns firing before the Chicago sharpshooters because of injuries, but he made the remark prior to Sunday night's game when the reserves came to the rescue in no uncertain manner.

Remember it's Hockey Night in the Home Towns of Toronto and Chicago. Business in the hat and goloshes stores of Detroit seemed to be very good and it is sure than likely the Chicago emporiums that deal in baby octopi, young hamsters and firecrackers will be sold out come game time.

Melville Wins Title

Melville Shorelners put the wraps on the Prince Edward North Shore Hockey League playoff championship in Wellington last night, nipping Proctor Silex 4-3 in a thriller.

Shorelners took the title in series four games to two, winning the O'Connor Trophy.

The final game was a tight one all the way with the losers doing everything but tying it. They trailed by a single goal nearly all night. Melville led 2-1 after one period and 3-2 going into the third.

A power play goal, the only one of the contest, by Ed Ross made it a 4-2 game in the third after Irwin of the losers had raced in all alone and hit the crossbar. Proctors did come back for a goal with less than two minutes left to play but that's the way it ended.

Melville outshot Proctors 41-36 while the losers got nine of the 14 penalties, including a misconduct to Don Brannen.

Don Simpson triggered a pair of goals for Melville with Ed Ross netting his game-winning marker and also assisting on another. Joe Scott was the other marksman. Single assists went to Jim Dunlop, Paul Kilbreath, Dave LaRue and Eldon Carson.

Ralph Irwin fired two Proctor Silex tallies with Don Duffy notching the other one. Earl Foster, Vic Allen and Morris Weeks drew an assist each.

Various team and individual trophy winners will be honored at a league banquet on April 24th.

Wings Look To Bench * * * * * * * * Imlach Switches

'Hot Times In Home Towns' Tonight

By IAN MacLAINE

TORONTO (CP) — No one seems to have told Punch Imlach the hockey season may end tonight for Toronto Maple Leafs. He's still doggedly tinkering with the machinery of his defending Stanley Cup champions.

Leafs, trailing Montreal three games to two in their best-of-seven semi-final, need a win here tonight to keep alive their hopes of winning the cup for the fourth year in a row. And their coach, at the eleventh hour, is still shuffling his power-play and penalty-killing units.

Belated or not, Imlach's concern is understandable. His offensive formations have cashed in only two of Toronto's 11 goals in the five games while enjoying a manpower advantage. The penalty - killers have yielded eight of Canadiens' 13 tallies while Leafs were shorthanded.

In Monday's workout, Imlach came up with drastic remedies for both situations, benching three of his four regular penalty killers and ignoring power-play specialists in favor of a conventional alignment of two defencemen and a regular forward line.

MAHOVLICH NAMED

Bob Pulford and Ron Stewart, Leafs' most effective pair of killers for several seasons, were discarded in favor of a brand - new, twosome. Frank Mahovlich and Ron Ellis. Veteran Red Kelly replaced Dave Keon as George Armstrong's partner on the little ex-Wing was excused from the practice and may be back at his regular spot tonight.

A groin injury that has hampered Pulford's recent play appeared to be the key to the shift. Kelly and Ellis have filled in occasionally on penalty - killing this season but veteran observers couldn't recall ever seeing Mahovlich perform the chore.

Imlach was blunt Monday when he talked to reporters after the workout about the deficiencies of his power play.

"What power play?" he asked sardonically. "Those guys can't shoot from the point. . . ."

So the men poised at the enemy blue line will be regular defencemen, probably Kent Douglas and Tim Horton, who saw some action in Saturday's 3-1 loss at Montreal and appeared to be the most effective pair at the points. Imlach indicated he would play his freshest forward line with them.

COUNTS ON WIN

The prospect of elimination tonight obviously didn't occur to Imlach, who laid on reservations for the midnight train to Montreal, where a seventh and deciding game would be played

The coach was looking still farther ahead. He named Terry Sawchuk to replace Johnny Bower in goal for the first two games of the final round in Detroit or Chicago.

Golf Course Rare Sight For Russians

VANCOUVER (CP) — The visiting doctor addressed the ball at Shaughnessy golf course, swung vigorously, took a four-inch divot and sent the ball 12 inches down the fairway.

"Too hard," said Dr. Konstantin Zhubkov, chief of Makarov Hospital, Kiev, U.S.S.R. "That is enough."

With him in the foursome were Dr. Sergei Zatsepin, Dr. Nadezda Grigorieva and Dr. Natalia Vorobyova, colleagues from Russia.

They visited Shaughnessy on Sunday because golf courses in Russia are as rare as high silk hats.

But Dr. Zhubkov was quick to point out Soviet success at another Canadian game — hockey — "where we have done rather well."

CHICAGO (CP) — Although two more Detroit Red Wings have been added to the list of probable starters for Thursday's sixth game of the Stanley Cup semi-finals here, coach Sid Abel is confident of his bench strength.

Warren Godfrey, who has been around the National Hockey League for more than a dozen years, will replace injured defenceman Doug Barkley, Rookie Bob Dillabough will suit up in place of left winger Larry Jeffrey.

Jeffrey, who missed the third and fourth games of the best-of-seven series because of an injured back, received eight stitches in Sunday's game against Chicago Black Hawks which Detroit won 4-2 to take a 3-2 lead in games. Jeffrey was struck by a skate in a scramble.

Abel indicated Monday that the club doctor has ordered Jeffrey to the sidelines for the remainder of the season.

Godfrey, who played 11 regular season games this season, and Dillabough both joined the Wings last week from Pittsburgh Hornets of the American Hockey League.

PRAISES BOTH

"Dillabough played extremely well in Sunday's game," said Abel. "Even if we had been up to full strength, he would have dressed.

"Godfrey has been steady in every game we've used him in this year," he added.

Godfrey will probably handle the regular defence chores along with veterans Marcel Pronovost and Bill Gadsby and 26-year-old rookie Gary Bergman. Al Langlois, who sat out Sunday's game, will be the fifth man of the unit.

The Wings' defence will also be aided by the solid two-way play of chunky centre Alex Delvecchio. The 14-year National Hockey League veteran was the thorn in the side of the Black Hawks Sunday night, breaking up plays before they got started and clearing the puck time and again during Chicago power plays.

Besides, the Wings have had the advantage so far in the offensive departments while the Detroit defence has had little to worry about except muscular super - star Bobby Hull. The high - scoring leftwinger has counted seven of the club's 15 goals in the five games.

In fact, Chicago's three pivot men, Stan Mikita, Phil Esposito and Fred Stanfield have only provided three goals in the series.

MIKITA DISAPPOINTS

Each has scored one, but the biggest disappointment is Mikita. The NHL scoring champ for the last two seasons registered his lone goal while playing on a line with Hull and with the explosive Holl.

Mikita said Monday that he had been instructed to make no comment on his less than spectacular play.

In Sunday's match, Esposito joined the ranks of the unimpressive. Chicago coach Billy Reay replaced the wise-cracking centre on his regular line with Hull and Chico Maki.

Diminutive Camille Henry joined the line on the right side for a while and later, Ulf Sterner, younger brother, Dennis played the position.

Esposito played through the first few games of the series with an ailing back, missing only the second match, but Reay refuses to excuse the centre on that account.

"Maybe that was it," said Reay, "but I do know he didn't do a thing to help all night."

Reay Defends Flashy Centre

Chicago Fans 'Ride' Stan Mikita

By STERLING TAYLOR

CHICAGO (CP)—Stan Mikita, who can hear the mumbling of discord as it growing stronger, must know how Ted Williams felt.

Williams, the Boston Red Sox slugger who ranked among baseball's greats, heard the boos and jeers of the crowd when he had a bad day.

And they're growing louder for the 165-pound Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks following the fifth game of the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi - final in Detroit Sunday night.

"I imagine the crowd gets on any athlete's back when he's in a slump," the flashy centre said by telephone from Rockton, Ill., Monday. The Hawks had flown directly there after the Sunday game.

But I've been instructed to make no comment."

The discontent stems from the fact that Hawks' 24-year-old centre has only one goal and three assists after five games against Detroit Red Wings.

His output looks even smaller after Norm Ullman's five goals and four assists, since it's Mikita's job to check the stickhandling Red Wings' centreman.

But Chicago coach Bill Reay refuses to join Mikita's critics.

WHAT DO YOU WANT?

"What do you want from the guy?" Is all Reay will say to queries about his seven-year National Hockey League veteran.

"What do you expect me to say about the guy? Ullman didn't look so hot in the second, third and fourth games. There was one game — don't remember which — when he never got his stick on the puck. I thought Mikita played well in the second, third and fourth games. That's one more than Ullman."

Mikita's problem probably stems from the fact that he ranks with the current scoring giants—Gord Howe, Bobby Hull, Jean Beliveau, to name a few.

Mikita has 150 regular season goals in seven seasons with the Hawks and 259 assists. He also has 19 goals in 45 playoff games, and a Stanley Cup playoff record—in 1962—with six goals and 15 assists for 21 points.

STAN MIKITA

During the 1963-64 seasons, he won the NHL scoring championship with 39 goals and 50 assists, and repeated this season with 28 goals and 50 assists.

The Wings currently lead the Hawks 3-2 with the sixth game here tonight and the final game, if necessary, in Detroit Thursday.

TORONTO (CP)—John Joseph (Jack) Corcoran, 73, Toronto hoteiman and wrestling and boxing promoter, died Monday. Corcoran, born in Toronto, was an early promoter of professional wrestling in North America. His first big match in Toronto, between Jim Londos and Gino Garibaldi for the world title, attracted 16,000 people to Maple Leaf Gardens in 1931.

He also raced thoroughbreds on Ontario tracks.

His two most successful horses were Rol Confidence and Plain Dealer, both of which won many stakes races.

Commercial Loop Meets Tomorrow

The Commercial Softball League, after one of its most successful seasons in years last summer, will make plans for this 1966 season at an organization meeting this week.

The meeting, called by President Dave Feeney, will be held at the Recreation Centre Wednesday night at eight o'clock.

All possible entries and other interested parties have been asked to attend.

A number of teams are said to be prepared to enter the loop and Feeney expressed confidence that six to eight teams will be taking part in the league schedule.

"We can use a lot of matters cleared away at this first meeting if everyone turns out," he said.

The time and place once again: Wednesday (tomorrow) night, eight o'clock, at the Recreation Centre.

'SHOULD MISS YEAR'

CAMROSE, Alta. (CP)—Rev. David Bauer, coach of Canada's 1964 Olympic hockey team, says Canada should withdraw from the 1966 world hockey tournament to rebuild her team. Speaking at a dinner Saturday in aid of $300,000 recreation plan for Camrose, Father Bauer said he thinks the Canadian players should be given the chance to complete one full university term, then in 1967 start preparing for the Olympics.

Apollo Club 'Lifters' Win Honors

Apollo Barbell Club lifters faired exceptionally well at the Ontario Intermediate Weightlifting Championships held in Woodstock this past weekend.

Belleville's ten-man team, all 16 years of age or under, won eight trophies in the competition and turned in some fine totals for this age group.

Price Morris took part as a heavyweight guest lifter and had a total of 905 pounds, putting him in the exclusive top four lifters in Canada who have surpassed the 900 pound total. Teammate John Lewis, of Olympic renown, is one of the four.

Morris pressed 315, snatched 250 and hit 340 in the clean and jerk for his 905 total. He later had a 360 clean and jerk and tried at 380, just missing on this mark, a Canadian record.

Lewis and Morris are entering the Canadian championships in Regina on June 12. Both are considered to have good chances in the classes.

New Crop Future Greats

All Clubs Benefit

By AL McNEILL

MONTREAL (CP) — As the names Hull, Howe, Beliveau and Kelly appear again this year in the top 10 of the Stanley Cup statistics list, what about the handful of hopefuls making their playoff debuts?

How many years will it take this year's rookie-crop to reach the—status of the superstars who have dominated the scoring lists during playoffs of the last decade?

In both semi-final rounds currently in progress, all four clubs have newcomers to postseason play in their lineups. Some of the new faces have been labelled potential greats by coaches and fans alike.

The goaltending department is no exception.

The league-champion Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks both have netminders eligible for the Rookie-of-the-Year Award, although the pair have seen limited NHL action prior to this year.

A leading candidate for newcomer - of - the - year is little Roger Crozier of the Red Wings.

Crozier, who appeared in 15 contests for the Wings prior to this season, found himself battling right down to the final game before losing the Vezina Trophy race by a one-goal margin to veteran Terry Sawchuk of Toronto Maple Leafs.

REPLACED SAWCHUK

Ironically, it was Crozier who replaced Sawchuk as Wings' regular netminder when Detroit did not protect the wily veteran in the draft last June.

Crozier had appeared in 1 2-3 periods of playoff hockey before this season, allowing five goals.

In regular season play this year, the Bracebridge, Ont., native allowed 171 goals in 69½ games for a 2.46 average. He also recorded six shutouts.

Crozier reached his 23rd birthday on March 16, 1965.

At the other end of the rink, awaiting the call from coach Billy Reay—is Denis DeJordy.

The 26-year-old DeJordy, a native of St. Hyacinthe, Que., broke into pro hockey with Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League in the 1957-58 season.

Prior to this season he appeared in 10 1-3 NHL games and in one-third period of playoff competition.

DeJordy stopped commuting between Chicago and Buffalo this season when the clubs started carrying two netminders. He appeared in 29 1-3 games during regular play and allowed 76 goals.

SHARE NEW LOOK

For rinkside spectators and TV viewers the defence alignments of Montreal Canadiens, Red Wings and Black Hawks all share a new look.

Canadiens came up with a steady performer in the tall form of Ted Harris.

The 28-year-old Harris appeared in four NHL contests prior to this season but was not included in Canadiens playoff squad last year.

This year Harris contributed one goal and 14 assists in 68 games for the Habs and earned himself a regular blueline spot. So far in five playoff games the Winnipeg-born defenceman has one assist but has picked up only nine minutes in penalties, despite his undertaking the role of policeman at the Canadiens' blueline.

The Hawks came up with a good defensive pair in Matt Ravlich and Doug Jarrett. Ravlich had been a member of the Boston organization, appearing in two games for the Bruins during the 1962-63 season in which he notched his first NHL marker.

BEWILDER BUFFS

Hockey buffs are still bewildered by the fact the Boston club left Ravlich unprotected in the NHL draft, where he was promptly picked up by the Hawks.

The ex-Bruin scored three goals and 16 assists this season and so far has appeared in five playoff games and contributed one assist.

Jarrett, who along with Hawk forwards Dennis Hull and Fred Stanfield joined the big team direct from the junior St. Catharines Black Hawks, scored two goals and added 15 assists in 46 games this year. He has not figured in playoff scoring.

The Wings have Gary Bergman on the blueline. He played 58 games for Detroit this year, counting four goals and seven assists. He has only one assist in three playoff games to date but has been hampered by injuries in the post-season activities.

Dennis Hull, younger brother of Bobby, and Fred Stanfield round out the Hawks' new faces for the '65 playoffs so far. Hull produced 10 goals and four assists in 55 regular season games but has not figured in playoff scoring.

Stanfield managed 17 points in 58 games and has accounted for one goal in playoff games to date.

MAKE PLAYOFF DEBUT

Canadiens have Yvan Cournoyer in the forward brigade, while Leafs' Ron Ellis and Peter Stemkowski made their playoff debut. All three are up from junior ranks this year.

Ellis had the best year of the three as he notched 23 goals and 16 assists in 62 games, while team-mate Stemkowski had five goals and 15 assists in 52 games. Cournoyer netted seven goals and picked up 10 assists in 55 regular-season contests.

In the playoff scramble, Ellis has accounted for two goals in five games, Cournoyer has a goal and an assist and Stemkowski has two assists in the same number of games.

Tom Woodcock Wins Pigeon Racing Titles

Tom Woodcock, of Belleville, a regular winner in Quinte Racing Pigeon Club events, is proudly displaying a couple of Canadian championship trophies for his 1964 efforts.

The Canadian Racing Pigeon Union, at its semi-annual meeting in Guelph recently, presented Woodcock with the Ontario North Course Award and the "A" Loft Dominion Award.

The twin victories for Woodcock and his flying team marked the first CRPU awards to come to Belleville since the organization began in the early 1920's.

"I sure was surprised and thrilled," said the proud owner and racer.

The "A" Loft Award is a Canada-wide competition and Woodcock's loft won top honors by compiling a total of 1,351 points, topping the second place loft, from the Maritimes, by a healthy margin. The runner-up had 1,197 points.

"Star player", more or less in the winning loft was "Cb-61-3634." That is the pigeon's band number and—he was the winner of the Ontario North Course Award, with 286½ points. A Scarborough pigeon was second with 267½ points.

Woodcock began his pigeon racing hobby back in 1957.

"Then in 1958, I got two pair of stock birds from the top loft available, the Garden State Loft of Patterson, N.J., and I have had fine success since then," Woodcock said.

He pointed out that all his present loft members are descendents of these birds, stressing the importance of good breeding.

'Finleys Follies' Feature Mule, Pheasants

Twins Nip Yankees In Comedy Of Errors

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

At least Charlie Finley advertised his circus, New York Yankees and Minnesota Twins kept theirs a secret until just before game time.

A multitude of errors and wild pitches followed a flood-forced helicopter ride in Minnesota's 11-inning 5-4 opening game victory over the Yankees Monday.

Finley's Follies, flavoring Detroit Tigers' 6-2 triumph over Kansas City Athletics at night, included Cha. les O.'s trot around the bases on Charlie O., plus a menagerie of pigeons, pheasants and a chick.

In the other other American League game, Boston Red Sox whipped Washington Senators 7-2 in the presidential opener. Rain washed out Cleveland Indians at Los Angeles while Chicago White Sox and Baltimore Orioles were idle.

The highlight of the circus preceding the Kansas City game started when Charlie O., the mule, plodded into the spotlight.

Finley, the Athletics' uninhibited owner, climbed aboard a load of the base paths. As they reached second base and home plate, Charlie Sr. waved his white cowboy hat to the assembled audience.

When the Charlies O.s ended their turn, Miss U.S.A. took over in the centre ring. Shapely Bobbi Johnson threw out the first ball, then tripped but girl for the first two innings.

The game finally started but wasn't more than a half-inning old when plate umpire Bill McKinley stepped on a button which raises the automatic ball dispenser behind home plate. Out flew four pigeons and two pheasants.

Several innings later, in the seventh and eighth to be exact, two - run homers by Jerry Lumpe and rookie John Sullivan flew out of the park, and Charlie O.'s debut was a fallure.

The Twins - Yankees game was only slightly less comical. When both teams returned, Minnesota officials decided today's game would be postponed because of travel difficulties resulting from flood conditions.

Those conditions forced the shifting of four Twins, including starting pitcher Jim Kaat, from the suburb of Burnsville, where they live, to the park. A helicopter picked them up in a school yard and dropped them in a parking lot.

Both teams might have been better off if the flood had inundated Metropolitan Stadium. The Yankees made five errors and the Twins committed three while New York pitchers contributed three wild pitches.

The most dramatic miscues came in the ninth and 11th innings. With two out in the Yankee ninth and the Twins leading 4-3, rookie third baseman Cesar Tovar dropped Joe Pepitone's easy pop up, and pinch runner Arturo Lopez raced home from second with the tying run.

Tovar and Lopez exchanged places in the Twins' 11th. Lopez also a rookie, opened the inning by dropping Bob Allison's fly ball for a three-base error. Two intentional walks and two outs later, Tavor rapped a single to centre for the game-winning run.

Boston smashed six homers against the Senators, Lennis Green leading the attack with two. Tony Conigliaro, Felix Mantilla and Lee Thomas each contributed one while Don Lock and Ken McMullen connected for the Senators.

TO HOLD MEETING

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)—The annual convention of the Federation of Ontario Naturalists will be held here April 23-24, Fred Bodsworth of Toronto has been nominated as Ontario president, officials said.

The Trots

TORONTO (CP) — Twelve Steps, half of a two-horse sale for $1,200 two years ago, won the second race of her career at Greenwood Raceway Monday night.

The four - year - old pacer, driven by Harold Varcoe of Ancaster, Ont., returned $15, $6.60 and $4.80.

Second was Hillcrest Saint and Johnny Ringo finished third.

The other half of the Twelve Steps deal, a trotter called Bishop Song, was a late scratch from the featured sixth race.

Officials found just before post time that Bishop Song did not meet qualifications for the mile trot, won by Tapdean.

Tapdean, driven by Bev Kingston, paid $3.80, $3.10 and $2.10 in the four-horse race. Johnston was second and Penny Coelen was third.

Drysdale Homers, Beats Mets

Bucs' Veale Three-Hits Giants, Fans 10

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

It was opening day but Pittsburgh's Bob Veale, Milwaukee's Tony Cloninger and Casey Stengel's New York Mets were in mid-season form.

Veale, the Pirate left hander who led baseball's major leagues with 250 strikeouts last season, fanned 10 and fired a nifty three-hitter, blanking San Francisco Giants and Juan Marichal 1-0 in 10 innings. Cloninger permitted just two hits as the Braves beat Cincinnati Reds 4-2.

And Stengel's Mets are in their accustomed spot at the bottom of the standings after a four-hit, 6-1 defeat by Don Drysdale of Los Angeles Dodgers, who poked a two-run homer for good measure.

In other National League openers, the world champion St. Louis Cardinals battled 11 innings and had to settle for a 10-10 tie with Chicago Cubs in a game called because of darkness and Philadelphia and Houston played the first regular season game inside the Houston Astrodome with Chris Short forming a four-hitter and the Phillies blanking the Astros 2-0.

Veale escaped two early jams before settling down to his duel with Marichal, broken up by Bob Bailey's leadoff homer in the 10th. It was only the fifth Pirate hit.

TORRE, MATHEWS HOMER

Cloninger allowed a leadoff single to Cincinnati's Pete Rose and a sixth inning homer to Deron Johnson but that was all. The Braves, meanwhile, bopped on Jim O'Toole with Joe Torre and Ed Mathews socking back-to-back homers in the sixth to key the attack. Torre also homered in the eighth.

The Mets were two runs behind before they came to bat against Drysdale. Drysdale hit a two-run homer in the fourth and Willie Davis poked a bases empty single among his three hits. It was the 16th time Drysdale had beaten the Mets in their four years in the league and the fourth straight opening day loss for New York.

The Cardinals jumped on Larry Jackson for five runs in the first inning but World Series hero Bob Gibson faltered and Ernie Banks eventually tied it with a long home run off Barney Schultz in the ninth.

Both teams scored in the 11th. St. Louis on three singles and Chicago on a single, a passed ball and Santo's double, before the umpires called it. The game must be replayed later in the season.

Short struck out 11 Astros in baseball's first indoor game. Richie Allen, last year's Rookie of the Year, produced both Philadelphia runs with a third inning home run.

The Tracks

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP)—Three young Ontario jockeys won their first races at Fort Erie Monday and racing officials described the event as unusual.

Officials were unable to recall another occasion when three apprentice jockeys rode to victory on the same card.

Mike Ferro, 21, of Niagara Falls set the pace when he rode King Legend to a three-quarter length victory over John's Whirl in the third race.

Two races later, 17-year-old Brian Werry of Ridgway won a four-length victory with Fayette Queen.

And Rupert Parker of Sudbury rode House Boy to the post four lengths ahead of Menelaus in the eighth race.

Fayette Queen paid $8.10 and combined with Nothing Sacred for a $77.20 mutuella. The daily-double of Bon Coeur, winner of the first race, and Cluny Miss in the second, paid $227.90.

Electronovision Process Used To Make Harlow Film

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Harlow No. 1—or is it No. 2?—has been shooting on the sound stages. If you were quick about dropping in, you could see a new kind of show business.

Maybe it's not so new, after all. This is the electronovision version, and it seems to be a combination of live television, theatre in the round and the roller derby.

Electronovision uses four or more cameras simultaneously, their input being cut by the director as the scene progresses, the same as a television director selects his angles on the spot.

"We'll shoot Harlow in six days and at the end we'll have a completely edited movie," said an electronovision aide.

What's more, they expect to book the film into 600 western theatres May 17, a month ahead of the Joseph E. Levine Harlow, play it for two weeks and switch to 700 theatres in the East.

The filming is being done at Desilu Studios.

STORMS IN

TV veteran Alex Segal was directing a scene in which Harlow (Carol Lynley) storms into the office of Paul Bern (Hurd Hatfield) and meets her future hero (Efrem Zimbalist Jr.). The latter is one of the few figures to bear a fictitious name; his obvious prototype, William Powell, is alive.

After a few rehearsals, Segal disappeared from the scene and began shooting on the sound stages. If you were quick about dropping in, you could see a new kind of show business.

"Welcome to the nut house," said Miss Lynley between one of the shootings. "It's no use to see someone from the 'outside'."

Miss Lynley looked older than her usual screen self in a Harlow-platinum wig and a whitish makeup which made her stare whenever she passed a mirror.

"I'm not trying to impersonate Harlow," she declared, "just give an impression."

Had she ever heard of Harlow before the recent revival?

SHE'S ONLY 23

"Not until I got the script," she replied. "I'm only 23. And I am one of the few (actresses) who can say that and mean it."

In a dressing room offstage I found Ginger Rogers, who is playing Harlow's Mama Jean and enjoying it. I suspected she was probably the only one connected with either Harlow who knew her.

"I certainly am," she said firmly. "Sure I knew Jean—and liked her. I met her through Bill the other time we were making Star of Midnight together. I used to go up to his house for Mass and Jean would be there. She adored him, needed his stability. And her gaiety brightened his life."

AT THE PARK — Terror Flight — David Niven and Les Massari pause in flight during scene from American International's high adventure war thriller "Conquered City," now at the Park Theatre today and Wednesday. On the same program "Panic Button", starring Jayne Mansfield, Michael Connors and Maurice Chevalier. Complete shows at 7.00 and 8.45 p.m.

Canada Would Consider

May Move Winter Games

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP)—Avery Brundage, American president of the International Olympic Committee, hinted Monday that a continued French refusal to guarantee visas for East German athletes may force the IOC to take the 1968 Winter Olympic Games away from the French town of Grenoble.

Brundage told a press conference the IOC's position firmly remains that "no city will be awarded an Olympic event where all the athletes recognized by the IOC are not able to participate."

He said the final decision will be up to the Olympic assembly in Madrid next October.

Gen. Jose Clark Flores of Mexico presented the Mexican organizing committee's preliminary report on preparations for the 1968 Olympic Games to the executive board of the International Olympic Committee.

He told reporters the report was warmly received and that Brundage "expressed his full confidence to me that the Olympic Games in Mexico City will be a success."

CALGARY (CP)—The Olympic '72 Committee would give serious study to any request that it hold the 1968 Winter Olympic Games in the Banff-Lake Louise area, committee president Ed Davis said Monday.

Mr. Davis was commenting on a report that the International Olympic Committee might be forced to take the 1968 winger Games from Grenoble, France, because of French government refusal to guarantee visas to East German athletes. A final decision is expected in October.

"If the committee were asked, it would certainly give the matter serious study," Mr. Davis said.

"However, I think the visa situation will be settled before the Games are revoked from the present site. I am merely a case of NATO policy and I suggest that France will come up with a solution."

Touché

or how to practice wine-upmanship

You probably have friends who talk learnedly of wines and vintages. Many people like that, don't taste wine, they read it. If they don't read the word "imported" on a label they turn up their noses.

Next time your friends are over serve any one of these wines with the label hidden. Imported? Certainly? When you get the approving smack of the lips, tell them it was "imported" from Niagara Falls. Touché.

President Champagne—Canada's price champagne. For any dinner, all gala occasions, especially weddings and anniversaries.

Cream Sherry—A favourite of sherry connoisseurs. An appetizer wine of outstanding merit.

President Sauterne—A light white wine for the table. With fish, fowl, white meats, salads.

President Sherry—Ideal before dinner; with hors d'ouevres, soup course.

President Extra Dry—A dry delicate wine that inspires conversations from all who try it. With fish, white meat, salads.

PLEASANT GIFT IDEA!

What could be more delightful, more acceptable than two or three of these famous wines, or a complete President Wine Cellar?

Show Focused on Places Dear to Roosevelt's Heart

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Normal television procedure on the 20th anniversary of the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt called for a resume of the high moments in the active career of the 32nd president.

CBS Monday night in FDR Remembered largely ignored them and focused on two places the man loved: The Roosevelt family home in Hyde Park "in his beloved Hudson River Valley," and Warm Springs, Ga., which he first visited to regain his strength after his crippling attack of polio and returned again and again.

His son, Franklin Jr., remissced about his father as he sat in the book-lined living room of the old Hyde Park mansion. An old friend, Mrs. Mabel Irwin, told emotionally of the president's last days at the Georgia spa.

It was a warm and interesting memoir of an interesting man, and infinitely more suitable and considered than a full-scale biographical treatment.

The current TV season was notable for the eminence of two well-known writers into the television field—Garson Kanin and Jerome Weldman. They got out almost as fast as they got in, for their shows — CBS' Mr. Broadway and The Reporter—were dropped early in the year. Next season the big writing name will be the late William Faulkner, author of a novel, The Long Hot Summer, basis for a 1958 movie. A new ABC series will be based on the movie.

Studios are fond of remodeling their old movies into new TV series. They already own the rights to the property so clearance problems are avoided. Thus we have had such adaptations as Dr. Kildare and Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea—and in that one, they were able to use many of the motive's old special effects, thereby saving an enormous amount of money.

Recommended tonight:

Telephone Hour, NBC, 10-11 EST—with Olivia de Haviland as hostess and tenor Richard Tucker and dancer Edward Villella among the soloists.

A spokesman for the commission told a reporter later that it was doing that. Consultation co-chairmen Davidson Dunton and Andre Laurendeau were expected to begin the issue shortly with their officials.

The spokesman said $3 to $5 MPs in all parties have agreed so far to two-hour in-depth interviews by a dozen commissioners from the commission. Very few had refused. The original plan was to interview 400 users later.

Purpose of the research project was to delineate the different attitudes of French- and English-speaking MPs and senators towards their functions in Parliament and their relations with their colleagues, the press, parties and party caucus groups.

The questionnaire included many objectives about the workings of the secret caucus meetings, language usage in Ottawa and the organization of election campaigns.

New Stamp To Be Issued On April 28

OTTAWA (CP) — Five-cent postage stamps bearing the floral emblems and armorial bearings of Manitoba and British Columbia will be issued April 28, the post office announced Monday.

They are the latest in a series of stamps honoring Canada's 1967 centennial and are being issued in the order in which the provinces entered Confederation: Stamps honoring Prince Edward Island, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Yukon and Northwest Territories will be issued later in the year. One for Newfoundland will be issued in 1968.

The Manitoba stamp bears the prairie crocus, chosen in 1924 as the province's official flower.

The dogwood, chosen British Columbia's official flower in 1956, is one the second stamp.

New Teletype Network for Police Readied

TORONTO (CP)—A province-wide police communications network to help police track criminals is undergoing tests in preparation for opening May 5.

The teletype network will link more than 120 municipal police departments and provincial police detachments in Ontario.

Fifty-five OPP detachments and every community with more than 10,000 population will be linked. Information will be passed on to smaller centres by radio and telephone.

Municipal police forces will pay the $44,000 annual leasing fee and the provincial government will bear the remainder of the $180,000 cost for installing the lines.

A ceremony officially opening the network will be held next week and will be attended by Premier Robarts, Attorney-General Arthur Wishart and senior OPP officers.

The tap-proof system can also be linked to the RCMP network, police in Quebec, New York and Michigan, and federal headquarters in Europe.

Some Questions Are Considered Inappropriate

By RONALD LEBEL
OTTAWA (CP)—Memo to the Royal Commission on bilingualism and biculturalism:

Prime Minister Pearson considers some questions in your survey of MPs "irrelevant and highly inappropriate" and would not answer them himself.

This was the gist of a statement Mr. Pearson made in the Commons Monday in reply to complaints last week by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and other Conservatives that the royal commission was "snooping" in party politics.

The prime minister said he agrees with the commission's aim of seeking "all relevant information on the bilingual and bicultural aspects of the work of our institutions, including parliament," but he didn't approve of the questionnaire in its present form.

"If I were asked to answer it in its present form I would not, as I consider many of the questions irrelevant and some highly inappropriate."

Mr. Pearson said he did not want to tell any inquiry what to do or interfere improperly, once the terms of reference were set.

"If I would think," he added "that after reviewing what was said this morning in the House of Commons, the royal commission might wish to have another look at this questionnaire."

A spokesman for the commission told a reporter later that it was doing that. Consultation co-chairmen Davidson Dunton and Andre Laurendeau were expected to begin the issue shortly with their officials.

The spokesman said $3 to $5 MPs in all parties have agreed so far to two-hour in-depth interviews by a dozen commissioners from the commission. Very few had refused. The original plan was to interview 400 users later.

Purpose of the research project was to delineate the different attitudes of French- and English-speaking MPs and senators towards their functions in Parliament and their relations with their colleagues, the press, parties and party caucus groups.

Colonel Had to Defend His Rescue Decisions

By WALTER HAYES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former frustration, nothing tops the Grandue avalanche for Lt.-Col. W. H. V. Matthews, chief of staff of the British Columbia area headquarters.

Col. Matthews, a jovial man with an almost perpetual smile, won the Military Cross for gallantry in North Africa and a bar to the cross during the Normandy invasion.

He commanded the 2nd Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles, in Korea.

And a year ago, he co-ordinated the clean - up at Port Alberni, B.C., after a tidal wave —aftermath of the devastating Good Friday earthquake in Alaska.

On Feb. 16 a giant avalanche roared down Leduc Glacier, about 350 miles northwest, of here, wiping out the Grandue Mining Company camp and killing 26 men.

Col. Matthews was one of the first into action after news of the disaster reached the outside world.

During the week that followed until the last of the rescuers was removed from the mine site because of further avalanche danger, the 50-year-old colonel was subjected to one frustration after another.

BUCKED SNOW, FOG

Helicopters were the only means of reaching the isolated camp during the first few days after the avalanche. But snow and fog, constant winter companions of pilots in British Columbia's mountainous north country, grounded helicopters for the first 36 hours and made their flights irregular after that.

Radio transmitters, the only form of communication, were subject to frequent interference and prolonged blackouts. Even radio-telephone contact between Prince Rupert and Stewart, 30 miles south of the mine site, was impossible at night.

Col. Matthews said he had authority to call in whatever help he felt necessary, but at all times he was responsible to Attorney-General Robert Bonner.

When the colonel did obtain his authority to act, less than two hours after the disaster became known, his forces began to move according to a plan set up years before.

The last time it was used was when Col. Matthews headed the clean-up at Port Alberni after the 1964 tidal wave.

The colonel arrived in Prince Rupert the afternoon of the disaster and set up a co-ordinating centre in the airport lounge. That night a group of 60 army engineers arrived by plane from Chilliwack, B.C., along with a volunteer mountain rescue group from Vancouver.

Before daylight on Feb. 19 the entire rescue group — army, mounted rescuers, medical teams, Col. Matthews, and also reporters and photographers boarded the Alaska state ferry Taku at Prince Rupert for a voyage that was later to be termed the biggest blunder of the whole operation.

Col. Matthews had intended the ferry to go to the mouth of the Chickamin River, 120 miles to the north. Instead, it went 110 miles north to Stewart at the end of the 90-mile-long Portland Canal, back down to the mouth of the canal, 50 miles northwest to the mouth of the Behm Canal—which leads to the Chickamin River, then 30 miles northwest to Ketchikan, Alaska.

In the end the ferry had travelled almost 300 miles and its only accomplishment was to pick up seven survivors who arrived in Stewart by mistake. The helicopter taking them from the mine site had been scheduled to go to the Chickamin River.

And because of poor radio communications, Col. Matthews was out of touch of his Prince Rupert headquarters for most of the trip.

Compounding these problems was almost constant criticism of the colonel's actions.

The public, press, other rescue officials and even his own men wanted to know why the colonel didn't wrest control of the rescue operation from the Grandue officials at the mine.

They questioned his decision to reroute the ferry to Stewart from its original destination, the Chickamin River, which became of its more favorable weather was a preferred spot for reaching the mine site by helicopter.

And they wanted to know why two-thirds of the Canadian army group was sitting idle at Stewart while the remainder was digging at the mine site, 30 miles to the north.

In an interview on his return to Vancouver, Col. Matthews defended his decisions.

The colonel said his job was not to take over the rescue operation from the company but to co-ordinate the work of outside rescue groups—the RCAF, RCMP, army, mountain rescuers and medical teams.

He said he decided to reroute the ferry to Stewart after he learned that the Alaska civil defence had set up operations at Chickamin and was adequately equipped to handle injured and survivors.

At Stewart, the Taku deposited the army and mountain rescuers and picked up the seven avalanche survivors.

Col. Matthews then ordered it to head for Chickamin after he was informed that the Alaska civil defence was unable to cope with the flow of survivors there.

He said a two - hour radio blackout followed after the Taku left Stewart and it was not until the ferry reached the turnoff to Chickamin that he learned the Alaska civil defence had been able to get the survivors to Ketchikan, Alaska, after all. The ferry then was ordered back to Ketchikan, its home base.

He said most of his army group stayed in Stewart because of the avalanche danger at the mine.

"The fewer men we had in there working, the fewer we would have to get out in the event of another avalanche."

UNSUCCESSFUL VOYAGE — The voyage of the Alaska state ferry Taku has been termed the biggest blunder of the rescue operation following the Granduo, B.C., slide in February. Leaving Prince Rupert with a rescue group on board it planned to go to the mouth of the Chickamin River but instead went up and down the Portland Canal, then to the mouth of the Beham Canal and finally to Ketchikan. Its only accomplishment in 300 miles was to pick up seven survivors who arrived in Stewart by mistake. (CP Photo)

Engine Wear Depends on Driving Care

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

When you see an ancient model bumming along the road at a brisk speed, you can bet the owner(s) helped to keep it in good shape with intelligent driving care, as well as faithful rules which apply to driving practices are quite basic — yet, they're often violated. In many cases, it's because their harmful effects are not fully realized.

The driver who continually races a cold engine to hasten warm-up wears many miles off vital parts. The correct procedure for quick, safe warm-up is to idle the engine for about a minute or so after starting so that lubricating oil begins to flow properly around all parts. Then, get under way at a moderate, steady speed. Lengthy idling is harmful, too. Unfortunately, however, frequent heavy traffic problems make it difficult to avoid this practice entirely. But surely is there an excuse to zoom away from a standstill. This racetrack starting is responsible for much scaling and scoring of engine metals and very effective if you're intent on running your car into the ground in a short time.

From M.G.:—"Our '39 compact is beginning to ride very hard and bouncy, even on smooth roads. Would this be due to shocks or springs . . . or both?"

The same question came up only recently. Shocks are more likely — but it could also be overinflated tires.

S. N. writes: "After less than 1,000 miles, my spark plugs are always heavily coated with carbon. One garageman said it could be due to worn rings . . . even though the car is a '64 with only 8700 miles registered." I wouldn't suspect rings, immediately. A much-too-rich fuel mixture is a common fault in such cases.

R. Y. asks: "Our car is hard to start, idles badly and misses when first accelerated or climbing a long hill. Occasionally, it will also miss at high speeds on a level road. Over the past few months, new plugs, points and condenser were tried. In addition, the battery, cables, carburetor, and fuel pump were all checked out. What's left?"

A weak or failing ignition coil can act up under certain conditions and cause these troubles.

From N. M.: "I have a new '65 which seems to chatter when the automatic transmission is in drive. The dealer says he will check this out and correct it when I bring it in next week. What would you say is causion?"

Probably incorrect transmission band adjustments.

Many Duties Often Hamper Ministers

The minister's most formidable task today is to make the scriptures meaningful to men and women. But, according to a special national report on Protestant clergymen in the current Saturday Evening Post, the minister is sidetracked by a multitude of other duties which he is expected to perform.

Ministers have discovered that the roles they enjoy most —those of preacher, pastor and priest—are the ones to which they are able to devote the least amount of time. Instead, they must be fund-raisers, administrators, luncheon speakers and many other things to their congregations.

Post Editor-at-Large Harold Martin reports that the parish minister is assailed by fear that he cannot effectively cope with the human problems he encounters. Also, that the average preacher feels lonely and needs to be included in human society and accepted as simply a person.

The 10-page illustrated Post article observes that the Protestant minister is more than a welfare worker, administrator and money-raiser — he is first of all a man of God.

Languishes Elsewhere

Coal Still Flourishing Industry In Ukraine

By JOHN BEST

DONETSK, Ukraine (CP)—Russia's Donbass industrial region remains buoyantly alive, even though its lifeblood is coal.

As an energy source, coal has been displaced by other fuels such as oil and natural gas in many parts of Western Europe and North America.

In this area of the eastern Ukraine men still put their faith in coal and the Donbass continues to flourish.

"But the Donbass is valuable . . ."

This was how a Soviet economist tried to explain to a Western reporter why the region still enjoys an economic boom.

"In the coming five years," says Anatoly Zaharov, deputy chairman of the Donetsk regional economic council, "we will open more and more new pits."

Oil and natural gas are plentiful in Russia. They are available in the Ukraine and in the northern Caucasus, not far from here.

Yet they are not brought into the Donbass, even though it is recognized that for many industrial purposes, they are cheaper than coal.

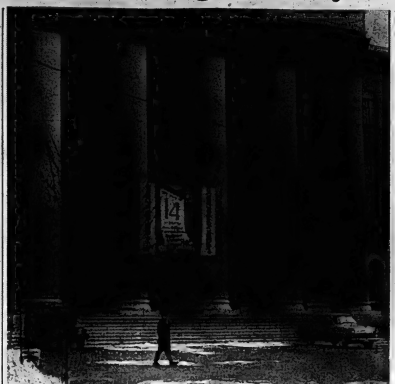
By contrast, natural gas is being piped 1,500 miles into the more easterly Urals industrial region from Bukhara in Soviet Central Asia.

PLAYS IMPORTANT ROLE

Evidently Soviet state planners believe that the Donbass is important enough in the overall scheme of things to be kept going on its own resources.

Principal outlet for Donbass coal is heavy industry, which uses vast quantities of coke produced from coal.

Most of the region's power also comes from coal. Eight of its 10 electrical distribution plants in Donetsk and vicinity rely on power generated by coal. The other two distribute hydroelectric power from outside the Donbass.



Coal is still used widely to heat homes. The region has both hard and soft coal, as well as in-between types.

Strenuous efforts are being made to mechanize the industry, reminiscent of similar campaigns undertaken in North America a decade or so ago.

Suren Aroutunian, a leading designer of automated mining equipment, predicted to visiting correspondents that in five to eight years operations will be completely automatic.

TEST NEW MACHINE

He pointed to the draft of an invention dubbed "Kompex KDA," which is designed to mine coal from the surface, using hydraulic lifts to bring it up after it has been cut by automatic cutters.

AUTOMATED MINES — Russian officials predict that within eight years coal mining in the Donbass area of the Ukraine will be completely automatic. This building in Donetsk is the research centre for the industry. Officials claim production has increased significantly in recent years through automation. (CP Photo)

Aroutunian said the machine will mine 1,500 to 2,000 tons of coal in one shift. He said an experimental model is at work in a mine in Gorlov, not far from Donetsk. But when correspondents asked to see the mine, they were put off with the explanation that it's impossible to walk around in it.

It is evident that automation is having an effect. For instance Igor Abbakumov mine, in the northeast end of this metropolis, produced 4,386 tons a day last year with a staff of 3,845. Five years earlier it produced less coal—2,212 tons a day—with a larger staff, 4,256.

Extraordinary incentives are offered to the men who go down into the mine, which is nearly a mile deep. These include high wages of up to 360 rubles a month, or $288 by the official Soviet exchange rate; a 36-hour work week; 30 days' annual vacation, and free coal for heating miners' homes.

JOB IS RISKY

Part of this is danger money. Dust and gas pose an ever-present danger of explosion in Donbass collieries. The faces of miners working in Shaft No. 9 of Igor Abbakumov mine, recently visited by correspondents, betray the chronic anxiety of men constantly exposed to mortal peril.

Officials say the mine in fact has never had an explosion in its 21 years of operation. A staff of 376 is employed in manning an elaborate system of safety equipment, they said.

It's difficult to obtain information on explosions in the Donbass. However, one official admitted there was an explosion five years ago in one colliery and nine miners were killed.

Of the total mine staff at Igor Abbakumov, 386 or a little less than one-quarter actually dig coal. Another 450 are engaged in preparatory work in the steeply sloping coal seams.

CUT MECHANICALLY

Shaft No. 9 is partially automated. It has an automatic miner that cuts coal and dumps it onto a conveyor for removal to the surface. However, much human labor still is required, especially in shovelling off heaps of slag and other waste material.

The work is done under low ceilings that make it impossible for a man to stand upright.

"The main problem is further mechanization . . . so as to make the work easier," says Vasily Voronin, director of the mine.

The work pace is set by "brigades" of high-production workers. Names and pictures of leading miners are prominently displayed on charts and billboards at the mine entrance, where officials joyfully recount their production exploits to visitors.

The Stalinist-era Stakhanovite approach to labor productivity, based on high-pressured emulation, is still much alive in the Soviet mining industry.

Hanoi Demands Unified Nation As Peace Price

Want 1954 Prohibition Against Aid Observed

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — The diplomatic side of the Vietnamese war is beginning to look like a ping-pong game.

President Johnson bats one to the North Vietnamese Communists; they bat it back.

Last week, to try to get peace talks started, he said they could begin without any strings attached.

But the North Vietnamese said what he proposed was all tied in strings. Now they have laid down a peace program with strings of their own.

For two months after Johnson ordered North Viet Nam bombed, to stop the guerrilla attacks on South Viet Nam, his administration took this position:

"The key to the situation remains the cessation of infiltration from North Viet Nam and the clear indication by the Hanoi government that it is prepared to cease aggression against its neighbor."

DRAWS CRITICISM

This policy, and the continued bombing, got Johnson criticism at home and abroad.

So he put pressure on him to shift tactics a bit.

And when 17 neutral nations said the peace talks, if held, should have no preliminary conditions attached, the pressure on Johnson was intensified.

The president in his speech April 7 said he would be willing to have "unconditional discussions" with the North Vietnamese about settling the war.

But he said the United States would settle only for an arrangement that will secure the independence of South Viet Nam.

SETS CONDITION

And he said withdrawal of U.S. forces depended on working out such an arrangement.

His assistants said that while the U.S. was willing to talk with North Viet Nam or China about peace it would not talk about it with the Viet Cong guerrillas fighting in South Viet Nam because they are only the agents of North Viet Nam.

Then Tuesday Premier Pham Van Dong of North Viet Nam laid down a four-point peace program that was a blast at Communist conditions for peace.

The four Hanoi proposals, as reported by Hsinhua, the Chinese Communist press agency, are:

1. Recognition of the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Viet Nam, a complete United States military withdrawal from South Viet Nam and cessation of attacks on North Viet Nam.

OPPOSE ALLIANCE

2. Peaceful reunification of Viet Nam during its temporary division into two zones on condition of non-alignment by both sides of the military provisions of the 1954 Geneva agreement on Indochina forbidding military alliances and the presence of foreign troops.

3. A settling of South Viet Nam's internal affairs by the South Vietnamese themselves "in accordance with the program" of the National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong, "without any foreign interference."

4. The peaceful reunification of Viet Nam by the two zones without any foreign interference."

To Stand Trial For Forgery

VANCOUVER (CP)—Al Williamson, Vancouver public relations counsel charged with forging the name of Premier W. A. C. Bennett to a letter, was committed Tuesday to stand trial in Supreme Court.

CUTTING THE CAKE — Laura Weller the 105-year-old resident of Carrying Place (wife of the late James Weller) shared her birthday cake with the people who dropped around to offer their best wishes today. Still following a daily routine she reads a lot and listens to radio newscasts to keep up with the times.

Mrs. Laura Weller, Carrying Place, Receives Friends on 105th Birthday

TRENTON — The grand old lady of Carrying Place is 105 years old today.

Mrs. Laura Weller arose early as usual and dressed herself to receive relatives and friends who will be visiting throughout the day to extend their annual best wishes for a continued long life.

Active and keen of mind Mrs. Weller will read each telegram, letter and card as they arrive from interested senders. And she will find time during her stint as gracious hostess to open gift packages and comment on their contents. Dr. J. W. Farley of Trenton, her family doctor, paid a personal call to wish her a happy birthday.

Mrs. Weller's extended life span began at Mount Zion, near Stockdale, four years before Canada's confederation was formulated at the Quebec conference in 1864 and passed the same year by the British parliament.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Roberts, pioneers of the Quinte district. She was seven years old when the Fathers of Confederation signed the necessary documents to make the British North America Act effective July 1, 1867.

Having enjoyed a full life Mrs. Weller has been a witness to history during the reigns of six English Kings and Queens, Abraham Lincoln became the 16th president of the United States the year she was born.

Many years ago she adopted the habit of reading a variety of publications and listening to radio newscasts as a means of keeping up with the times.

She has been blessed with good health. However, recently, she sprained her wrist in a fall on the way to pick up a newspaper dropped at the backdoor by a carrier. The injury did not interrupt her daily routine and according to her doctor made a wonderful recovery without the assistance of sedatives and confinement to bed.

Jobless Cut 10,000 In March

OTTAWA (CP) — An above-average gain in jobs outpaced the gain in the labor force and reduced unemployment to 387,000 at mid-March, a drop of 10,000 in a month.

A joint report issued today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the labor department said the unemployment figure represented 5.6 per cent of the labor force compared to 5.8 per cent in February and 6.8 per cent in March of last year.

There were an estimated 6,521,000 persons at work, a jump of 61,000 jobs from February and 235,000 above the March, 1964, level. Most of this job increase was offset by a growth in the labor force of 51,000 in the month and 166,000 in the year-to-year comparison.

The job picture in brief, with estimates in thousands:

	Mar. Feb. Mar. 1965 1965 1964
Labor force	6,908 6,857 6,742
Employed	6,521 6,460 6,286
Unemployed	387 397 456

These DBS - labor estimates are based on a sample survey of 35,000 homes during the week ended March 20.

Most of the month-to-month rise in employment was in outdoors work, construction advancing "substantially." Farm employment rose by 25,000 but forestry work declined as usual with the approach of the spring breakup.

Told Windfall Would Rise, Mrs. J. Campbell Sold Short

TORONTO (CP) — A royal commission heard Tuesday how a "woman's intuition" played a part in Mrs. John Campbell's transactions in shares of Windfall Oils and Mines Limited last July and August.

Mrs. Campbell, wife of the former director of the Ontario Securities Commission, told the royal commission that she sold Windfall short the day after Windfall's president told her the shares could go to $5 and his wife told her they could go to $25.

To sell a stock short is to speculate that its price will go down. A short-seller borrows stock from his broker and sells it when the price is high, planning to buy it back and pay it back to the broker when the price is lower.

The royal commission under Mr. Justice Arthur Kelly of the

'They Thought I Had Bad Heart,' Woman, 80, Is Blown Into Lake

HILLSDALE, Mich. (AP)— "And they thought I had a bad heart," an 80 - year - old widow said today as she told how she was blown 700 feet into a lake by a tornado.

She survived by clinging to wreckage from her home.

Mrs. Hugh Norris, who lived alone, said she was sitting in her two-storey frame home at nearby Baw Beese Lake Sunday night when a storm struck.

"The house shook and made a lot of noise," she said. "The lights went out. So I went upstairs to my bedroom and found I couldn't open the door.

"I went back downstairs, lit two kerosene lanterns and started writing a letter. I just couldn't sit there and do nothing. Then the noise started again. The table began to tip; I fell down. I can't remember when I felt the water. It kept coming up until it reached my chin."

Realizing she was in the lake, Mrs. Norris managed to reach a large piece of floating debris which once had been part of her home. She began to call for help.

"I called and called. There was no answer. Then I heard voices calling."

The voices were those of neighbors Dr. D. D. Walker and Larry Raymond.

Dr. Walker said that when he managed to locate where the voice was coming from out of the night-shrouded lake he walked out into the water until it reached his neck. He found Mrs. Norris at this point and carried her back to shore.

He and Raymond took her to a nearby hospital where she was treated for cuts and bruises and released. She went to stay with relatives.

Only the foundation of Mrs. Norris' home remains. The Hillsdale County twister was one of several tornadoes which killed 45, injured an estimated 500 plus and did $20,000,000 damages in 10 Michigan counties.

Mississippi's Flood Crest Is Racing Downstream Threatening Many Towns

Floods Have Already Killed 11 And Caused $20 Million Damage

CHICAGO (AP) — The battered middle western United States, stricken Palm Sunday by the worst tornado-barrage in 40 years, today braces for fresh devastation from flooding.

The rain and ice-swollen Mississippi River, stirred to life by the spring thaw, raced downstream at record heights, endangering scores of communities.

The Red Cross estimated that 31,000 persons were affected by flooding in five states—Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, North Dakota and Illinois.

Hardest hit was Minnesota, where disaster workers and volunteers battled in around-the-clock vigils to extend dikes as the waters rose every hour.

In St. Paul, Minn., population 250,000, businesses were shut down, schools were closed and transportation was crippled.

CAUSE 11 DEATHS

Flooding was blamed for 11 deaths, more than $20,000,000 damage and the evacuation of thousands of families. The river, to crest at Hastings, Minn., late Thursday or Friday, was expected to eventually drive 22,000 St. Paul residents from their homes.

Despite plywood extensions, the muddy Mississippi River poured into St. Paul. Six feet of water covered runways at the downtown airport.

Nearly eight feet of water filled the basement of the city's railway station. The nearby Twilight yards were swamped under two feet of water and no rail traffic was moving.

South and west of the St. Paul area, similar struggles against the rising flood waters continued. At Mankato, which was mostly under water, the Red Cross set up 1,000 cots in a school gymnasium for the dike workers.

Criticism Rejected By Board

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — The royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism went out of its way Tuesday night to reject strong criticism from Prime Minister Pearson and Opposition MPs.

Commission co-chairmen André Laurendeau and Davidson Dunton issued a stiff press statement saying the inquiry will proceed with the opinion survey of MPs and will not change its controversial questionnaire.

The statement said, in effect, that Mr. Pearson misunderstood the purpose of the commission's survey of MPs.

Mr. Pearson later issued a statement of his own saying:

"The royal commission . . . like any royal commission, is the judge of its own procedures within its terms of reference. I have made known in the House of Commons, in reply to questions put to me, my own views on the issue."

CHARGES IMPERTINENCE

H. W. Herridge, New Democratic MP for Kootenay West, rose on a question of privilege in the Commons two hours after the commission's statement and accused the co-chairmen of "a peace of gross impertinence" toward the Prime Minister.

To the applause of members in all parties, he said the prime minister merely sought to protect the privileges of Parliament when he blasted in the House Monday that the commission would be well advised to drop some of its questions.

Mr. Pearson said Monday he personally considered some of the many questions he considered considered were "highly inappropriate."

The government did not intend to interfere with the commission, but he hoped the "B-B" commission would read the remarks of the prime minister and "have another look at this questionnaire."

Researchers for the royal commission began interviewing MPs about two months ago and the project remained secret until April 2, when Nicholas Mackenzie (PC—Vancouver Kingsway) and Stanley Korchinski (PC—Mackenzie) complained that the inquiry was being kept out of politics.

CALLS IT 'SNOOPING'

Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker joined the fray later, accusing the commission of "snooping" into party politics.

The commission co-chairmen met with their advisers and telephoned most of the eight other commissioners Monday afternoon and all day Tuesday. The statement was issued about two hours before the Commons adjourned for a 12-day Easter recess.

It said 67 MPs have submitted voluntarily to the in-depth interviews, some lasting more than two hours. Eight had refused to see the researchers.

"As long as a high response rate continues, the interviews will go on unchanged," the co-chairmen added.

"The commission has been charged with carrying out an inquiry, and that in fact is precisely what it is trying to do. SHOULDN'T BE BLOCKED

"Surely in all good sense it should not be hampered or blocked as it endeavors to fulfil the purpose for which it was established, nor be called on continually to justify the methods which after careful consideration it deems suitable.

"We believe this would be a dangerous precedent from

Legal Aid System Proposed

TORONTO (CP) — A new legal aid system was suggested to the Ontario legislature Tuesday that would be available to every Ontario resident in trouble with any court.

The attorney - general's joint committee on legal aid submitted a report recommending the system and suggesting it should be administered by the Law Society of Upper Canada.

The present system makes a person eligible for legal aid if his annual income is beneath a certain level — $2,200 for a single person, $2,300 for a married person with no children.

The proposed system would make legal aid available to anyone who wants it and who faces an indictable offence — requiring a jury trial. For lesser charges — which can be heard by a magistrate or judge without a jury — legal aid would be offered only to persons facing long jail terms or heavy fines.

RECEIVE 75 PER CENT

The joint committee of law society and government officials, with former deputy attorney - general William Common as chairman, recommended that legal aid lawyers receive 75 per cent of normal fees.

Applicants for legal aid would have to pay what portion they could afford of legal fees. But eligibility tests in criminal cases would wait until after the legal aid had been made available.

In civil cases, legal aid would cover division court, family court, administrative tribunals, bankruptcy, domestic proceedings and matrimonial cases.

In appeal cases, aid would include habeas corpus applications to quash convictions or decisions, habeas corpus and prohibition — all the way to the Supreme Court of Canada if necessary.

FULL BE BASIS

Attorney - General Arthur Wishart said the report tabled in the legislature will form the basis of government legislation but he did not say whether it will be introduced into the present session.

Law society members of the committee were Grant George Evans of Timmins, who was replaced by Ralph D. Steele of Chatham.

LBJ Flies To See Floods

ELKHART, Ind. (AP)—President Johnson flew today into the middle western area ravaged by tornadoes and floods, touching this federal aid is rebuilding will be emphasized in five and efficient.

FULL BE BASIS

Johnson also was to get an on - the - ground look at the damage in Minnesota and de-briefs left by tornadoes at Toledo, Ohio. He was making the aerial survey of havoc wrought by the spring storms in Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Labor May Seek Mandate To Curb Powers of Lords

LONDON (CP)—Moves to restrict the powers of the House of Lords could result from the defeat of a controversial government bill in the upper chamber Tuesday night.

Prime Minister Wilson had earlier told the House of Commons he would seek a mandate in the next election to curb the right of the Lords to delay legislation if he found their tactics seriously hampering the Labor government. The upper house is top heavy with Conservatives.

Ironically, the bill that raised the old constitutional issue—it has haunted Parliament from time to time for the last 100 years—has nothing to do with Labor's massive legislative program and little to do with party politics. It is primarily a conflict between the government and the judiciary.

The Lords voted 144 to 69 in favor of an amendment that wrecks a government measure to deny full compensation to the British Oil Company for the wartime destruction of its installations in Burma.

The oil company, which blew up the installations in 1942 to prevent them from falling into the hands of the advancing Japanese armies, is claiming £17,000,000 ($51,000,000) compensation and has already received £4,750,000.

The objection to the bill is that Burmah Oil's claim for full compensation has been upheld in the courts—the case went right to the House of Lords—and the government bill involves the debatable concept of retrospective legislation.

The government, which fathered the bill from the previous Conservative administration, argues that full compensation for Burmah Oil would open the flood gates for fresh claims for war compensation from dozens of other companies.

Homeowners Lodge Objection To Building Second Water Filtration Plant Near Old One

Although no construction is planned until at least 1967, West Dundas Street home owners have already lodged objection to the proposed building of a second water filtration plant on the bayshore in the Sidney Street area.

Homeowners are apparently skeptical of how a second filtration plant might affect their present view of the bay.

Two possible sites, one east of the present pumphouse, on city owned bay property, and the other immediately to the west on privately-owned land, are being considered by consulting engineers Gore and Storey. Either site would be suitable, according to engineers, but no decision has been made as to which is preferred.

WILL NOT EFFECT VIEW

Utilities Commission members feel, however, that the objection of Dundas Street homeowners is unfounded.

This was indicated Monday at council by Harry J. R. Ellis and also today by commission chairman Gerald B. Hyde.

The new filtration plant building will be shallow and should not materially effect homeowners' view of the bay," stated Mr. Hyde.

Mr. Hyde said that before any site decision is made a meeting will be called to explain commission construction program.

One thing certain is that the new filtration plant will eventually have to be built.

The present plant was built to provide the needs of a maximum of 35,000 people and the city's population is now around the 32,000 mark.

Cost of the new plant has been estimated at about $3-250,000.

CALL TENDERS

Tenders for the construction of the commission's new storage, garage, and maintenance depot at the corner of Sidney and College Streets, are expected to be called within the next month.

Mr. Hyde said approvals for the building had now all been received and architects Watson and Weigand were drawing detailed plans.

Construction of the new garage will mean the present commission vehicles - now garaged at five different locations – will be under one roof, and all facilities will be provided for eventual maintenance of meters and other equipment.

Building plans will also provide for future additions to accomodate commission office headquarters, which is scheduled to move from the present site to the downtown area.

Indian Radioactivity Expert Joins Research Staff Here

Dr. K. K. Nair, an internationally-recognized expert on the use of radioactivity for insect pest control, has accepted an appointment to the permanent staff of the Canada Department of Agriculture Research Institute at Belleville.

An Open Letter...

Good Friday is a day that is unique in the Christian calendar and its observance has always been traditional in this city. That the various churches of the community wish to preserve this tradition is evident from the scheduled religious services that will mark the day again this year

The Protestant and Roman Catholic clergy whose names appear on this letter are saddened however by the action of some who would commercialize this sacred occasion and call upon all people to discourage this trend by shopping on Thursday and worshipping on Friday.

Public Hearing on Request For Re-zoning of Area To Be Held on Thursday

Property owners in the vicinity of 260 Dundas St. East will get a chance Thursday night to publicly air their views on proposed zoning by-law changes in their area.

Belleville and Suburban Planning Board will hold a public hearing into Dr. H. and Dr. E. P. Williamson's request for re-zoning of their clinic site opposite the hospital from an "A" to a "B" residential district.

The meeting is called for 7:30 p.m., April 15, in the Council Chambers, City Hall.

Area affected by the Williamson's re-zoning application is a block extending 300 ft. along the north side of Dundas St. E. and about 150 ft. along the east side of Dufferin Ave. Included in the block, in addition to the Williamson property, are lots at 258 Dundas St. E. and at 117, 121 and 125 Dufferin Ave.

WOULD ALLOW CLINICS

City by-laws now permit single and two-family houses in the area. Proposed zoning change to a "B" residential district would allow clinics, rooming houses and apartment buildings in effect, which amounts to an extension of present Commercial use along Dundas Street.

The Board held its first hearing on re-zoning the Dundas Street - Dufferin Avenue corner last January. At that time application was received to zone the block to "D" to permit erection of a clinic. Because "D" district is a downtown Commercial area the Board turned down the application. At the same time it recommended to city council that it consider a zoning change to "B" district where clinics are permitted.

The Planning Board made exhaustive inquiries and held a Public Hearing in March to determine "what is a clinic." It decided a clinic is a building specifically limited to use for medical purposes and could not be rented for general office use.

The Dundas Street property was sold last spring to Dr. H. Williamson. He put up a building containing two doctors offices and two apartments for use as doctors' residences. This building technically met the by - law requirements. Dr. H. and Dr. E. Williamson have occupied the building since the end of March.

Planning director P. J. Beavis stressed Wednesday morning that the Planning Board has no power to amend by - laws. At City Council's request it investigates proposals and gathers opinions from residents of the affected area and from planning experts. Council is free to accept or reject the Planning Board's decision.

First Home for Group Care Of Children Authorized

The board of the Children's Aid Society, at its monthly meeting, gave final approval to the establishment of the first home for the group care of children unable to accept foster home living. From four to six children will be placed in the home, with the society paying a monthly retainer plus $2 per day per child. Clothings, medical and hospital care, etc., will continue to be paid by the society. When this home is well established, it is expected that others will follow.

Dr. S. C. Rose, the chairman of the board, presided at the meeting, much of which was devoted to discussion of a routine survey of the society's adoption practices by the Child Welfare Branch of the Ontario Department of Public Welfare.

Recognizing that it is becoming increasingly more difficult to secure permanent homes for children, the department suggested that the society embark upon its own advertising program to stimulate interest in adoption. It would appear that right across the province there is a scarcity of girls in the infant to early school age, and a surplus of boys in the same age category. As one member of the board suggested, perhaps the societies should embark upon a program designed to acquaint the people of Ontario with the advantages of having more boys in their homes. There was discussion, too, as to whether or not the society should give a couple seeking to adopt the privilege of choosing the sex of the child to be placed with them—a privilege that was denied parents with own children. However, no action was taken on this aspect of the problem.

MANY ADOPTIONS

One member of the board inquired as to whether or not the society's policy was too restrictive in light of the current surplus of children. The local director, Bruce Kerr, replied that he did not believe this to be the case. He stated that in the past eleven years between 550 and 600 children had been placed, by the local society, in adoption and while its standards were high, he felt that a program of interpretation, rather than a lowering of standards was in order.

Said Mr. Kerr, "There are many misconceptions prevalent today concerning adoption. All we ask of people is they have sufficient stability of employment and income to offer security, a mutual respect for one another and the ability to accept a child not their own. The size of the house and number of bedrooms is really not important." A committee consisting of Mrs. W. Donaldson, S/L. L. B. MacQuarrie and Mr. Linton Read was appointed to meet with the staff and review the existing policy, with a view to making certain it was up-to-date.

Plans were discussed for a meeting of foster parents later in the month of April or early in May. Mr. Joel Maser was directed to organize the program, arrange for speakers, etc.

The need for more professionally qualified caseworkers was again brought to the fore with Mr. Kerr stating that the only way a small agency could be assured of having its share of trained staff was to hire University graduates in the social sciences and sponsor them for post-graduate study at a Canadian school of social work. He said that to this end he had again been in touch with the placement services of the various Ontario universities and was this week interviewing several interested men and women. The Society offers a substantial training grant conditional upon two years of uninterrupted service for each year of sponsored graduate training.

Easter Egg Hunt Will Be Held Saturday

The annual Family Y.M.C.A. "Easter Egg Hunt", sponsored each year by the Industrial Management Club of Canada, Quinte Chapter, will once again be held this Saturday, April 17th at the East Hill playground starting at 10.00 a.m.

Members of the club will be hiding tokens in all parts of the playground and boys and girls will hunt for them. Prizes will be awarded to those boys and girls who find the most number of tokens. All participants will receive lolly-pops.

The Hunt is planned and supervised by the Quinte Chapter of the Industrial Management Club, and is open to every boy and girl in Belleville six to twelve years of age. Last year, close to 400 children enjoyed the Hunt.

Slips in Harbor Being Prepared

Local pleasure boat operators will have improved "tie-up" facilities in the Belleville harbor this summer as the result of slip construction being carried out by the harbor commission.

Three of the old dilapidated slips are being taken out and in their place a system of docks are being erected which will take up to 14 boats.

A feature of the construction, according to Harbor Commission Chairman, Jack Goyer, is that the dock platforms can be raised or lowered to match the bay water level. Cost of the construction is in excess of $2,000. The new docks are supported by pipe standards driven into the harbor bottom.

The level of the Bay of Quinte is now up about nine inches from last fall and is expected to be up a foot by the end of May.

Other members of the harbor commission are Doug. Burley and Major J. R. Ellis, Harbor Master is Don Barrett.

Baha'i Hears Talk on Yukon

Mr. Ted Anderson from Whitehorse, Yukon, spoke on Sunday night to a group of Baha'is and their friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Loft, Tyendinaga, about life in the Yukon. Mr. Anderson and his wife, who have lived in the Yukon for the past ten years, helped to organize the Yukon Indian Advancement Association. Since its inception, this organization has been pleased to see the construction of a meeting hall for the native people, the development of a Yukon Indian Craft Co-op, the building of a vocational school and other significant progress. His talk was accompanied by slides showing the beauty of Canada's Northland. Mr. Anderson also showed slides of Israel taken on a recent visit. Mr. Anderson, who holds an M. A. degree from the University of Chicago, is touring Ontario and giving talks on the Yukon, the Indian people, and the Baha'i faith.

Dr. W. Nickle Going to U. S.

Dr. W. R. Nickle is leaving his position as a research scientist on the staff of the Canada Department of Agriculture's Research Institute at Belleville to accept a more senior position on the staff of the United States Department of Agriculture, at Beltsville, Maryland.

Dr. Nickle, who is a graduate of New York State College of Forestry, the University of Idaho, and the University of California, joined the staff of the Belleville Institute in 1962. His specialty is research on the formalede worms that attack and kill pest insects, and he has been making a special study of their possible use to control the bark beetles that carry Dutch elm disease.

Dr. Nickle married Miss Catherine Chipeswick, of Belleville and Picton, who is also on the staff of the Research Institute. They expect to move to the Washington, D.C., area in June.

NOTICE

Owing to the death of Mrs. Trounrez, Arthur A. Sills and Kelly's Drug Store, Dundas Street East will close at 12 noon, Thursday, April 15th.

Parking Ticket Cost Driver $2 and Costs

TRENTON — Magistrate T. Y. Wills told Philip Isaacs in Trenton court yesterday that once the police have put a parking violation ticket on a car, they are not responsible for what happens to it after that.

"Some of the new cars are so slick and smooth it's hard to find a place to put the ticket anywhere," said the magistrate, adding "and I have heard of malicious persons removing the ticket from the car."

Mr. Isaacs paid a $2 fine and $3 court costs for unlawful parking.

CHEQUE REFUSED

Stephen Samuel Foster, 16, of Hamilton, found out in Trenton court yesterday proferring a cheque for the payment of gas doesn't mean you can drive away with the gas in your car . . . . if the merchant refuses to take the cheque.

Foster had $4.75 worth of gas put in his car at O'Malley's Groceteria on March 26. His cheque was refused by a clerk, and Foster drove away with the gas.

He must pay restitution, court costs of $5 and report to a probation officer once monthly for the duration of his year's probationary sentence.

DID NOT REMEMBER

A Toronto truck driver who said he "couldn't remember" leaving the scene of an accident in Trenton court yesterday, was fined $200 and told to pay court costs of $4.

Ernest Andrews, 23, said he had been drinking on the night his car collided on the town bridge with a car driven by Dennis Davis of Brighton.

The accident occurred on the evening of March 27. Following the two-car crash, three other vehicles were involved in a rear-end collision in the opposite lane.

Country Club Appoints New Golf Pro

TRENTON — Mike Roche, with golfing experience in England, Ireland and Canada to his credit, has been appointed the pro at the Trenton Country Club. Mike is said to have an excellent background in grass-keeping and will supervise the club greens himself. He will be assisted by Carl Chatelain.

On Friday evening, April 23, club president F. J. "Pete" Aziz and his executive are staging a "Meet Your Pro Night."

Gordon Tripp has been named as games' captain for the upcoming golf season and will institute a new handicapping system.

Jack Hallett and Jim Alexander are taking on the Men's Wednesday Twilight Golf, and ex-president Alec Wilson has volunteered to help organize mixed two-ball golf days and possibly an elimination tournament for a championship mixed tournament.

Others concerned with making the coming season the best are Tom Vanderburgh, Bill Mack, John Fetter, Herman Chambers and Ralph Weaver.

Ilsola Chivas is games' captain for the ladies. Madlyn Packer will convene the committee which will look after the ladies' tea days—one day a week set aside for friendly games among the lady golfers. The ladies are planning a spring dessert bridge and euchre for the evening of Wednesday, April 21st, to get the season off the ground. Ladies' opening day is May 8.

Back with the men's division, the Men's Field Day will be held this year May 24.

CONSIDER SWAP

The Trenton school board is considering a "swap" with the town of land in the vicinity of the Marmora Street Senior Public School. The town wants board-owned land to the north of the school, to be used for approaches for the proposed new bridge across the Trent. The board would like land east of the school to "straighten out" a boundary line.

Gordon's Good News

Hon. Walter Gordon's pre-budget white paper contained good news for Canadians.

A deficit of $83,000,000 is a flea-bite when one is considering a total budget of over seven billion dollars.

The deficit looks even smaller when compared with the estimate made at budget time a year ago. Then Mr. Gordon expected that expenditures would exceed revenue by $455,000,000. In the event, the actual deficit was less than a fifth of that forecast.

The result is a return to the proximity of a balanced budget such as we enjoyed in the mid-fifties. Coming after six years of heavy budgetary deficits, running at one point to well over ten per cent of total expenditures, the improvement is a needed restorative for our confidence in the stability of our economy.

There is, however, one phase of Mr. Gordon's report which should not be overlooked. The reduction of the budgetary deficit, he made plain, was the direct result of the buoyancy of the Canadian economy. Yet, at the same time as we were enjoying a level of prosperity which was as high as we have any right to expect, we were increasing our national debt. Moreover, this increase, though slight, was greater on a per capita basis; the increase was not offset by the fact that there were more Canadians to share the burden. In the past six years the nation's debt has increased, per capita, by a greater margin than it was reduced during the previous five years. Unless the trend is reversed, we seem headed back for the high debt plateau on which we stood at the conclusion of the Second Great War, and from which we descended as the result of fifteen years of heavy taxation and in excess of our expenditures.

Under these circumstances one may wonder whether our near-return to a balanced budget ought to be celebrated by any tax-cutting spree. The economy, as Mr. Gordon has told us, is buoyant. Perhaps we ought to put a little in the treasury for more difficult days which may be ahead, to reserve tax cuts for a time when they may be really needed to stimulate private business activity.

"Frozen With Sophistication"

We admire individualists—the more so because this is a conformist age. One such is Douglas Sarff, a high school teacher in Wayzata, Minnesota, who objected to a full page newspaper advertisement to tell the world he is fed up with "self-centred, frivolous" students and he is leaving when his current contract is up.

A 30-year-old bachelor, Sarff said the students are "frozen with sophistication."

The word sophistication is used to excess these days, but we know what Sarff is getting at.

What he means is that the students are bored and have little respect for anyone or anything. Not all of them of course, fortunately, is a good many of them.

Whatever else modern society does for its young people it inculcates little sense of wonderment, interest in one's fellow beings, or compassion. No wonder some are starved of affection, even a smile, an expression of genuine interest on the part of some other person. Some people have enough intellectual stimulus within themselves that they can live more or less contentedly without the attitude of their fellow mortals. Such an intelligent interest in one's fellows is an essential requirement of living.

How tragic-looking is the face of humanity as it goes about its daily business, the lack of warmth, the inhibited glance (even from school friends). We go through life strangers—who cares? It begins with the young and their "don't talk to strangers" mentality. And the population begets suspicion.

Swedes are supposed to be like that. A young Swedish friend once said with a laugh—at herself and her countrymen: "Ah, Swedes never talk to each other."

The Canadians are more open-hearted? Perhaps, but only when we are sold to be always willing to be introduced, are more communicative.

The only place in Canada where strangers appear to strangers is in poor maligned Quebec. The rest of us, dour Anglo-Saxons, stew in our own melancholy juice.

Give us some of that Gallic charm and liveliness and outgoing interest—yes, and some of that polish, too.

A pox on our own faceless traditions and lack of common humanity.

One who uses many periods is a philosopher; by interrogations, a student, many exclamations, a fanatic.—L. Bastord.

Letter to the Editor

Doctor States Case For Dundas St. Clinic

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

By way of explanation of what seems to be a confusing situation as to my intent, I would like to submit the following in the hope that it might clarify matters generally. I have applied to the Belleville and suburban Planning Board to have the property at 200 Dundas Street East rezoned from Zone A to Zone B, in order that the building located at that site might be used for purposes of a clinic, as defined by the bylaws of the City of Belleville.

At the present time the building is nonconforming, in that it is not, and has not since it was zoned A, conformed to the permissible use as laid down in the bylaws. At the time it was zoned A District, the building was a multiple family dwelling. It is permissible to build an addition to add more apartments, (permitted in a Zone B), but apparently not permissible to convert these apartments to medical offices (permitted in a Zone B).

I purchased the property primarily because its location, directly opposite the Bellevielle General Hospital, seemed to be an ideal one for medical offices. I previously, for some years, located my own office in my residence. I was unable to find available office space to suit my needs. This situation still existed for many years in Belleville, and at the present time there are other medical practitioners who are faced with this same problem. The provision of convenient and suitable accommodation for medical offices would seem to be advantageous for the general public, and the doctors. In addition, it seemed this particular location of such would ease the burden on the already strained facilities of the Out Patients' and Emergency Departments of the Belleville General Hospital. Why then are there objections?

The property, situated as it is on Provincial Highway No. 2, is expected in the not too distant future to be rezoned as highway commercial. It is now bordered immediately on the east by a C District, that property housing a motel, and a store and restaurant. To the west, one short block away, is located the Dominion Entomological Laboratory, and farther on the south side of the street, the Armory (Mogul Armoury).

Reclassification of the property at 200 Dundas Street East as Zone B, (which is a C District would permit improvement of the area, with an increase in assessment and tax revenue to the city. The classification as a District, which permits apartment houses, and one or two family detached dwellings.

Again I ask what legitimate objections there can be to the application for rezoning. An application was made more than a year ago, which was refused. This application was not pushed, because the facts favoring the application seemed self evident. However the application was turned down. There have been misinformed discussions on the merits of the present application, which have suggested various methods" and "clever evasion."

I submit that the matter is perfectly straight forward, that it has merit, and that logically there can be no legitimate objections.

H. F. Williamson, M.D.

Hornets' Nest

Charlottetown Guardian

A dairy science professor in New Zealand has stirred up a hornets' nest by campaigning for the removal of cows' tails on the ground that they are dirty and contaminated and useless as bug exterminators. Opposition to his views has come from all over the country including societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals.

Triple-Pronged Offensive

Great Plague Anniversary

Charlottetown Guardian

"Celebrating" wouldn't be the right word, but at the Guildhall in London another memorable anniversary in the city's history is being observed. It is just 300 years since the Great Plague, the last and most terrible of all the epidemics that had ravaged London from the Black Death of 1348 onward.

It began modestly enough with a few deaths in December, 1664, which the authorities tried to conceal in their reports for fear of starting a panic. By the spring of 1665, however, theatres, bear baiting pits, alehouses and taverns had been closed down. The trickle of rich merchants fleeing from London with their families had swollen to a flood. King Charles and his court fled the city in June. Over 10,000 persons took to living on boats moored downstream in the Thames.

This left the poor of London to bear the brunt, and with appalling consequences. Bills red crosses were daubed on the doors of infected houses and those inside were locked up to die, with a day and night street watch maintained to make sure that no one entered or left. Burials took place only at night. By September, 1665, London's dead were dying at the rate of 10,000 a week. Their bodies were pitched into huge pits as the churchyards became overcrowded. By the end of the year 68,596 had lost one-quarter of its population.

As a reminder of what it was like to live in a city without sanitation and where medicine was in a primitive stage, the Guildhall authorities have assembled some unique exhibits of the catastrophe. They include advertisements for quack medicines as sure cures for the plague, bills of mortality which show that the plague took over 100,000 lives, religious tracts comparing London to Sodom, and woodcuts showing the angel of death hovering over a city covered with coffins.

No one knows why the bubonic plague never returned. The Great Fire of 1666 which destroyed most of the city's vermin infested buildings, may have had something to do with it. But London is still dotted with patches of wasteland which mark the mass burial pits of the plague victims, and London street urchins still chant "Ashes, ashes, we all fall down" as they sing around the posies, pocket full of posies," unaware that this nursery rhyme originated with the plague.

The "posies" refer to the red rash which covered the bodies of the plague victims; the "posies" were the herbs and spices carried to sweeten the air. Time has worked wonders with this jingle, and it is just as well, perhaps, that it serves as no reminder nowadays of the time, three centuries ago, when it accompanied the rumble of the carts and the dread cry of "bring out your dead!"

To Your Good Health
Tolerance for Coffee Will Vary From One to Another

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: You wrote not long ago that too much coffee is bad.

Pappy turned 90 on Jan. 8. His quota is 20 to 30 cups of coffee daily — with cream and sugar. He starts off at 5 a.m., and the last cometh at 9 p.m., his bedtime. When he hits the sack the house could burn down and he wouldn't know it.

When he was a mere youngster of 75 he had a prostate operation and sneaked out of the hospital the following morning because his nurse wouldn't let him have coffee. The doctor then prescribed 30 cups a day — believe it or not.

So — how much coffee is too much coffee? — E. G.

P.S.: I hope that when you are 90 you are as frisky as Pappy.

P. S: Do you think the coffee will kill him?

Well, friend, don't expect me to believe everything you write. I see by your stationary that you are a lawyer, but you aren't using your legal-type language. I'm a doctor, but will forego my doctor-type language in reply.

You're exaggerating a bit. But I'll give you a straight answer.

First, you haven't been reading my column as regularly as you should — because I've written that, and now I'up repeating it, that what is too much coffee for one person may be just right for another. People have different tolerances. One cup of coffee is too much for some; one cup isn't enough for others.

I won't question your testimony about Pappy walking out of the hospital because the nurse refused him coffee. I've known of cases just as strange — and one of them which led to the beneficial principle of early ambulation (getting people moving as soon as possible after surgery) involved a bedridden, but instinctively brilliant man who insisted on walking up and down the corridor the day after as operation to remove his appendix. The nurse (and almost all of the doctors) thought it was foolhardy. But the patient recovered so quickly that his own doctor began to suspect that there might be something good about getting people up as soon as possible instead of keeping them lying on their backs until their circulation became stagnant and their muscles lost tone.

What I doubt about your story is that "when the doctor then prescribed 30 cups a day."

As we used to say in the 4th grade, bushwash! No doctor is smart enough to decide how many cups is right for anybody. If the doctor said, "Let him drink as much coffee as he wants if it doesn't bother him — even if it's 30 cups a day," that makes sense.

If I run into somebody who complains that he has the jitters and his heart skips a beat, and he has to get up at 3 a.m. each night to go to the bathroom then I say, "Well, let's cut down on the coffee and tea."

And I'll surely be right.

But if such symptoms are not present, I wouldn't think of cutting off anybody's coffee. But neither would I say that because some friend's Pappy thrives on coffee that everybody should follow suit.

P.S.: I hope that when I'm 90 I'm as frisky as Pappy.

P S: No, I don't think coffee will kill Pappy.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: You wrote that there was no danger in a teen-age girl using a tampon. However I understand it is possible for them to break the hymen. Are you sure this could not happen — D. M.

It could happen, but it is rare.

Note to Miss S.: Electrolysis is the only permanent way of removing hair. Dear by an operator with professional training there is no scarring from it.

The huge steamship Titanic struck an iceberg on her maiden voyage 53 years ago tonight—in 1912 — and sank with the loss of 1,490 lives. Then the largest vessel afloat (at 45,000 tons), the Titanic was believed to be unsinkable and had not enough lifeboats for the 2,201 people aboard. The iceberg stripped off the ship's hige almost from end to end, and she sank in less than three hours.

Strictly Personal
Mankind Is Under the Microscope

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

After lecturing at a midwestern college not long ago, I was asked to a faculty tea, where I was soon engaged in a warm debate with a couple of the professors.

They took issue with my lecture remarks that "social science" is a misnomer, and that the study of man's behavior is more of an art than a "science."

One of the characteristics of true science is that controlled experiments, by different people in different places, will give the same results. Physicists, for instance, can agree on methods of atomic fission. A Russian scientist and an American scientist speak the same language in this field.

But what about the advisability of continuing the bomb tests? Here, even American scientists are in wide disagreement. There is no "science" to determine the wisdom or folly of continuing these tests. It is a matter of prudence, of morality, of making difficult value-judgments.

Or, to take another case, economics has long been considered as the most "scientific" branch of social studies. Yet in a new book out this week, Prof. Adolph Lowe, the distinguished economist, raises serious doubts that economics can ever resemble the "exact sciences."

The book is entitled, "On Economic Knowledge", because Prof. Lowe, after 40 years of studying the subject, abandoned his earlier belief in "economic theory" and "economic theory" as meaningful in the old sense.

If economics were really a scientific discipline, there would be no basic disagreement about the policies a nation should pursue. All economists, studying the same array of facts, would arrive at substantially the same conclusions.

Yet it is precisely in the interpretation of these facts that the classical, Keynesian, and Marxian economists disagree.

Now, social subjects deserve the most serious study — but they must be studied in the light of man's moral and intellectual nature. That is to say, they must be studied philosophically, in an effort to find out what a man's nature is really like, and how his deepest needs can best be served by the social order he creates and transforms.

If we are studying the "housing problem," for instance, and you approach it with the view that the poor are lazy and slovenly and will always be that way while I take the view that an improved environment brings out the better things in people's natures — then we will always disagree on what to do about the "housing problem." Our real argument is a philosophical one — but in "social science" we never come to grips with the real argument between us.

Discrimination

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

It is really not necessary to look far to find situations in which Canadians are completely unprejudiced actions to people of other race. Canada is now suffering from the effects of an ingrown inability to appreciate the point of view of Canadians of other than white race, and what often seems an unwillingness to make any attempt to do this. But there are other evidences in Canada of a need for greater generosity of mind and spirit. Our attitude to our Indian population is a prime example of neglect.

The vice-chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission has announced reduction in the rural hydro rate from four cents to 3½ cents per kilowatt-hour and plans for a five-year post-war rural electrification scheme to cost an estimated $83,000,00.

The rate, made possible by a program of new services including uniform rates for rural areas inaugurated last year, is on the first block of energy and is effective May 1. Rates on second and third blocks of energy remain unchanged, he said.

The program last year had resulted in an estimated saving of $500,000 and additional reductions would save nearly $300,000. The Commission and rural consumers will bear the expenses of the electrification program as soon as labor and materials become available after the war.

County Council Endorses Hiring of New Commissioner

PICTON (Staff) — County council in passing the Finance and Supply Committee report in this week's session, endorsed the hiring of a deputy assessment commissioner.

Chairman of the committee, Reeve Robert Boyce of Wellington, explained to council that after various meetings at departmental level, both here and in Toronto, this was a step that could not be forestalled.

The county area requires a certain number of staff to function properly, advised Reeve Boyce.

"In our situation we need three qualified assessors, who will be able to take further educational training as it becomes available, a trainee which we now have; a secretary (now employed), a commissioner (F. W. Jennings) and a deputy-commissioner who would supervise most of the field work, leaving the present commissioner available to handle the office properly and to instruct in training." Reeve Boyce advised the deputy-commissioner's position will possibly range in salary from $7,800 to $11,000 according to qualifications. Advertising for the position will commence shortly.

BY-LAWS PASSED

By-laws were passed by the county council to hire secretarial help for both the clerk-treasurer's office and the road engineer's office. The two assistants start work immediately.

Last October, a letter from county council was submitted to the Department of Highways, Traffic and Planning Studies Section concerning excessive speeding on the built-up portion of Glenora Road. In the reply read in Council this week, the regional traffic engineer, B. Kernig, pointed out that the section of highway in question had been checked out and was found not to have sufficient development to meet the "Built-up Area" clause as defined by the Highway Traffic Act. However, it was pointed out that at rate dwellings are being built in the area a review of the situation will be required at an early date. It is planned to complete a study on Speed Zoning on the entire portion of Highway 33 as soon as weather permits and at that time proposals will be discussed with the county council.

The Department suggested an increased "stepped-up" police enforcement program to relieve the situation, and advised they would contact the local detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police with a request that they consider such a program.

Long Holiday For Students Starts Thursday

Following one of the longest non-holiday school sessions in recent years, elementary school pupils and high school students will commence their annual Easter holidays on Thursday.

After the Easter holiday period schools will re-open for classes on Monday, April 26th.

Easter this year (April 18th) is within three days of the latest possible date on which the holiday can fall.

Traditionally the date of Good Friday is the Friday following the first full moon after March 21st.

This year the March full moon fell on the 17th with the next full moon being April 15th.

But the late Easter this year falls right in line with the weather. There haven't been many weekends that new Easter finery could be comfortably worn.

Resignations Leave Twp. Without Council

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — A wave of resignations has left Adolphustown Township without a council, and Clerk A. C. Davis said Tuesday night he is turning the problem over to a county judge who is expected to order an election.

Last week four councillors meeting in this town 25 miles east of Belleville expressed dissatisfaction with Reeve Gordon Mack. They resigned and walked out of the meeting.

Monday night the remaining two councillors refused to participate in council business and Reeve Mack walked out.

The disagreement resulted from a proposal to have a high-speed curve built at an intersection on a $303,000 road project. The councillors supported it and Reeve Mack opposed.

Emerald Isle's Growth Outlined to Kiwanians

Ireland's postwar economic expansion has resulted in the achievement of a gross national product that is greater on a percentage basis than even that of West Germany.

The Emerald Isle's spectacular growth in commerce, industry, agriculture and tourism, moreover, has been achieved without financial aid from abroad, according to the Irish Tourist Board's representative in Canada, Sean Mayne.

Such things don't happen by the indolent, layabout, fun-loving or Hollywood conception of Ireland," Mr. Mayne told Belleville Kiwanians yesterday.

Formerly with Irish International Airlines whom he served in an executive capacity in Paris, Australia, the United States and Canada, Mr. Mayne took up his present post on the establishment recently of the Irish Tourist Board's new office in Toronto.

His organization, while it is responsible mainly for attracting tourists to the Irish republic, also promotes tourism in Northern Ireland which in addition is served by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board and the British Travel Association.

Mr. Mayne said it was important to see Ireland in its "right perspective," and to appreciate an economic growth there that had attracted the attention of other countries.

"Ireland," he said, "was served by direct air flights from Toronto, Montreal, New York and Boston as well as by shipping companies. It costs less than $300 to fly to Shannon which is 120 miles from Dublin and 190 miles from Belfast."

EXCELLENT SERVICE

While the country had not as yet reached the air-taxi type of service, the main centres of Belfast, Dublin, Cork and Shannon were served by domestic services, and there were excellent rail and coach services, as well as rental cars and even canal boats for those with time to spare.

Hotel accommodation varied from luxury establishments to budget-satisfying "digs," and all had to measure up to tourist board requirements.

Sporting activities abound, including some of the world's best fishing and golf, with more than 200 courses to choose from.

Borrowing an idea from the Scandinavians, the Irish Tourist Board also sponsors a "Meet the Irish" service whereby Canadians may meet people of similar interests and professions in Ireland.

Mr. Mayne put in a word for two celebrated Irish products — Irish coffee, a whisky-flavored brew, and Irish Mist, a liqueur. "The Scots say we stole the latter from them," he said. "However as we taught them how to make whisky we regard it in a sense of lease lend."

Light-weight tweeds and woolen suitings and homespun sweaters were other products of Ireland which Mr. Mayne recommended to his audience.

He reminded the Kiwanians that Ireland was the most westerly country in Europe and the first port of entry to Europe for visitors from this continent. He hoped that Canadians would visit Ireland in increasing numbers, either on their way to Europe or on their way home.

Mr. Mayne was introduced by Ed McKinney and thanked by Archdeacon A. S. McConnell.

Kiwanis president, S./Ldr. O. F. Bradley, who presided, said a blood donors' clinic would be held at the Kiwanis centre on Thursday.

In two weeks' time the club will fly by chartered aircraft to Belleville, Michigan, for a visit with the club there.

Friedel Bellstedt gave a report on the vocational guidance committee's activities in furnishing speakers in city schools.

Next week the club will be addressed by the Kiwanis lieut.-governor.

of Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

Indeed, there had to be something wrong with the Conservative party, said Mr. Mackasey, when "men of the stature of Leon Balcer (Trois - Rivieres) and Remi Paul (Berthier - Maskinonge - Delanaudiere) left it to sit as independents.

R. G. L. Fairweather (PC—Royal) took a swing at the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism. He said it should hold hearings in smaller centres if it wanted to find out what the general public really thinks.

It was wrong to confine commission hearings to larger centres such as Montreal and Toronto.

URGES RULES COURSE

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) urged the government to get all - party consent on changes in parliamentary rules before putting them into practice.

Rule changes were needed if the government was to get through all the business of a session within a 12 - month period. This would require time limits on some debates but some limits shouldn't be rammed through with support the government could command from the smaller parties.

Douglas Fisher (NDP — Port Arthur) flatly predicted that the government resolution to provide an amending formula for the Canadian constitution wouldn't come before the Commons.

Mr. Fisher said Quebec Premier Lesage "will lose his nerve . . . and call off the federal government."

John B. Morton (L — Wentworth) said the Liberal party owes its success over the last 30 years to the fact that it did the right thing. With the widening gap between the poor and wealthy in Canada, a complete overhaul of welfare programs was needed, "not a plan to install socialism, but a plan to avoid socialism."

Eric Winkler (PC — Grey-Bruce) said the speech from the throne was "loaded with hypothesis" and if the budget presented to Parliament after the Easter recess was the same way it would be a sure sign Canadians will be voting again in a general election.

"The Liberals want to go to the country," he said.

PLANS THREE TRAINS

MONTREAL (CP)—The CNR will operate three daily passenger trains across Canada from June 22 to Sept. 8, the company announced Tuesday. A spokesman said the Super Continental, which operates daily from Montreal and Toronto and has previously been consolidated in to one train at Capreol, Ont., now will operate as two separate trains across the country. The third train is the Panorama.

Will Cancer 'Miracles' Lead to Cures?

ARTICLE 9
By PAT McGRADY

Diagnosed at four years old as an acute leukemia victim, Ann O'Neill today is a high school student — without evidence of her former sickness.

Late in the 13th century a young Italian priest dreamed that his cancerous leg, which was to be amputated in the morning, had become well.

When he awakened, the cancer had healed. He lived in good health until 1345, when at the age of 80 he died of old age. He became St. Peregrine, the "Cancer Saint." More than 400 cures of cancer and other serious diseases are attributed to prayers for his intercession.

In 1933, Sister Gertrude Kortenaeker, an aging Sister of Charity who administered a New Orleans mental hospital, was surgically explored and diagnosed as having an inoperable cancer of the pancreas— 100 percent fatal.

Her sister nuns prayed to Mother Seton, the nun - beatified founder of the Sisters of Charity. Sister Gertrude became well suddenly. She died seven years later of a pulmonary embolism. Autopsy showed no trace of cancer.

In 1952, four - year - old Ann O'Neill was diagnosed as having acute lympatic leukemia. She was dying on the verge of death when the nuns at Baltimore's St. Agnes Hospital prayed to Mother Seton. The little girl became well and at this writing is a high school student without evidence of leukemia.

In the O'Neill case there is a reasonable explanation—chicken pox. Even as the nuns prayed, the massive ugly sores of leukemia were joined by the tiny red pocks of the common childhood disease. In three days Ann's condition improved remarkably; both the chicken pox and cancer cleared. Two weeks later she was in a state of complete remission.

While some call these phenomena miracles, the medical profession knows them as spontaneous remissions, or spontaneous regressions. One rough estimate is that they occur once in every 80,000 cases, but this may understate the frequency.

Scientists feel certain the explanation of spontaneous remission lies in the field of immunity that majestic body chemical process by which each living thing defeats the diseases which would destroy it. When normal immune processes are understood, cancer may cease to be a major cause of death.

Evidence that immunity plays a role in cancer is abundant.

A VACCINE IS POSSIBLE

Patient A has a tumor removed, but his system is shot through with metastases and his blood contains millions of cancer cells. Following the surgery, he becomes well and remains well for years.

Patient B has a small, seemingly localized tumor. Following its surgical removal or radiation destruction, cancer colonies arise in various tissues and kill him.

Patient C has the original cancer removed, but metastes remain. His cancer is ground up into a vaccine and injected under his skin. The metastases shrivel up and disappear for the time being.

Patient D with a condition identical with that of C, has no good reaction to the vaccine. If the vaccine is composed of live cancer cells — his own or others's — they grow and, temporarily at least, form a new tumor. He is not long for this world.

What is immunity?

When grange protein—an antigen— invades a body, the body's defenses begin forming other protein, like antibodies, to recognize and inactivate the stranger.

Perhaps the greatest scientific ahievement of cancer research would be to find an antigen not produced by healthy humans but common to all cancers. If such a cancer-specific antigen exists and can be produced, it may be used as a vaccine to control cancer.

Vaccines are used to treat as well as prevent diseases.

In some cases, vaccines can be injected into animals, like cows or horses, that they produce antibodies. The antibody loaded blood serum of these immunized animals can be injected into sick humans, where it then attacks the disease-causing organism.

Is there a common cancer antigen?

Five widely scattered scientists or groups — in Tokyo, Moscow, Houston, New York and Stockholm — have reported finding antigens which appear to be common, not only to all human cancers they have examined, but to animal cancers as well. Many others have reported finding antigens which are tumor-specific; that is, they exist in a certain kind or class of cancer and not others.

Many factors can contribute to the defects of our body's defences against cancer.

Malnutrition or deficiency of ascorbic acid, thiamine, or other vitamins depresses antibody formation and, also, some chemicals and X-rays weaken immunity.

And sometimes our own defences, like a rebellious militia, turn against us.

TWISTED IMMUNITY?

The eventful 20th Century began with a substantial contribution by Dr. Paul Ehrlich. In discussing his discovery in 1900 that one human produced antibodies against cells from another human, he raised the question: could a person produce antibodies against himself? He dismissed the possibility as being an unthinkable situation in nature.

A generation later, a young Heidelberg immunologist, Dr. Ernest Witebsky, now at the University of Buffalo, showed that, under some circumstances the system does produce antibodies against itself.

Dr. Witebsky's success opened the floodgates in investigation into autoimmune disease, now recognized as the cause of many serious chronic conditions. His results gave hope that body defences could be stimulated to destroy cancers and also raised the question of whether some cancers could be an autoimmune or allergic-type disease.

VIRUS INHIBITOR?

It may turn out that one of the more important medical discoveries of the 20th Century is a natural protein known as interferon.

On a weight basis, interferon is ten or more times as potent against viruses as antibiotics are against bacteria.

Interferon, produced by infected tissues, suppresses mammalian virus growth; it makes cells resistant to virus. It does not seem to kill the virus, however. Alone or in combination with other natural defence chemicals, it could conquer cancer.

A few scientists already have treated hopeless cancer patients experimentally with various vaccines. Some patients improved. The scientists were severely criticized.

Critics contend that there is a risk in immunological treatment of cancer — a risk of accelerating the disease, of adding distress to the great burden of pain suffered by some advanced patients, of hypersensitivity and fatal anaphylactic shock.

What some critics fail to consider is that few things in life are as risky as terminal cancer.

Immunology, still undergoing acute growing pains, is opening enormous vistas of potential cures of cancer. Even now, with new techniques, some of the substances in blood, fluids and tissues which have been found to destroy cancer are being isolated, purified, identified, and possibly synthesized.

(Tomorrow: Are viruses the villains?)

Resident Marks 99th Birthday

FOXBORO — One of Foxboro's oldest residents, Mrs. Appenda Shaw, celebrated her 99th birthday last Friday.

Mrs. Shaw was born in Camden Township the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob H. York, who later moved to the 4th concession of Thurlow when she was nine years old. In 1902 Mrs. Shaw married John R. Shaw of 4th Thurlow.

Mrs. Shaw has been a resident of Foxboro for 48 years. She resides with her only child, a daughter, Mrs. Fred Prindle and Mr. Prindle. She has five grandchildren and fifteen great-grandchildren.

Owing to a bad fall in January she has been confined to her bed a great deal of the time since.

A small gathering of friends and grandchildren, on Friday evening, at which time a lovely birthday cake was served. She received a number of cards, flowers and other gifts.

Resident Reaches 80th Milestone

Mr. Grills has two daughters, Mrs. Hazel Johnson of Norwood and Mrs. Gerald (Evelyn) Crowe of Wooler and four sons, John, Everett, Ernest and Garnet, all of the Carmel community and two step-sons, Jack Wilson and George Kilson of Stirling. There are 14 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren.

Guests were in attendance from Scarborough, Baltimore, Belleville, Campbellford, English Line, Burnbrae and various nearby points.

Mrs. Grills the former Reta Carlisle received the guests with her husband. The sons welcomed the guests as they arrived and the daughters presided over the guest book. The daughters-in-law were in charge of kitchen duties and the grandchildren served refreshments.

The family presented their father with a wrist watch and the grandchildren gave the honored guest a purse of money. Mr. Grills was born at the English Line, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Grills.

He came to the Carmel community in 1910 and has resided in that area ever since. He is a retired member of Carmel Union Church and was pleased to greet his many friends on this happy occasion.

SPRING THAW

Whatever happened to Spring this year? Kilts the Scotch terrier is puzzled. In all his life (nine years) spent on the north side of Prince Edward County bay shore, he cannot remember when the ice was not out of the bay by April 6 to 8th.

This year the fishermen walked on the ice pulling their sleigh out to where their nets were on the 10th, and the children rode a snowmobile to Point Anne on the 6th.

The robins are back, marking out their territory. The redwing blackbird and the flicker are here. The stage is set, but Spring still lingers in the wings with reluctant feet, and she'll be treating on the heels of winter, if he does not soon make his exit.

The swallows and the sparrows are having their annual battle over the bird house. The sparrows have possession first, but the swallow are tenacious, and finally get ownership. The bird house was built to specifications for the bluebirds, but none ever came. It is a pity that such a pretty song bird should vanish. They used to be seen quite often a few years ago, but it is a long time since they have come around.

On Sunday Kilts watched as a long flight of geese flew over in an irregular triangle, barking loudly, and Kilts barked back at them.

For a while Kiltie's dog tag was missing, but he was happy when it was found, because as one of his young friends said, "Now he is legitimate".

ARBOR DAY

Do they still have Arbor Day at school? This used to be the fun day of the whole year.

If memory serves this took place about the first of May. We all arrived at school loaded with cleaning cloths.

First we cleaned out our desks, dusted and polished them. This last wasn't easy, as there were so many initials carved in them (including ours) it was a pretty involved job. There could be the accumulation of about 30 years of occupants, each of whom left his initials for the succeeding year.

Black boards were erased and scoured. Some lucky classrooms had slate which cleaned up pretty well, but most were painted black, and just got grayer and greyer as the seasons wore on. The green nonreflecting boards of today are a big improvement. Ours reflected allright, and we used to dodge around to try to get the right light on the shiny surface.

Then we went outdoors, slapped brushes together, choked on the dust, and brought in the red, white and blue striped felt erasers with their wooden backs, cleaned and ready to go again.

Most teachers didn't mind if the board monitors took the small bits of used chalk off the ledges at the bottom of the board. They were dandy for drawing hop scotch patterns, and for writing on the sidewalks who loved whom.

Outdoors we raked up the winter debris, dug up the flower bed, and planted trees. Is this all done by a maintenance staff now? It was a personal thing to us. We tried to keep the flowers nice and the lawn tidy because it was our responsibility.

That school is now and a fine new one has been built, but I hope the trees we planted are all there to be our contribution to the ages.

Bringing Up Baby

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GLENCH, MOTHER OF 5

Mother Nature's way of providing the extra oxygen new lungs need in the early weeks. (It takes a bit of time before a beginner's lungs work at top efficiency.) So when your cherub looks just about his very cutest, remember that years ought he's getting the benefits of a deep and satisfying breath of air.

Solid facts with nutritional overtones. Specially prepared cereals play an important role in your baby's diet because they supply important nutrients baby needs. Gerber Baby Cereals, for example, contain added iron and these important vitamins: thiamine (B1), riboflavin (B2) and niacin.

Gerber Cereals are famous for their mild, pleasant flavours and smooth, nice-to-the-tongue texture. Five varieties . . . including wonderful Gerber Rice. Their air to smooth perfection is a matter of seconds; stay creamy-smooth throughout the serving.

Feeding footnote. It's easy enough to fall into the belief that the more you feed your baby the better off he'll be. It's not so. As an old friend once put it: "Forcing never made a baby a bigger or better eater . . ." It just takes the enjoyment out of eating. Little ones are surprisingly sensitive to concerns to knowing their food needs and will eat enough if left alone to satisfy their hunger needs."

Eating enjoyment comes naturally with Gerber Strained Foods. Because they have naturally good flavours, come-hither colours. Once on a full food schedule, your baby can enjoy over 60 wholesome, toothsome varieties. Two delectables: Strained Carrots and Strained Sweet Potatoes . . . sunny tempters "custom-cooked" to help preserve the nutritive values for your baby. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

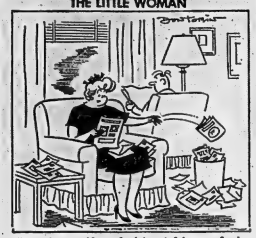
Abolish Auxiliaries Says Expert

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Women's auxiliaries and sex-segregated organizations should be abolished, says Vivien Batke, special service officer for the National Employment Service here.

"The whole tribe of auxiliaries should be wiped out. And that includes various wives' associations like the University Wives Association and the Ditch-diggers' Wives Association. It also includes the polite segregation of political parties' organizations. Such parties are no places for segregation by sex."



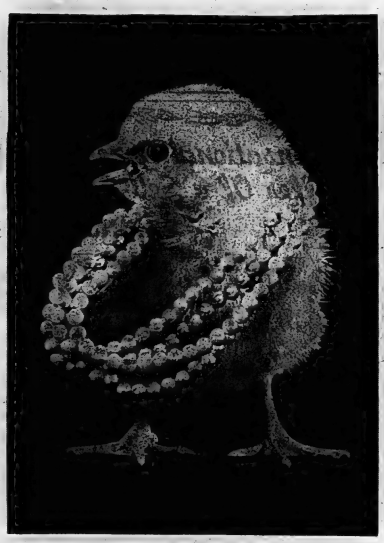
Mrs. Batke, wife of the University of Waterloo vice-president Dr. T. Louis Batke, discussed the changing role of women in the last of a series of lectures at the YWCA.

Educated women who stay home to keep house haven't provided much in the way of political leadership, she says.

"This may be because they lack the focus that employment provides, as well as the continuing contacts, the rubbing of minds which keeps one in the mainstream of events.

"Growth tends to diminish as one is removed from economic participation and concentrates on the pleasantly slower pace of domestic life.

THE LITTLE WOMAN



". . . Then would you be interested in a profusely illustrated three-volume set of 'Earthworms Around the World'?"

"The various informal ruling devices of the community are also closed to her. There should be women Rotary members. Instead of a member of the Kiwanis we have the Kiwanis queens . . . not women involved, finding a focus of action and interest, but women as auxiliaries, brought into the organization by reference to a man, her husband."

Horticultural Soc. Plans to Beautify City

Belleville Horticultural Society will sponsor a plan to spruce up the city, President C. A. S. Smith announced Monday night at the society's regular meeting at Moira Secondary School. The "Beautify Belleville" campaign will be a long term project, undertaken in co-operation with the city's Parks Board, Mr. Smith said.

To help get the project under way, the guest speaker, Mr. Harry Rumble, City Arborist from Hamilton, told the society how Hamilton's Beautification committee works. Every year the committee hands out 400 trillium awards to owners of well-maintained properties. The awards have made the trillium synonymous with Hamilton.

The committee holds three contests a year at the peak blooming seasons of mid-May, mid-July, and August 15, the speaker explained. After an intensive advertising campaign in newspapers and on radio, coupons are printed in the paper. People clip these coupons and use them to nominate friends and neighbors for the award. Members of the beautification committee judge the entries. Home owners can win the metal trillium lawn marker for two years in a row. On their third win they are awarded a certificate of merit. Besides the 400 trilliums awarded to individuals, two industrial and three or four block awards are made each year.

AROUSE COMPETITION

"The trillium awards have aroused competition among home owners and raised the standards of property maintenance in Hamilton," said Mr. Rumble. To keep standards high the beautification committee runs a school for judges and prints pamphlets on garden care. It sponsors Arbor-day tree-planting ceremonies in Hamilton's schools.

Hamilton's Streets and Sanitation Department sponsors and finances the beautification committee. Two-thirds of the committee's $3,200 a year budget is spent on advertising and awards, the rest pays for the awards.

SLIDES SHOWN

Mr. Rumble showed slides of Hamilton's improvement projects, including traffic-island plantings and boulevard landscaping. He thinks Hamilton's beautification plan, in operation for six years, can be duplicated in Belleville at moderate cost. "Remember," the speaker concluded, "a clean beautiful city is also a fire-safe city."

Mr. Rumble was introduced by Alderman Enos David and thanked by Mr. Smith.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Gordon Miller displayed his collection of driftwood sculpture and hand-carved woods from all parts of the world.

SHOE CARE ADVISED

MONTREAL (CP) — Winter boots should be cleaned and polished, stuffed with paper or shoe-trees, and put away somewhere other than in a hot attic or damp basement for the summer, says the Shoe Information Bureau of Canada here. The bureau warns also that shoes need air, and so should not be kept for months at a time in plastic bags.

100th Birthday Occasion For 'At Home' Celebration

DEAR DORIS — The grand old man of our town (in Nova Scotia) will celebrate his 100th birthday next month.

Could you please send me some ideas as to how to celebrate this splendid occasion? He is quite active yet, goes to the store a few times a day, etc. — GRANDDAUGHTER.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR GRANDDAUGHTER — Have an "At Home." Folks will want to shake his hand and ask him how he does it. Newspapers will want to take his picture. Friends and family will want to help with refreshments, so let them.

If there's a presentation, make it when most of the come-and-goers are still there. He or his eldest son could respond. Take the grand old man himself into consultation about arrangements, and be sure the timing provides for relaxing between shifts.

Write to the governor-general, the prime minister, the provincial premier and the lieutenant-governor for congratulations. And let me add mine.

DEAR DAUGHTER — My daughter has left home and is living in an apartment by herself because her father told an old fool to go home to his wife and leave my daughter alone. She met him at work and she was told by her boss to show him the work. That's how they met. I went to the apartment and here he was with his coat and shoes off.

His wife is an attractive woman. Can you explain just what is coming of the young women today? To know my daughter is involved with a married man close to 15 years older than her! Soon he will apply for a transfer and she will be left on the shelf like any old dusty dish. I'm so worried I feel like calling his wife. Should I?

I tell Anne if he can't be true to his wife how can he be true to Anne? Sometimes we say Anne is afraid of being left single, but God bless her she would have a good name. Money can't buy it. — ANNE'S MOTHER.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — With all the broads who inhabit the local high schools and theatres, it is a good thing to know that there are still some decent girls left.

Could you please tell me the names and addresses of the girls mentioned in the item "Two Boy-less Girls"? I would be interested in meeting some decent girls. — A DECENT GIRL SEARCHER.

DEAR SEARCHER — Elementary, My Dear Watson. But not through me. Behave like a decent boy and the girls who appreciate being respected will reveal themselves.

You can't tell me there aren't some really fine girls right in your own high school. How come so many so-called "broads" are showing an interest in you?

MIDNIGHT MANICURE

Dear Susanna: I was propped up in bed late one night giving myself a manicure when unfortunately, the bottle began to slip. As I lunged for it I still had the wet brush in my hand and I landed a glob of red polish on my good nylon nightie.

Is there any chance of getting it out without leaving a stain? Nor do I want to go and have something eat a hole in my lovely lingerie! — A. L.

MORE

Amazingly enough I have had marvelous results remov i g polish from all kinds of dainty unmentionables by using plain old nail polish remover. Like everything else of this nature you must be sure to test your particular brand of remover on an inconspicuous spot first, just to make sure these two are going to be friends. If the material in your gown and the liquid in the bottle respond to each other nicely then we are all set to go to work on the nail polish; and if you follow the directions below you will be able to remove all trace of color without damaging the fabric in any way.

First, contrary to most instructions, you should let the polish harden well for a day or two — otherwise, it seems to bleed or spread through the material when in contact with the remover.

Secondly, turn the garment inside out and apply the remover to the wrong side with plenty of absorbent cotton. Use a good piece of cotton to cover the spot itself. Keep turning these pads so that you always have fresh white cotton against the material on both sides. These will keep absorbing the pinky color as it is rinsed through the material by the remover. Wash as usual.

This is a very rewarding procedure, and your nightie should come out like new again. Night all, SUSANNA

Dear Susanna: This is from one who knows how frustrating it is to try and separate cold from hot bacon. Well a plastic spatula will divide them nicely without breaking the individual pieces. Just run it along under each slice. — Mrs. G. Trott

Unknown French Girl Gets Orders for Weaving

By PEGGY MASSIN

PARIS (Reuters) — Three years ago, an unknown French girl sat knitting in her attic flat near Paris' famous food market, Les Halles.

Today, the same girl — Mlle Michelle Lorano, better known by her trade name of Mathias — designs and weaves original, hand-made fabrics for Chanel, Givenchy, Balenciaga, and other well-known Paris couturiers.

She was discovered by Chanel at a time when her production was limited to one yard a day woven on a single small knitting machine.

Now, she employs eight expert weavers to fill the increasing number of orders for rich tweeds and textured woollen fabrics.

Malhia, a 27-year-old former actress who played small parts on the stage and radio, purchased a knitting machine in 1962 to add a few sweaters to her modest wardrobe.

Once she had learned to operate the machine she began experimenting with various stitches and different types of woollen threads. One day, she discovered an unusual weave with the lateral stretch of knitting and the surface interest of woven fabric.

CONTACTED CHANEL

Enthusiastic friends urged her to show her ideas to a Paris couturier. Malhia recalls: "I didn't know a single person in the fashion business, but like so many millions of other women, I revered the name of Chanel. So I telephoned the house."

She was instructed to leave samples. Within hours the Chanel director phoned to arrange an immediate interview.

Two patterns were chosen, to be delivered in four days' time. Malhia raced back to her knitting machine and worked night and day to fill the order.

One of these chosen, in black and red wool, became one of the most popular models in the next Chanel collection.

Malhia's fascinating weaves and textures are works of art — and proportionately expensive. Although she has no formal textile or design training, she does not find it difficult to evolve new ideas.

"I just sit down at the loom and think," she explains.

No nagging backache!

She used to be bothered by backaches and tiring. When she learned that irritation of the bladder and kidneys often went with backaches and tired feeling, she took Dodd's Kidney Pills. Smart girl. Dodd's Pills stimulate the kidneys to help relieve backaches and tired feeling that may be caused by poorly working kidneys. If you are bothered by backaches, Dodd's Kidney Pills may help you, too. You can depend on Dodd's.

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

Oven-Fried Chicken Quarters; Mixed Cranberries; Mixed Carrots and Asparagus (1" pieces); Mashed Potatoes; Tomato, Lettuce, Radish and Green Onion Salad with French Dressing; Grapefruit and Orange Fruit Cup; Oatmeal Muffins; Coffee.

ROAST LEG OF LAMB:

For a 5 or 6-lb. leg of lamb you may use one of the following methods: 1) Herbed: Cut deep slits in meat at 3" intervals. Fill each slit with ½ teaspoon of mixture of 4 cloves garlic, finely chopped, 2 teaspoons salt, 2 teaspoons oregano and ½ teaspoon pepper. 2) Stuffed: Ask your butcher to remove bone from lamb leg. Fill opening, without packing, with mixture of 1 chopped onion sautéed in 2 tablespoons butter then mixed with 3 cups soft breadcrumbs, ½ cup drained canned sliced mushrooms, ½ cup chopped olives, ¼ cup chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon rosemary or summer savory; fasten opening with long skewers or tie with string. 3) Glazed: During last hour of baking baste meat every 15 minutes with mixture of ½ cup undiluted consomme, ¼ cup peach or apricot jam, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½ teaspoon garlic salt. To thicken pan juices, remove meat, drain off excess fat. Mix together 1 tablespoon cornstarch and 3 tablespoons water and stir into pan juices over heat until thick and serve in sauce boat.

To Roast Prepared Leg of Lamb place fat side up on rack in shallow pan and roast at 325 deg. Fahr., allowing 35 minutes per lb. A 5 or 6-lb leg requires 3 to 3½ hours.

TO PAN-ROAST POTATOES:

Parboil potato quarters 5 minutes and drain. Arrange around lamb in pan 1½ hours before serving time, turning once. If you glaze the lamb, do not pan-roast potatoes — boil them and coat with parsley butter.

PERFECTION SALAD:

Mix 2 envelopes (2 tablespoons) unflavored gelatine, ½ cup sugar and 1 teaspoon salt. Add 1¾ cups boiling water and stir to dissolve gelatine. Then add 1¼ cups cold water, ⅓ cup vinegar and 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Chill until partially set. Add 2 cups finely shredded cabbage, 1 cup chopped celery, ⅓ cup chopped green pepper, ¼ cup canned pimiento coarsely chopped, and 1/3 cup sliced stuffed olives. Pour into an oiled loaf pan or mould which will look best on your prettiest salad plate. Chill until firm. Garnish with carrot curls and/or ripe olives.

See tomorrow for Walnut Apricot Torte.

SHOTS SAVE FATHER

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (CP)—When Darryl Behrman, 13, went on his first hunting trip, two elephants charged while his father's gun was empty. Darryl's second shot brought down the nearer beast eight paces from them, and Mr. Behrman reloaded in time to kill the other elephant.

Ann Landers

Individual Must Decide Smoking Issue for Himself

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Maybe I'm a nut but my blood pressure zooms about 50 points when I see my wife smoke a cigarette.

Although I don't smoke myself I know a lot of good people who do. I am not opposed to smoking on moral grounds, but some women look terrible when they smoke and my wife looks worse than most.

ANN LANDERS

Ethel talks when she smokes. The cigarette just dangles in the corner of her mouth and she looks like a pool shark or the house man in a 21 game. When the smoke curls up into her face she squints her eyes and the mascara begins to run.

Ethel smokes filter tips. Sometimes she absent-mindedly lights up the wrong end of the cigarette and the house smells like the wind is coming from the packing house in Omaha.

I don't want to get into a thing with Ethel about her smoking, but I sure wish she'd quit. Do you think I have the right to ask her? — SPARKY.

DEAR SPARKY — Of course you do. And she has the right to do as she pleases. If a woman doesn't mind discoloring her teeth, fouling her breath, smelling up her hair, setting fire to a few hundred dollars every year, burning small holes in her clothes and the furniture, and finally, if she chooses to ignore the evidence that there is a link between lung cancer and cigarette smoking — well, that's her business.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I work in a warehouse. My foreman is stealing merchandise by the carload and it burns me up. I have seen him put the stuff in his truck twice. Others in this department have seen him, too, and we have talked about it but nobody wants to stick his neck out. If this man denied it and got off, it could mean our jobs.

It is no secret that the foreman has something going with the bookies almost every day. He bets the horses on three and four tracks all over the country — and not small amounts either.

My wife tells me not to be a hero. Her advice is "Keep your mouth shut and mind your own business." I wish I hadn't seen what goes on but now that I have seen it I feel like a louse looking the other way and letting him steal from a company that's been awfully good to me — and to him, too. What should I do? — CHICKEN.

DEAR CHICKEN — I am a great believer in keeping your mouth shut and minding your own business — but not in matters that involve criminal practices.

Keep your eye on the foreman. The next time he hauls out merchandise speak up. Tell him you've seen him do this before. If he doesn't put the stuff back make it clear you'll report him.

It's not enough to be for what is right and honorable. You must also be against what is wrong and dishonorable. Furthermore, you must have the courage to put your mouth up where your principles are.

* * *

Confidential to HATE MYSELF—It's awfully hard to "stand on your own two feet" when one foot is in your mouth. Only when you learn to exercise self-control and judgment will things get better for you.

* * *

Confidential to DON'T-KNOW WHAT TO BELIEVE — In the absence of better proof than you've been able to produce in your letter, I hope you will believe she is telling the truth. A woman doesn't have to run after a man to catch him — for precisely the same reason a trap doesn't have to run after a bear.

* * *

No teen-ager is as confident as he appears. Get clued in. Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Dating Do's and Don't" enclosing with your request 35c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

AWARDS ANNOUNCED

NEW YORK (AP)—Winners of this year's Grammy Awards, the U.S. recording industry's equivalents of the Oscars and Emmys, were announced Tuesday night. Told Windfall

Ontario Court of Appeal is investigating the climb of Windfall stock to $5.80 from 58 cents and its collapse to 80 cents last July.

The rise started on rumors Windfall had found ore on its property and dropped when Windfall said it had found no ore.

The commission is adjourned until Thursday when Mr. Campbell, who was suspended last Aug. 25 and later resigned as director of the Ontario Securities Commission, is expected to testify.

Mrs. Campbell said that on July 9 she and her husband spent the evening with Windfall President George MacMillan and his wife, Viola, and Windfall was discussed.

She said she got the impression the MacMillans "truly thought they had something."

She said that when Mr. MacMillan told her Windfall shares "could go to $5" Mrs. MacMillan added the shares "could go to $25" if diamond drilling on the property indicated the possibility of an ore body.

Mrs. Campbell said she shortsold 2,000 shares of Windfall the next day.

Asked what her short sale was based on, she answered: "Woman's intuition."

Criticism

which the work of this and other royal commissions could suffer."

The statement said its survey of MPs is a serious, scientific attempt to find out more about the state of bilingualism in Parliament and attitudes of MPs of various language groups to their role.

"Some of the questions in the survey have been said to be relevant. We believe that such criticism arises from a misunderstanding of the nature of the survey.

". . . A questionnaire is a research tool; it should be assessed in its entirety and not by isolating any of the component parts."

Commission interviewers asked 17 biographical questions and 62 questions about MPs relations with their leaders, parties and constituents. In addition they asked MPs to fill in a printed questionnaire indicating approval or disapproval of 30 general statements.

These statements included the following:

"Politics is a dirty game. The local party organization has had very little to do with getting me elected. The way an MP votes is always a true indication of the way he feels."

Outside the House Mr. Mandziuk and Mr. Korchinski said the commission was trying to defy the prime minister.

It was a case of "a commission created by the government that is above the government," Mr. Mandziuk said in an interview.

Mr. Korchinski said the commission was trying to divide Canada into two groups, ignoring those of other ethnic origins.

Speaker Sets Deadline For Press Galley Desks Being Taken From Corridor

OTTAWA (CP) — Commons Speaker Alan Macnaughton served what amounts to an eviction notice on the parliamentary press gallery Tuesday.

In a letter to Gallery President James Stewart, Speaker Macnaughton set July 1 as the deadline for vacating a corridor in the centre block of the Parliament Buildings where some 35 of the gallery's 128 members have their desks.

The corridor is an overflow from the gallery's main working room which Speaker Macnaughton proposes turning into a "hot room" with common facilities for writing and filing urgent news.

The letter marks the culmination of intermittent negotiations over several years with successive Commons Speakers about space for the gallery whose members are newspaper, radio, TV and periodical reporters who gather news of Parliament and government on a full-time basis.

Last October, Speaker Macnaughton suggested that the gallery switch its main quarters to the Norlite Building, a seven - storey, government-owned structure on Wellington Street just across from Parliament Hill.

MEMBERSHIP GROWS

In 1917 the gallery had about 30 members during parliamentary sessions and about 12 at other times. Membership has grown, particularly in the last 10 years, with the addition of broadcasters and more representatives of Canadian publications.

Despite use of the corridor outside their alloted quarters, about 50 gallery members have no desk space.

Gallery members pay no rent. Desks, filing cabnets, office supplies and telephones are provided free. Speaker Macnaughton has estimated annual cost to the government at about $100,000.

In his letter to Mr. Stewart Tuesday, the speaker reported he had received a letter from Works Minister Cardin saying occupation of the corridor by the gallery constitutes a serious fire hazard.

Speaker Macnaughton said: "I am left with no alternative but to direct that the corridor be cleared without delay." He was ready to give the gallery until July 1 to do so.

MAKES PROPOSALS

Speaker Macnaughton made three proposals for accommodating the gallery off Parliament Hill.

—He renewed his offer to arrange space in the Norlite Building. Gallery members would be expected to pay rent, probably $3.25 a square foot a year.

—Hanover Estates Limited, a Canadian company, had acquired property on downtown Sparks Street, one block from Parliament Hill, and was prepared to erect a modern building to be called the National Press Centre. Rental would be $3.75 a square foot a year.

—FP Publications, which owns seven Canadian papers including the Ottawa Journal, was interested in constructing a downtown building and would be prepared to reserve space for the gallery.

Speaker Macnaughton said that in the case of the Hanover Estates and FP Publications proposals, gallery members would work out arrangements with the principals.

Some press gallery members already rent downtown offices, using gallery facilities only for fast-breaking news.

VIEWS DIFFER

Membership has been divided over the idea of moving from Parliament Hill.

Those opposing a shift argue it would make working more difficult and break with tradition.

They also contend that to do their jobs effectively, they need ready access to Senate and Commons chambers and working space nearby.

Members supporting a move say it would remove any stigma of "free-loading" from reporters, give them more privacy and eliminate overcrowding.

Redistribution Commission Told by Election Board To Revise Whole Report

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario legislature's committee on elections and privileges has told the province's three-man independent commission on redistribution to revise its report completely.

The committee said Tuesday the commission's proposed redrawing of boundary ridings should be reconsidered in the light of public submissions prompted by the proposals.

It turned over to the commission a number of submissions already received and empowered the commission to call for further public submissions and to hold open hearings if it thought them necessary.

The commission's proposed redrawing of the boundaries would add nine new constituencies to the 108 - seat legislature.

Rodrick Lewis, clerk of the legislature and a member of the commission, said he and the other two members — Mr. Justice E. A. Richardson and Prof. K. Grant Crawford — will decide whether or not to conduct open hearings.

The redistribution commission, established in 1962, submitted an interim report the following year creating 20 new ridings in the suburbs of Toronto, expanding the legislature to 108.

In February, it submitted what was to be its final report reducing the number of ridings in the City of Toronto itself to 10 from 12, causing anguish among Toronto Conservative members — some of them cabinet ministers.

Elsewhere in the province one riding was dropped in the Georgian Bay area and 13 new ridings were created, for a net gain of nine.

Members of the legislature complained that the commission had carved out ridings in seat population blocks that took no cognizance of geographic divisions, traditional boundaries or social and economic ties.

The redrawing affected the boundaries of 89 of the 108 ridings.

Mr. Lewis said the commissioners should be able to complete their revision in time to submit a report to the legislature early in the 1966 session.

DON'T EXPECT VOTE

An election in Ontario is not likely until 1967, and in fact can be put off as late as 1968 if the Conservative government so chooses.

Legislation revising riding boundary lines and creating new seats will not become law until the house is dissolved and an election called.

Most of the 108 members of the legislature, plus county councils and municipal councils throughout Ontario, are expected to make submissions to the redistribution commission.

Allan Lawrence (PC — Toronto St. George), whose riding was cut up like a jig-saw puzzle, suggested at the committee meeting that the three commissioners had bungled the job.

SUGGESTS NEW LOOK

He said the commission should take a new look not only at their final report but also at the 10 new ridings created earlier in the Toronto suburbs. The whole province should be considered in the revised report, he said.

Mr. Lawrence said that just because the commission was a non - political body it did not mean politicians should accept its report without question.

"I don't think we should allow the term 'independent commission' to mask any sort of incompetence or any sort of a bungling job," he declared.

He said the commission's report seemed to be based on outdated 1961 census figures and demanded that more recent figures and population trends be taken into account in the revisions.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

TUESDAY, April 13, 1965

The Commons ended the throne speech debate and began a 12-day Easter recess. It resumes April 26.

A final confidence vote on acceptance of the throne speech was won by the minority Liberal government on a voice vote.

Social Credit Leader Thompson complained the CBC is spending money without the approval of Parliament.

Agriculture Minister Hays said the Conservatives lacked the imagination or guts to bring in solid farm policies.

Robert Coates (PC—Cumberland) called for a royal commission to study the infiltration of organized crime in the federal government.

Andrew Brewin (NDP — Toronto Greenwood) said the proposed formula for amending the constitution is too rigid to ever be used.

"Physical, Financial Nuisance" at Agassiz

Doukhobor Protest Camp Becomes a Shanty Town

By BRUCE LEVETT

AGASSIZ, B.C. (CP) — The Sons of Freedom Doukhobor tent camp, huddled at the gate to Mountain Prison, has been transformed into a shack town.

More than 350 residents, 150 of them children, spent a bitter winter gathering scrap lumber for siding and tarpaper for roofing. The shacks were built over the original tents, which were then torn down from the inside.

Wide sheets of plastic, once used to cover the tents, have been cut up for windows.

The shacks are surrounded by piles of sider blocks for use in cooking and heating. Coal-oil lamps hang from the ceilings.

The huts have no light, running water or — in an area where temperatures fell well below zero this winter—insulation.

The Sons pay no rent, taxes, hydro or telephone bills and—in defiance of building regulations—nobody took out a building permit.

Their water comes from sand points, hollow tubes driven into the ground with a pump attached to the top.

Privies, banned in Kent Municipality, dot the hillside behind the shacks.

Some of the men work on the surrounding farms, others go two or three miles into Agassiz or Harrison Hot Springs for casual work. The rest cut wood for the camp and work on the huts.

WAVE TO PRISONERS

The women cook and keep the shacks spotless and look after the quiet, neat children.

Others climb to the top of a bluff and, waving their embroidered scarves, signal to their men inside the prison.

It was to be near their brethren that the Sons, hard core of the Freedomite sect, trekked here 300 miles west from the Kootenay Valley in September, 1962. Since they, all 20 of the women inside the prison 75 miles east of Vancouver have been released. Approximately 16 of the men have returned to the community in that time.

There are still 80 men inside, serving terms for bombing, arson and nude parading that will keep them there for up to five more years.

The prison, built of fireproof material to house the Doukhobors, now is a two-unit affair. Half the institution contains Sons of Freedom; the other half is a maximum security prison for elderly or ailing long-term prisoners.

Since the death earlier this winter of Florence (Big Fanny) Storgoff, the Sons camp has been without a spokesman. The residents deny they have a leader and say all decisions are made communally at meetings in the plastic-roofed meeting hall.

Harry, a short, stocky painter who asked that his surname not be used, gave a one-minute interview:

"The health inspector came through last week. He counted 356 people. We make it closer to 388. There are 135 houses."

At this point a group of women walked up and shouted at him in Russian.

"I say no more," Harry said.

Reeve W. S. (Wes) Johnson, in office since last December but an eight-year veteran on municipal council, says the encampment is becoming a physical as well as financial nuisance:

"Their cars and trucks crowd the main road to the prison and they've spread out into the municipal gravel pit. All funerals have to travel past these shacks to reach the cemetery.

"I'd like to see them all moved onto taxable land. Take any community and drop in 25 per cent more people—none of whom pays taxes—and you'd have a disaster."

John Green, publisher of the Agassiz-Harrison Advance and son of Howard Green, former minister of external affairs, says there have been reports that municipal blasting in the gravel pit has thrown rocks through the Sons' homes.

ORDER MAINTAINED

Reeve Johnson says he has had no official report of damage, but municipal crews have done no blasting in the area for some time.

There have been few disturbances since the Sons moved in:

"Nothing on the scale we were used to in the Kootenay," says Cpl. Bob Carlson of the RCMP.

Cpl. Carlson, of Nelson, B.C., is a member of the D (for depredations) Squad.

"We work in plainclothes, ask questions and keep our eyes open. We're engaged in general intelligence work."

Soon after the Sons arrived, vowing to remain until the prisoners were all released, a hunger strike broke out in the prison. Some of the campers joined in. One prisoner died.

The only other incident was the blasting of a power pole, regarded by the RCMP as a ceremonial event marking the end of mourning for Big Fanny.

Reeve Johnson would like the Sons to move onto 40 acres of land, offered by the provincial government up the road near the cemetery. But it's out of sight of the prison and the Sons declared it unsuitable.

The Sons of Freedom, when Big Fanny was alive, said their future movements would be governed "by God." Now they have no one to speak for them.

COUNCIL DECIDES

Cpl. Carlson sees it differently losing control of the children. They seem to be assimilating into the community at large even quicker and easier than they did in the Kootenays. It stands to reason—some of the schools in the interior were basically Doukhobor schools. Here they're split up four or five to a class."

SHACKS REPLACE TENT — This ramshackle town is home for 350 Sons of Freedom Doukhobors who have gathered near Agassiz, B.C., to be near kinsmen under sentence in Mountain Prison for terrorist activities. The Doukhobors trekked 300 miles from the Kootenay valley in September, 1962, and spent a cold winter in tents until they could scrounge materials for shacks. SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

*(Ed. Note:—*Barry McCullagh who recently joined the editorial staff of this newspaper, spent a year in New Zealand covering the sports beat for his newspaper. In a two-column series Barry gives his impressions of sport "down under.")

By BARRY McCULLAGH

Sport in New Zealand is in such variety that if I cover all the essentials this column will be a masterpiece of conciseness.

Belleville's Alderman Frank Murray, who thinks there is insufficient emphasis on physical training in high schools, should visit New Zealand. He would find that Canadian schools just aren't in the hunt where organized sport and physical training schedules are concerned.

A young Canadian following the all-year round routine in New Zealand (or in Australia) would find it tough going. But he would enjoy it and likely find the academic side of life more attractive in consequence. If sport tends to be over-emphasized in New Zealand, the reverse is true in Canada. In between there should be a happy medium.

That New Zealanders believe in the concept of a healthy mind in a healthy body is illustrated in this comment by Auckland sports writer Terry McLean. Noting that the city's population will reach the million mark within years from now and that green areas for sport will be at a premium, McLean said: "It is surely indisputable that well-organized sport is of immense value to the health of the nation, and because a good mind is the sharper when it is housed in a healthy body there is irresistible force to the argument that sport should continue to be encouraged as the population grows."

It is no coincidence that this absorption in sport has much to do with the fact there is scarcely any major crime, let alone juvenile delinquency, in New Zealand.

"Down under," they play every sport under the sun—even softball and ice hockey (Auckland's two hockey teams consist mainly of Canadians living there). New Zealanders have a creed, "Rugby, Racing and Beer," which is a shrewd analysis of the country's priorities. A colleague's reaction to this was, "What No Sex?" Which makes him shrewder than the shrewd New Zealanders. But that's by the way!

In winter there's Rugby (British-style), Rugby League (a variation of Rugby, with fewer players), soccer, basketball, field hockey and skiing; and in summer, tennis, cricket, cycling, sailing, lawn bowling, canoeing, swimming, rowing, squash and, of course, athletics. All attract literally thousands of participants. Moreover, teams are constantly on the move to Australia or further afield. Soccer ranges to places like New Caledonia (French territory 1,000 miles to the north) and Fiji. The sport of Kings—horse racing—has a huge following, while fishermen enjoy some of the best trout angling in the world.

On Victoria Avenue the other day I saw two young fellows jogging along in red track suits. This is a rare sight in Canada, but commonplace in New Zealand. At all hours of the day, in stadiums as well as in quiet suburban avenues, aspiring champions go out for training runs. A Los Angeles sports writer put it this way: "New Zealand has 45 million sheep, 20 million cows and about 300,000 distance runners."

Every weekend in Auckland—a city of stunning beauty and 500,000 people—the place empties and those who are not at the beaches are engaged in their favorite sporting activity. Age is no barrier; at least three of the top players in weekly inter-club tennis for example, are in their forties. One is Davis Cup captain Jeff Ralson.

LEAVING THE CITY

Fern Gascon, the likeable operator of the Memorial Arena canteen for the past four years is leaving the city.

Fern has accepted the managership of a branch of a Montreal cafeteria chain which he assumes May 1st.

He has made a lot of friends during his sojourn here, especially among the younger generation. He was very popular with members of the city's minor hockey clubs.

We always found Fern an amiable fellow with a fine personality and ability to make friends. We wish him the best in his new position as do his many friends here.

Habs Eliminate Leafs In 4-3 Thriller

By IAN MacLAINE

TORONTO (CP)—In the first four minutes of Tuesday night's semi-final game against Montreal Canadiens, Toronto Maple Leafs looked thoroughly capable of getting off the floor to win their fourth straight Stanley Cup.

CLAUDE PROVOST

Nearly four hours later they were dead, shot down by Claude Provost's lashing backhander that gave Canadiens a 4-3 victory and a berth in the cup finals for the first time in five years.

Provost's ankle-high drive at 16:33 of the first overtime period gave the Canadiens a 4-2 edge in games in the best-of-seven series and climaxed an evening in which the clubs dramatically took turns domi nating each other.

It began with a scoring flurry that set two Stanley Cup records in which the Leafs grabbed a 3-1 lead in the space of barely three minutes, humiliating Canadiens' vaunted power play by getting two of their goals while shorthanded.

Then, gradually, the brilliant goaltending of Lorne (Gump) Worsley blunted Toronto's edge and Canadiens, taking relentless advantage of Leaf penalties, wiped out the lead while their opponents lapsed into the fatal inconsistency that marked their descent to fourth place during the National Hockey League schedule.

JACQUES LAPERRIERE

The Leafs' last stand came in the overtime period, and again it was Worsley's acrobatic performances that robbed them of victory as they hemmed the Montrealers in their own end. Then Henri Richard grabbed a loose puck behind the Toronto net, passed out to Provost and it was all over.

Canadiens were playing five men to four when Dave Keon opened the scoring at 2:10, slicing a sharply-angled shot past Worsley. Red Kelly's breakaway made it 2-0 61 seconds later with Toronto defenceman Bobby Baun off for charging. John Ferguson scored Montreal's first goal 21 seconds later with Baun still in the box.

Just 17 seconds later, with the teams even, Toronto rookie Ron Ellis drove home Frank Mahovlich's rebound to make it 3-1.

The four goals in 99 seconds wiped out the previous record of 104, set in 1942 by Toronto and Detroit Red Wings. The 39-second span covering the last three broke the old mark of 45 set in another Toronto-Detroit game in 1934.

GUMP SHARPENS UP

But Worsley, who had looked sluggish in covering on Keon's goal, sharpened as the game progressed although the Leafs continued to carry the play for the remainder of the opening period. And it became obvious soon after the first intermission that his teammates had recovered their poise.

Then it was the turn of Johnny Bower, the Leafs' veteran netminder, who robbed Richard, Provost, Jean Beliveau and the other Canadian sharp shooters until Toronto penalties began to take their toll.

Defenceman Jacques Laperriere took advantage of one in the second period, booming a slapshot past Bower. Toronto goalie Punch Imlach conceded that it was the failure of his penalty - killers that cost him the series.

LAPERRIERE HURT

The flush of victory was somewhat dampened in the Canadiens' dressing room by the absence of Laperrire, taken to hospital after he suffered a fractured left ankle in the third period.

The angular sophomore defenceman went crashing into the boards behind the Canadiens net in the third period and it was first feared he had injured his head.

Laperriere tripped as he passed in front of Worsley in an effort to cover Leafs Bob Pulford and Ellis as they scrambled for possession of the puck.

"I haven't given a thought yet as to who will replace him," said coach Toe Blake. "But somebody will have to be brought up."

Toronto coach Punch Imlach was subdued as he spoke with reporters across the hall.

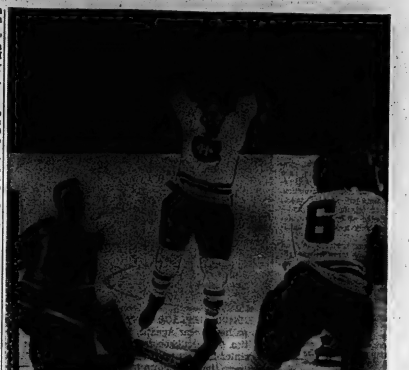
"Lady Luck just ran out," said Imlach as he flagured a blue suit. "This was the suit I wore for three Stanley Cup victories."

He emphasized that penalty-killing was the key factor.

SAYS 'NO EXCUSE'

"Sure, we only scored two goals on power plays, but that's no excuse for giving them 19 or 11 goals when they had the man advantage. . . .

"Last year we gave up only two power - play goals in 14 games. This series went six games. It was obvious out there tonight where we lost the series. That was the whole story."



But he offered no alibis. He wasn't deluded by the Leafs' seemingly inspired play in the opening minutes of the game.

"What did you expect them (Montreal) to do, roll over and play dead?"

Defeat hung heavy on the Leafs, most of them members of Toronto's three successive Stanley Cup championship teams of 1962, 1963 and 1964.

Most sat dejectedly or dressed hurriedly in street clothes.

The ageless Bower, who admits to being 40 years of age but is asserted to be well be yond that number, sought to hide his feelings by taking refuge among other players—away from inquisitive reporters.

THIS HELPS TO MAKE A RECORD — A jubilant Claude Larose of Montreal Canadiens leaps into the air as John Ferguson's shot goes past Toronto Maple Leaf goalie Johnny Bower during Stanley Cup playoff action in Toronto Tuesday night. The goal, together with three scored by the Leafs, went to set a record — four goals in a span of 99 seconds. Skating away from the goal is Ralph Backstrom (6). (CP Photo)

Hawks' Scooters Shoot Down Wings

First Shutout

By STERLING TAYLOR

CHICAGO (CP) — If coach Billy Reay seemed especially patient with Chicago Black Hawks' "scooter" line during the first five games of the Stanley Cup semi finals, it was probably because he knew they'd click when the chips were down.

Reay had refused to point the finger at the big production line of National Hockey League scoring champion Stan Mikita, Ken Wharram and Doug Mohns, although they had only accounted for two goals.

The "scooters" rallied Tuesday night, accounting for four points as the Hawks shut out Detroit Red Wings 4-0 and evened the best-of-seven series 3-3.

Wharram scored a goal and set up another for Mikita, while Mohns picked up an assist.

Phil Esposito and Billy Hay scored the other Chicago goals.

BULL DOESN'T SCORE

The late starters turned out to be Reay's ace in the hole because super star Bobby Hull, who leads the series with seven goals, failed to register in the sixth game.

Hull had practically carried the Hawks to that point, since Mikita, Hay and Esposito had only a goal each going into the match, and Wharram had only two assists.

But Reay was less than optimistic after the win.

"We played as well in two games in Detroit and lost. We'll have to play better to win on Detroit ice."

The seventh game of the series is scheduled for Detroit Olympia Thursday. The winner will meet Montreal Canadiens in the finals.

The shut-out was the fifth in Stanley Cup playoffs for goalie Glenn Hall, and his first in playoff action since 1962.

STOPS 33

And the man who won the Calder Trophy as the league's outstanding rookie while with the Wings during the 1955-56 season made 33 saves, including some spectacular ones to earn the shut out.

Only slick-skating Norm Ullman, who has scored five times in this series, came close to beating him. Ullman fired a 50-foot wrist shot from Hall's left in the third period and the veteran sniper nabbed it, then dropped it in front of the goal line.

Hall fell on it and was pushed over the line by Detroit forwards. However, the goal was disallowed.

Play was ragged during the early stages of the game, but although Detroit held a slight edge during the power plays—each club had two minor penalties in the first period—they were unable to zero in with a clear shot at the Chicago net.

Wharram opened the scoring at 3:18 of the second period and the Wings seemed to run out of steam although coach Sid Abel said "we didn't feel tired."

"It was anybody's game until they got the second goal," the Detroit coach said.

MADE IN THIRD

The Wings seemed to come back as the third period got under way but faded again midway through the frame.

It was then that the slick-scoring Chicago unit took over. Esposito and Mikita scored two goals within a five-minute span to give the Hawks a 3-0 lead. Esposito, who said he had been "feeling good for the first time this series," flipped a rebound over Detroit goalie Roger Crozier and Mikita, standing just to the left of the goalie, caught the corner on a pass from Wharram.

The Hawks showed complete mastery with less than five minutes remaining and Hay scored while Chicago played a man short.

Reay hustled his charges out of the stadium minutes after coming off the ice and the team boarded an airplane for Detroit.

WINGS TAKE TIME

The Wings were to leave at noon today for Toledo where they will remain until game time Thursday.

There were two minor injuries. Hull was struck "by (Ted) Lindsay's stick," the muscular, blonde jet said, and Detroit's veteran defenceman Marcel Pronovost was cut for nine stitches by a high-flying puck.

Doug Barkley, Detroit's towering defenceman who remained in Detroit Hospital after suffering concussion in Sunday's game, is expected to be back in action Thursday.

Will Take Braves To Court

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee County board voted Tuesday to initiate a federal court action against Milwaukee Braves of the National League "and other necessary parties" to have baseball declared a violation of the anti-trust laws.

The move is based on the enforcement of its contract with the club for Milwaukee County Stadium. The contract runs through the 1965 season.

The 20-3 vote authorizes the county corporation counsel to begin suit in an appropriate federal court "to recover damages which may have been sustained by Milwaukee County and-or injunctive relief by reason of violation of the federal Anti-trust Acts."

"Injunctive relief" could mean asking a federal court to block the proposed transfer, approved by the National League last year. It was delayed until the end of this season only after the county went to court previously to seek enforcement of its contract with the club for Milwaukee County Stadium. The contract runs through the 1965 season.

Braves' scheduled move to Atlanta after this season.

MANAGER NAMED

CALGARY (CP) — Hans Maciej, 36, a Calgary oil economist and sportsman, has been appointed manager of the Olympic '72 Committee, seeking to obtain the 1972 Winter Olympic Games for the Banff-Lake Louise area, it was announced Tuesday. Mr. Maciej, a founder of the former Calgary Olympic Development Association, was selected from more than 85 applications from across Canada and the United States for the post.

Bisons Blanked By Bears

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Hershey Bears scored an early goal, then forechecked energetically to shut out Buffalo Bisons 3-0 Tuesday night in Calder Cup hockey playoffs.

Hershey's victory tied the best-of-five semi-final 1-1.

Bears' goaltender Claude Dufour, in scoring his first shutout of the American League playoffs, had 26 saves to 21 for Buffalo's Ed Chadwick.

Pete Conacher scored twice for the Bears, shooting his second into an empty net after Chadwick had been withdrawn in the final seconds in favor of an extra attacker.

Conacher put the Bears ahead after six minutes of play, shooting in a goalmouth pass from Myron Stankiewicz. Bruce Draper made it 2-0 in the second period, batting in the rebound of Keith McCreary's shot when Chadwick was down. Conacher then scored again at the 9:31 mark of the final period.

Regina Registers Protest

EDMONTON (CP) — Regina Pats have protested Edmonton Oil Kings' 3-1 win Monday night in junior hockey playoffs, Art Potter, past president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said Tuesday.

Pats, who lead the best-of-seven Western Canada semi-final series 3-1, are protesting use of Harry Allan as coach to replace regular coach Buster Brayshaw, whose son was killed at Collingwood, Ont., during the weekend and a minor penalty to forward Greg Tomalty of Edmonton for cross-checking the Regina goalie.

Pats contended Allan was not registered and Tomalty's penalty should have been a major.

Giants Beaten Again

First Grand-Slam Wins For Reds

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Al McBean is off and running—just when San Francisco Giants thought they were.

McBean, the National League's Fireman of the Year in 1964, made his first relief appearance this season Thursday night and preserved Pittsburgh Pirates' 5-2 victory over San Francisco Giants.

His ninth - inning pitching stifled the Giants after they erupted for their first runs of the season in the previous inning.

It took a home run by Willie Mays to get San Francisco out of the scoreless rut that started with 10 innings against Pittsburgh on Monday's opener and lasted through 7 2-3 innings Tuesday night.

McBean, 26, promptly came on and induced Tom Haller to hit into a double play before striking out pinch hitter Ed Bailey to earn his first save of 1965.

In other league games, Cincinnati Reds whipped Milwaukee Braves 8-3 and Chicago Cubs stopped St. Louis Cardinals 3-1.

The Reds' grand slam homer highlighted Cincinnati's victory. The homer, the first of the rookie first baseman's major league career, broke open a tight game in the fifth inning. Coming off Denny Lemaster, it followed Vada Pinson's single and walks to Frank Robinson and Deron Johnson.

Johnson earlier drove in three Reds' runs. The Braves' Joe Torre, who homered twice Monday, singled and doubled, driving in one run and scoring two.

Rookie Roberto Pena clouted his second homer in as many days, leading the Cubs past the world champion Cardinals. Pena's fourth-inning blow came off starter Curt Simmons, who had retired the first 10 men he faced.

Pena walked in the sixth and eventually scored an insurance run on Julian Javier's wild throw to first. St. Louis tallied on successive doubles by Lou Brock and Bill White in the first inning.

Bancroft, Dresden Here Friday

Bancroft Legion Juv. have adopted Belleville Memorial Arena for their home base in the OMHA Juvenile "C" championship series this weekend.

Dresden and Bancroft are currently battling for the honors.

Dresden won the first game in the best-of-three tilt set by a 4-3 score in Dresden last Saturday night. However, they needed overtime to get the victory.

Bancroft will play the second game here Friday night, at 8.30. If the Legion lads can win, deadlocking the series, the third and deciding game will also be played here Saturday afternoon, at 2.30.

The game or games will likely be the final ones in Memorial Arena this season.

Quinte Hockey finals between SACO and Tye-Hasr, will be completed either tonight or tomorrow, and plans call for the start of ice removal on the weekend.

Beats Angels With Four-Hitter

Terry Makes Winning Debut With Tribe

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

The baseball season is just two days old, but Ralph Terry of Cleveland Indians already has reached his prime goal.

Making his debut with the Indians, the 29 - year - old right-hander pitched his first complete game since last July as he checked Los Angeles Angels on four hits for a 7-1 victory Tuesday night.

It was an impressive start for the hero of the 1962 World Series who was traded away by New York Yankees last October to complete the deal for Pedro Ramos and went to spring training with only one aim: "I'd just like to win one game, and go on from there."

Terry walked only one, struck out two and had a two-hit shutout until the Angels pushed across a run in the eighth inning. At one stretch he retired 14 batters in succession.

Elsewhere in the American League, Al Kaline drove in five runs in Detroit Tigers' 11-4 victory over Kansas City Athletics and Chicago White Sox made the most of Baltimore mistakes for a 5-3 victory over the Orioles.

Flood conditions postpone Ne. New York Yankee-Minnesota Twins game.

The Indians backed Terry's pitching with 12 hits, including a two-run homer by former Angel Leon Wagner. Larry Brown also drove in two runs, with a double and a single. Three errors by the Angels didn't help loser Fred Newman.

The Tigers put it away in a hurry against the Athletics, scoring seven runs in the first two innings.

Kaline singled across two runs in the second and slammed a three-run double in the ninth. Hank Aguirre got the victory with relief help from Dennis McLain.

The White Sox scored four runs in the first three innings with Brooks Robinson the goat for the Orioles.

Robinson's wild throw in the third inning enabled John Romano to score Chicago's third run and let Montreal-born Pete Ward reach third base. Ward scored the eventual deciding run on Ron Hansen's sacrifice fly.

Cilla Black First Female Beatle to Come to U. S.

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The British invasion continues apace.

The British have commandeered the theatre, captured Broadway and collected the record business. And look what's happening now: They're exporting female Beatles.

One, anyway. And if she's advance scout for more to come, maybe we'd just better abandon any resistance now.

The girl in question is called Cilla Black, which isn't her name at all, any more than Ringo Starr's is his. She's really Priscilla White, but by any name she's a beguiling miss with a quick smile and a burnt-orange "fringe" (British for bangs) that encroaches on her eyebrows. Her straight hair is bobbed.

A bit of wonder, she is: Cilla is engaged to do the impossible and break up the male hold on England's pop music industry.

BREAKS DROUGHT

"I did it with a number called Anyone Who had a Heart, and it was the first No. 1 song by a girl in three years or more," reported Cilla, who was on her first trip to the United States to perform on the Ed Sullivan show and Shindig shows. "Now there are thousands of girl singers in the business."

She got into it herself by accident. Born in Liverpool during the Battle of Britain, she grew up amid the spawning ground of the new sound in pop music. Working as a clerk by day, at night she prowled the cellar clubs whence came the flood of rock 'n' roll stars now dominating the record field.

One night she was listening in an outfit called Rory Storm and the Hurricanes, whose drummer was to be known as Ringo.

"They passed me the mike just for a giggle," said Cilla, "so I sang along with them. My friends were impressed, and I started singing with the other outfits around Liverpool."

When the Beatles hit it big, they mentioned Cilla to their manager, Brian Epstein. Epstein heard her, seemed unimpressed, but two months later started booking her all over England. The result?

"Girls were back in style," she said.

She is just beginning to make her impact overseas, and is returning this summer to play a date in the Persian Room of New York's posh Plaza hotel. What is she doing in the staid Plaza?

"I'm not aiming strictly at the pop field," she explained. "I actually do mostly ballads.

Power-play Habs' Gun

TORONTO (CP) — The power - play was the vehicle Montreal Canadiens rode into the Stanley Cup final Thursday night when they defeated Toronto Maple Leafs 4-3 in overtime to take the best-of-seven game set 4-2. But to those who followed the series closely it wasn't surprising.

With the exception of Claude Provost's backhand blast at 16:38 of the overtime, all of Montreal's goals Tuesday came with Toronto a man short while the Leafs, with five similar advantages during the game and a two-man edge at one point in the first period, couldn't dent the Montreal defences.

It was a trend the Habs started in the first game of the series with their first odd-man goal coming late that Toronto seemed powerless either to check or match.

Before they were finished the Canadians had rapped home 11 goals with an opposing player in the penalty box while the Leafs could only come up with two of their own.

And it wasn't for a lack of opportunity or because the Leafs were shorthanded any more often than the Canadiens. With the exception of misconduct penalties, each team picked up a total of 45 in the six games played with a difference of only about five minutes in time between the clubs.

20th Anniversary of War To Have Special Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Those doughty U.S. infantrymen of ABC's Combat have been crawling across France for three years now and excessively dramatic scenes have been gratifyingly rare and the story lines reasonably within realistic bounds.

The two television heroes who alternate in the leading roles—Rick Jason and Vic Morrow—usually look and act on the brink of exhaustion, are unshaven and totally war weary. Somehow each week they manage to escape unscathed and ready to attack the next machine-gun post or capture the next platoon of enemies.

In the course of their experiences a generally interesting program emerges, and it is one which does not make war seem like an attractive adventure.

Meanwhile, the 20th anniversary of the war on which Combat is based approaches and television will do something about it.

CBS has an ambitious anniversary show scheduled May 8, with its correspondents joining men from the British Broadcasting Corporation revisiting some of the memorable wartime scenes. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and his old comrades-in-arms, Field Marshal Lord Montgomery, will reminisce before the cameras about the long road from Dunkerque to Berlin.

Recommended Insight:

The Danny Kaye Show, CBS, 10-11 EST—with Gwen Verdon in her last TV appearance for the next season or so.

"Why should you switch to Food City?"

"PRICE HAS A LOT TO DO WITH IT. Our policy is to have the lowest food prices in town every day . . . Monday thru Saturday . . . week after week. Take a close look at the grocery prices below. Those discount prices are the same every day of the week. They are our regular shelf prices . . . (and they're only a small sample of the total number.) The range of savings shown are fact . . . not poetry because we constantly "comparison shop" the major chain stores. We don't stint on quality. You'll find all the top brands at Food City. Mrs. Miriam Wright, 30 Southwood Crescent, Belleville.

Food shoppers here, and across Ontario have found out about Food City savings. More than 30 ladies in six different Ontario cities made the Food City comparison shopping test. First these ladies shopped their regular supermarket . . . then shopped the identical order at Food City. In every case substantial savings were made by these shoppers at Food City. Every major food chain was included in the test. This week and every week you can save from 7% to 15% on your total weekly food bill at Food City.

Wilson Pledges Support To U.S. Viet Nam Policy

Says Britain Will Maintain Pound Value

By BORIS MISKEW

NEW YORK (CP) — Prime Minister Wilson Wednesday night reaffirmed Britain's "full support" of the American policy in Viet Nam and promised his government will continue doing all it can to help bring peace in Southeast Asia.

The prime minister made the pledge during an address before the Economic Club of New York, attended by 1,300 top businessmen and their guests who packed the grand ballroom of the Waldorf - Astoria Hotel.

He said during a question period following his hour - long address that he would like to see the countries concerned over the Vietnamese crisis respond to the initiative taken by President Johnson a week ago when he expressed willingness to join in unconditional discussions to resolve the situation.

The prime minister leaves today for Washington for talks with Johnson during which the Vietnamese conflict is expected to occupy an important portion of the meeting. He flies home tonight.

Wilson arrived in New York early Wednesday and a busy schedule which included a meeting with United Nations Secretary - General U Thant, a press conference, a brief visit with former president Truman as well as other meetings.

HAS BIG ROLE

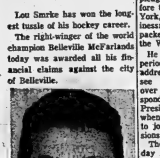
The prime minister stressed the growing importance of the Commonwealth which he said will have a big role to play in world affairs in the future, adding that Britain herself will have a mighty role to play in the reminder of this century.

Describing the Vietnamese situation as "a bit of a vicious circle," Wilson said Johnson's offer "was the beginning of breaking that circle."

In his address to the Economic Club, the prime minister reassured his audience of Britain's "unalterable determination to maintain the value of the pound and all the values that depend upon it."

Without specifically mentioning President de Gaulle, or his recent advocacy of a return to the gold standard, Wilson said this view "was effectively repudiated 35 years ago" in the writings of economist John Maynard Keynes.

He said also the world's monetary problems are too important and too close to "become a part of the small change of any undeclared conflict for leadership and power within the Western Alliance."



He promised the mobilization

Lou Smrke Awarded All Claims

Lou Smrke has won the longest tussle of his hockey career.

The right-winger of the world champion Belleville McFarlands today was awarded all his financial claims against the city of Belleville.

LOU SMRKE

Judge J. C. Anderson in a painstaking 21-page judgment, ordered the city to pay Smrke $1,827 for wages during his career with the city-operated world beaters in 1959.

The judge also stipulated that Smrke receive five percent interest on the money for every year since 1959.

In addition the city also must meet all costs of the judgment —totalling $630.

The case rattled the skeleton of Belleville's worst municipal scandal and banks back to the year — 1950 — when an appalled city discovered a corporate deficit of $416,858.

The judicial inquiry which discovered the debt was sparked by revelations that city funds directly supported the McFarland's hockey team. This contributed $157,000 to the overall deficit.

GIVEN GUARANTEE

Among other disclosures it was found the players had been guaranteed off-season employment by contract.

This was the crux of the whole Smrke case.

Like several teammates he had contracted to receive a $75-a-week job after the hockey season ended.

The municipal scandal erupted on the heels of the Macs' world triumph—leaving the players with hockey salaries still owing. Settlements were subsequently reached with the players after a special tax levy

46 Bills Given Assent

TORONTO (CP) —The Ontario legislature adjourned Wednesday for its Easter recess. It resumes sitting again April 27.

Third reading and royal assent were given to 46 government bills, including:

—An act to prevent strikes in hospital labor disputes by making arbitration compulsory;

—An act adopting the Red Ensign as the flag of Ontario, with the Ontario shield instead of the Canadian shield in the fly;

—An act raising the pay of legislature members to $8,000 from $5,000 and the expense allowances to $3,000 from $2,000 for metropolitan Toronto members and to $4,000 from $2,000 for out-of-town members.

Among bills expected to come before the legislature after the recess are a medical care insurance act, a bill to establish a system of community colleges in the province, a new child welfare act, milk marketing legislation and a revised liquor control act.

New securities legislation may be postponed until the next session. Legislation to implement attorney - general's committee reports on legal aid and ambulance services may not come up until next year. Electoral redistribution has been put off for a year.

In other business Wednesday, Robert Boyer, vice - chairman of the Ontario Hydro, told the legislature that waterways adaptable to production of electric power are becoming rare. He said Ontario will have to depend more and more on coal - fired generating plants and nuclear energy.

He said low lake levels have decreased the amount of power generated by hydro - electric plants.

James Auld, minister of tourism and information, introduced a bill to permit industries and individuals to take part in the province's centennial project, a $5,000,000 centre of science and technology to be built in a Toronto suburb. The centre is to be mainly government-financed.

Education Minister William Davis tabled the first annual report of the Ontario Council for the Arts, recommending an Arts Corps for Ontario. The corps would consist of professional painters, musicians, composers and writers who would train and try to inspire amateurs throughout the province.

SPRING RUN-OFF in the Moira River is at its peak as is indicated by this picture of water rolling over the dam at Cannifton. Bushland in the north is still covered by heavy snow but without rain the river is not expected to rise much higher.

Spring Run-off Is at Its Peak, Moira Breaks Banks in Flats

Fed by melting snows from the northern parts of the watershed, the Moira River is now close to its crest in its annual spring rush down to Lake Ontario.

Low lying flats and swamps in the O'Brien's Bridge area, north of the city, are flooded and thousands of gallons of water a minute are rolling over the dam at Cannifton.

But unless there is a heavy rain, the river is not expected to get much higher.

"There is still lots of snow in bushland in the upper reaches of the watershed, but we feel the run-off has nearly reached its peak," stated George Wishart, chairman of the Moira River Conservation Authority.

Snowfall and rain in the Moira watershed was higher last winter than for several years with the result that the annual spring run-off is expected to be a bit heavier and last a little longer than usual.

All this, of course, will tend to have a beneficial effect on water levels.

There is little thought of flood danger in Belleville at this date but it was a different matter a month or so ago.

River conditions at that time seemed to lend themselves to the possibility of a flood, but the annual spring break-up, aided by some precautionary work on the part of the city's public works department, went off uneventfully.

It was a different matter exactly one hundred years ago — back in March 1865—when the river ice gave way, ripping out houses, barns and sheds on on both sides of the river. An iron bridge was swept away and over 60 houses on the west side of the river were surrounded by water up to four feet deep.

A reminder of the Belleville flood of a century ago was forwarded to The Ontario Intelligencer today by W. R. Callaghan of Marysville, who enclosed a newspaper clipping telling of the damage and the number of families forced from their homes.

The last serious flood in the city was back in 1936.

Eleven Charged In Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — Eleven men have been charged with disturbing the peace and police are looking for the person who wounded a tool designer with a knife as the Canadair strike moved into the Easter weekend.

Police arrested seven of the 3,100 aircraft plant strikers Wednesday after a mass of pickets tied up traffic between the plant gates in suburban St. Laurent.

They were charged and released on $350 bail with trial set for April 24, the same day as four men arrested Tuesday on

Worst Is Still To Come Says Weather Bureau

Five States Ravaged, May Be Disaster Areas

CHICAGO (AP) — The overflowing Mississippi River swirled across the lowlands of Minnesota today on a downstream rampage forcing thousands of persons from their homes.

The Red Cross estimated that more than 31,000 persons were homeless in five flood-ravaged states.

At least 11 deaths in Minnesota have been blamed on the floods.

Melting snow and ice pushed the Mississippi and its tributaries over the banks in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, North Dakota and Illinois.

The weather bureau warned that the worst is still to come.

The Red Cross said 1,700 families were affected in Iowa, 4,811 in Minnesota, 75 in North Dakota, 364 in Illinois and 829 in Wisconsin.

President Johnson, after viewing the stricken area Wednesday, formally proclaimed Indiana, Ohio and Michigan—hit by tornadoes Sunday — as major disaster areas.

The president inspected the flood areas and tornado - torn regions on foot and by plane. After returning to the White House, the president granted the requests of the governors from the three states that the areas be proclaimed disaster areas.

WILL GET FUNDS

The action means federal aid funds will be available to the stricken sections.

The latest reports of the number killed in the tornadoes were 238 dead in Indiana, 54 in Ohio, 46 in Michigan, seven in Illinois and three in Wisconsin—for a total of 328.

The flooding already has caused damage estimated at $20,000,000 in Minnesota alone.

More industries were ordered closed and residents evacuated in St. Paul as the Mississippi began to force its way through the under emergency dikes.

In St. Paul and Minneapolis, the floodwatch was intensified as many feared that spans over the Mississippi as ice chunks and debris, roared down the river.

Officials dynamited the St. Paul Yacht Club when it appeared the structure would be swept downstream, endangering other structures.

A dozen or so other communities in Minnesota continued their own battle with the mighty Mississippi.

The Crow River appeared to be cresting at Delano with half the town under water. The Minnesota River receded and

Pearson Hopes 2,000 to Join Youth Company

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said today he hopes that some 2,000 youths will join the Company of Young Canadians, 1,000 of them to work in Canada and 1,000 abroad.

Mr. Pearson told a press conference the Company of Young Canadians will be one measure undertaken to help battle poverty in Canada.

He said the company will operate in northern Canada and "other areas" as well as overseas.

The first step would be establishment of an organizing committee under the secretaryship of Tarnon Edmonds, a special assistant to External Affairs Minister Martin.

Mr. Pearson said the government has ideas on the tasks for the company and how it should be organized. But it did not want to impose any "rigid pattern from above."

The director and permanent staff would be chosen soon.

Mr. Pearson said the Canadian University Students Overseas organization hopes to have 400 persons working in develop-

Bomb Red Viet Nam Stronghold 'From Dawn To Dusk'

From AP-Reuters

SAIGON (CP)—An armada of 230 U.S. and South Vietnamese planes bombed a Communist stronghold near the Cambodian border "from dawn to dusk" today in the biggest air raid of the Viet Nam War.

U.S. Army, air force and marine aircraft based in South Viet Nam were joined by Navy planes from the carriers Coral Sea and Midway and Skyraider fighter-bombers of the South Vietnamese Air Force. They dropped approximately 1,000 tons of bombs.

It was the first time U.S. Navy planes had gone into action against targets inside South Viet Nam. Previous navy raids have been made on North Viet Nam.

Planes from the U.S. 7th Fleet also carried out the first United States night flight over North Viet Nam Wednesday night. A spokesman said bombs were dropped or rockets fired because no targets were seen.

Radio Saigon said South Vietnamese fighter - bombers also were over North Viet Nam after dark and that they bombed a military camp.

At Da Nang, 360 miles north of Saigon, a military firing squad published reports that a Viet Cong terrorist who tried to bomb a hotel filled with American soldiers. A applause rippled through the crowd of 7,000 men, women and children as the young Communist slumped at the stake.

The terrorist, Le Dau, 24, showed no emotion as soldiers bound him to the stake in front of a sandbag parapet in the Da Nang soccer field.

Le Dau walked into the Grand Hotel in Da Nang April 4 with a transistor radio packed with two pounds of plastic explosive under his arm.

He left the bomb, set to explode in 15 minutes, in the hotel restaurant and walked out. When it did not explode, apparently because of a fuse malfunction, he returned and picked up the radio. A waiter followed him out and called a policeman.

Still awaiting execution is Nguyen Van Hai, 27, who drove the getaway motorbike in the bombing of the U.S. embassy in Saigon.

Hanoi radio has announced that the Viet Cong will execute an American civilian prisoner, Gustav C. Hertz, if Hai is killed.

There was no such threat in the case of Le Dau.

In the ground war, the Viet Cong Wednesday night set off some high explosives at a U.S. army ammunition dump in the coastal city of Qui Nhon, destroying six rocket containers and damaging a number of helicopters.

First reports from Qui Nhon said four U.S. Army air force "Huey" helicopters and two trucks were damaged in the blast. No casualties were reported.

The U.S. spokesman said the Viet Cong used plastic explosive, similar to that used in the recent blasting of the U.S. embassy in Saigon.

Guerrillas also attacked a government hamlet only six miles south of Saigon Wednesday night and then ambushed government forces as they rushed to reinforce the defenders.

Armed American army helicopters were sent to the scene in an attempt to beat off the estimated 30 to 40 attacking guerrillas.

A Viet Cong battalion attacked three battalions of government troops on the Quang Tri-Thua Thien provincial line, extreme northern South Viet Nam Wednesday. Six government soldiers were killed, 41 wounded and two armored personnel carriers burned out. Five Viet Cong were reported killed.

In another action, in Quang Tin province, five Viet Cong were killed and seven captured with no government losses when two battalions of government soldiers clashed with a Viet Cong force.

'Quinte Skyway' Name Of New Bridge Over Bay

Actual construction of the project has yet to be commenced, but the new high level bridge over the Bay of Quinte between Deseronto and the Bay of Quinte already has a name.

The name, suggested by Norria Whitney, M.L.A. for Prince Edward-Lennox and approved by the cabinet this week by Hon. Charles McNaughton, will be the Quinte Skyway.

Mr. Whitney said that after considerable thought he had submitted the name to the Department and received word this week from the highways minister that the name Quinte Skyway had been approved.

Mr. Whitney said the name appropriately located the structure as it will be the only high level bridge on the Bay of Quinte. And the fact that it will clear the water by a full 90 feet entitles the bridge to be called a skyway.

So far no date has been suggested for the completion of the bridge but its being put into use will have no effect on the operation of the Glenora Ferry east of Picton.

Mr. Whitney said the Glenora Ferry would continue to operate following the completion of the new bridge at Deseronto.

Perjury Counts Laid Against 3 Teenagers

Perjury charges have been laid against three Deseronto teenagers after their testimony two weeks ago in a careless driving charge.

Remanded for two weeks before Magistrate T. Y. Wills were Cecil Silver, 17, Donald N. Hill, 17, and Garnet E. King, 19.

It is the second time in recent months that Crown Attorney John Pringle has pressed perjury charges in local courts.

Prosecution of the Deseronto youths followed conviction March 25 of King identified by town constable Jason Field as the driver of a car he chased.

Both Silver and Hill claimed Silver was the driver of the car. Magistrate Wills refused to believe them, suspended King's Licence and fined him $25.

The trio were granted this morning's remand, at their request, to seek counsel.

"I may tell you I can't deal with the case anyway," said the magistrate, "because the alleged perjury was committed before me."

HAILS COMMENT

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—Dallas County Sheriff James Clark has sent a telegram to former president Truman praising him for calling Dr. Martin Luther King a "trouble - maker." "Your statement will do more good than any statement that has been made by anyone up to this time," Clark said. The wire referred to Truman's comments earlier this week in New York.

Judge Upholds Actions of Policemen

PETERBOROUGH (CP) County Court Judge Harry Dayman told a 12-man jury Wednesday it is sometimes necessary for policemen to break the law in carrying out certain investigations.

The judge was charging the jury which later acquitted three men on charges of conspiring to illegally sell liquor. The men were John Ramsay, 43, district salesman for Maherty Distillers; Ralph Tully, 42, and Edward Lacroix, 31, both beverage room waiters.

Judge Deyman was commenting on a charge by defence lawyers Don Bark and Harry Robertson that a policeman broke the law when he phoned the three men last Dec. 20 and tried to buy liquor. Mr. Bark had suggested three city policemen should "be charged with conspiracy to break the law" for their methods of trapping bootleggers.

Const. Ronald Crosthwaite testified the calls were to the men and was successful in buying a bottle of liquor from Lacroix.

Judge Deyman said in crimes where persons are not likely to inform against the police by the police, officers are "obliged" to breach their law by posing as drug addicts, bootleggers and the like.

similar charges.

Police are seeking the assailant of non - striker Douglas Wheaton, 42, a tally planner at Canadair for 17 years, who was stabbed in the thigh while passing through a group of strikers on the way to work.

He was given hospital treatment for his injuries and later released. There are 1,600 employees continuing on the job. The company said six other production lines are operating but at a "vastly reduced" pace.

WANT MORE MONEY

The strikers, represented by the International Association of Machinists, (CLC) walked off the job at 12:01 a.m. Monday in support of higher wages. There have been no violence and disorder union and management since although the union says it is prepared to resume contract talks at any time.

The company, a General Dynamics Corporation subsidiary, said it will "take every measure available under the law to protect its employees and property."

Canadair moved into the courts quickly, obtaining a temporary injunction Tuesday limiting picket to two at each of the two plant entrances. The move came after the union massed 1,000 at the gates on the opening day of the strike.

The company said it plans to obtain a restraint of the Dorval junction, which also prohibits pickets from intimidating or insulting company employees.

Prison Director Praises John Howard Society Work

TRENTON — The new medium-security penitentiary at Millhaven will prove added significance to the Trenton branch of the John Howard Society, branch members were told at the annual meeting in Trenton last night by David M. McLean, regional director of penitentiary services in Ontario.

Mr. McLean commented favorably on the work of the branch last year. Eleven men, released from prison, were aided by the branch in significant ways. Jobs were found for these men, and financial assistance where indicated. They were helped with family problems, and in some cases, provided with clothing. Seven of the men are working hard and showing signs of complete reform. Four have committed other offences and have returned to prison.

Mr. McLean whose job it is to select security guards and staff members for operation of the Warkworth prison, said 225 men would be employed there at a time when the prisoner population will be 450. The inside of the prison will comprise 32 acres and the grounds will be surrounded by a 12 foot chain link fence. There will be a central dining room, a gymnasium, a hospital area and workshops. Annual payroll will run to more than $2 million and a quarter dollars.

Mr. McLean said the prisoners will work at various types of industry, and receive a normal wage. Part of their salary will be carried on inside the prison is yet to be decided.

Speaking of the need for modern tendency to spend millions, "trying to get man to the moon, when man on earth need to live with his fellow man."

TRACES PENAL REFORMS

He traced penal reforms over the past three hundred years, from the time when man could be hung for stealing a loaf of bread to the present day realization that the offender's damaged personality must be repaired. He said man should leave a place of correction a better man than when he entered it, but admitted that criminals, with a long - established pattern of criminal behavior sometimes had the authorities "licked."

A classification board divides offenders into three categories: "dangerous," and requiring maximum security treatment; security risks who would probably not resort to violence and those who require very little in the way of restraint. These men will be transferred to the prison which will best handle their particular type. Some are sent to prison for life and may relatively free life while serving their corrective sentences.

Much is being done now to provide the offender with education along vocational or academic lines, and to keep him in touch with his family. Reminisces of part of their terms and parolee are being encouraged and the prison authorities, with the assistance of such agencies as the John Howard Society make every effort to hold the prisoner's family together on the outside and give the man something to come home to.

Scouting activities

DISTRICT COUNCIL

Monday night might have had for its theme at the regular meeting of District Council for Belleville the term "Not Enough."

First there were not enough of the groups represented, not enough for the executive officers present to report, not enough interest being shown in outdoor activities, not enough publicity for Scouting activities, not enough leaders in some of the groups, and not enough effort being made to get Cubs and Scouts registered on time.

Mr. John Flynn, campaign chairman for the United Appeal asked for more interest on the part of all participating groups in general and Scouting in particular in the upcoming United Appeal. He stressed the need for new blood in the workers' group and suggested a committee be set up in the District Council to consider how Scouting might better participate in and give credit to the United Appeal.

He was thanked for giving of his time by A. Glover, chairman.

After two new members had been introduced F. Pickering moved that the minutes of the March meeting be approved as distributed, seconded by H. Ocomore.

It was reported that the pamphlet "Fit For Adventure" had been ordered.

Mr. Lew Andrews reported that 318 boys had participated in swimming and life-saving instruction during March, the same number as in February. Scout George Mason is now the proud holder of the Gold Stage Life-Savers Award and Scout Ronald Bazuk is the holder of the Gold Stage Swimmers' Badge. Both boys are to be highly congratulated. Keep it up, fellows, we are proud of you.

Chairman Al thanked the group for being permitted to represent it, along with DC Art Forte, at the provincial conference and annual meeting and he then asked DC Forte to make his report. Choosing those interests and emphasis are focusing attention on Scouting and making training and preparation more and more necessary.

DC Forte was pleased to report that applications for three new ACMT's, two new ASM's and one new SM, had been processed. It was moved by A. Lewis, seconded by O. Owen, that registration for new leaders during the year be accepted as council's responsibility. Carried.

225 Cubs have already registered for weekend camps in June, so space at Sagonaska is at a premium. If you plan to use the facilities provided you must register formally with the camping committee. If you neglect to do so and are without camping space don't say we didn't warn you. This goes for Scouts, too. Some fertilising of the grass and planting of separating hedges will be done in the next few weeks to make the area even more attractive.

A news letter has been prepared by the district staff and will be forwarded to pack and troop Scouters as quickly as possible. If you don't get a copy check with your Group Committee chairman. If you have any gripes let your chairman know, or, if you don't know who he is, pass the gripe along to any member of District Council. We want to know what is wrong and needs attention. Only you can help to make Scouting in Belleville the best in Canada.

Mrs. Gelsthorpe read the report of the Ladies' Auxiliaries in the absence of President Bette Forte.

While certain regulations dealing with swimming and life-saving awards are being cleared through Wally Harper with National H.Q. Lew Andrews has been requested to continue with the testing and qualifying boys for these awards.

Camparee will be held in all probability the weekend of the 14th, 15th, and 16th of May, when co-operation of all Troop Scouters will be required if this activity is to be a success. A Cubaree is planned for later in the month. After further reports and discussions the meeting adjourned at 9 p.m.

Wilson

of Britain's economy "to meet the challenge of the modern world" and said this is the central theme and the central purpose of Labor government which was elected last October.

WILL DEFEND POUND

Wilson said Britain would strongly defend the pound, and he noted she had great overseas reserves to do it if need be.

Sterling is a citadel that will not collapse, he said. ". . . The foundations and walls of this citadel are strong" and "none should be in any doubt of our determination or our power to defend it against those who may be thinking in terms of an easy or cheap foray."

There are hidden reserves that have not yet been thrown into the battle.

Wilson estimated that Britain's overseas assets total something like £11,000,000,000 ($33,000,000,000). The vast bulk is privately owned—£4,000,000,000 are portfolio securities and £5,000,000,000 are direct investments. In addition, the government itself has a portfolio of foreign securities worth about £1,250,000,000 which "we regard as our second line of reserve, and are easily mobilizable."

"We have no wish to use these assets unnecessarily. But circumstances may arise . . . and might arise when some drawing on them would be justified. Meanwhile, they stand as backing to our currency, and supporting our determination . . . to defend it."

LONELY MAN FOUND SHOT

COLLETTE DI USSEUX, Italy (AP)—Battista Jansin, the last man left in this abandoned village 6,000 feet up in the Piedmont Alps, was found shot to death Tuesday. Police said he had taken his own life, probably from unbearable loneliness.

Hon. Kelso Roberts, Native Of City, Will Be Speaker

The April meeting of the Belleville Sales and Ad Club will be held at Columbus Hall this Tuesday, commencing at 5.30. For this, the last dinner meeting of the current season, the guest speaker will be one of Belleville's more famous sons in the person of The Honorable A. Kelso Roberts, member for St. Patrick Ward, Minister of Lands and Forests.

Mr. Roberts received his high school education here in Belleville and went on to study at Upper Canada College, Royal Military College and Osgoode Hall. He served overseas in 1917-1919 and with the Canadian militia from 1920 to 1934, retiring with the rank of Major.

Mr. Roberts has served as chairman of several select committees as a private member and as Attorney General, he also chaired two select committees.

During his tenure as Minister of Lands and Forests there has been a substantial expansion in the Junior Forest Ranger service where now some 1800 Junior Rangers...17 years of age, are engaged for two summer months in the great outdoors of Northern Ontario, working in Provincial Parks, forests, and other areas and are trained in conservation and fire protection as well as a general training in Canadian outdoor life.

Last year there were close to one million campers and over nine million visitors in the 88 Ontario Provincial Parks. The big Provincial business department deals in ever-increasing quantities with forest, fish and game and other natural resources of the province and the annual revenue from its various activities exceed 24 million dollars.

The subject of Mr. Roberts' talk will be "The Four Estates—What of Them?"
